POLL TAX REPEAL LAGS

Johnson Friend Leads In Texas Congress Race

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — J. J. Jake Pickle, Democrat and onetime political aide of Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson, went into a runoff for a U.S. House seat Saturday night. But his runoff opponent remained undetermined.

At the same time, voters smashingly defeated a proposal to eliminate the poll tax as a requirement for voting.

The count for the other place in the runoff switched frequently between Republican Jim Dobbs and another Democrat Jack Ritter.

GOP SECOND

Reports from all 10 counties in the 10th Congressional District, with 224 of 239 boxes complete, gave Pickle 11,318 votes, Ritter 10,040 and Dobbs 10,988.

The proposal to repeal the state poll tax trailed 204,099 to 133,993 with reports from 211 of 254 counties, 143 complete.

In three special elections for the legislature, returns indicated the Republicans had increased their membership by three to 12 in the 181-member body.

The vote on the poll tax was a major surprise to Texas leaders, most of whom supported elimination of this requirement for voting.

The 10th District race probably will be held in mid-December. The runoff is required unless one candidate obtains a majority over all others.

The GOP, enjoying four Republican victories in special congressional elections this year had its hopes behind Dobbs, who campaigned on a platform of opposition to the Kennedy administration.

Dobbs is 38, Pickle 49 and Ritter is 29.

Poll tax repeal received active support from the Texas League of Women Voters, Gov

U.S. Allows Leaves For Wiretappers

Rigging Phone Is Admitted For 'Eavesdropping'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department confirmed Saturday that two officials who have acknowledged that the telephone wiring in Otto F. Otepka's office was rigged for eavesdropping will go on "administrative leave" Tuesday.

The leave will be indefinite, an official said, depending on the termination of an inquiry by the department into the incident.

A department source called it a "complicated and potentially serious matter" and said the department will "move as promptly as possible" in the inquiry. He declined to say when it would be completed.

The two officials who will go on leave Tuesday—Monday, Veterans Day, is a government holiday—are John F. Reilly, deputy assistant secretary of state for security, and Elmer Dewey Hill, chief of the Division of Technical Services in the department's Office of Security.

Otepka, a veteran State Department security officer, was notified Tuesday of his dismissal on charges of unbecoming conduct. Among other things he had been accused of supplying the subcommittee with information from confidential employe loyalty files.

After the subcommittee made the three officials' statements public Friday, Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., a subcommittee member, called on the State Department to bring charges against them. Dodd said they had admitted in effect that they lied under oath to the subcommittee.

TFX Hearings To Hit Climax When Resumed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The stormy Senate investigation of the huge TFX warplane contract is to reach its climax in hearings scheduled to resume Nov. 19.

The Senate Investigations subcommittee is seeking to establish whether favoritism was involved when the TFX contract potentially the most costly in Pentagon history—was awarded last December to the high bidder, the General Dynamics Corp., Fort Worth, Tex.

Evaluations by the uniformed military had rated a rival design by the Boeing Co., Seattle, Wash., as promising a better plane at less cost.

TFX—tactical fighter, experimental—still is in the drawing-board stage, but the Pentagon has predicted it will be developed and mass produced for the Air Force and Navy as the world's best fighter-bomber at a cost of more than $5 billion. Some estimates by subcommittee members have run nearly to $10 billion.

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and his top civilian subordinates have sworn no influence was involved, insisting that the military evaluations were wrong. They testified their own judgment was that the General Dynamics TFX version would be operationally superior, would cost less, and could be delivered to the armed forces sooner than Boeing's.

Senate To Call Billy Sol Estes

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Senate investigators plan to call one-time Texas farm tycoon Billie Sol Estes next week for long-awaited questioning, informed sources said Saturday.

A Capitol Hill spokesman said hearings by the Senate permanent investigations subcommittee have been tentatively set for Tuesday.

Estes was the key figure in a farm scandal involving alleged improper manipulation of government cotton allotments and sales of fertilizer, but he never appeared before congressional investigators.

The subcommittee, headed by Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., wound up almost four months of hearings centered on the cotton acreage manipulations in September of last year, but kept the record open for Estes to testify personally.

Engine Forces Jetliner Down

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — A jet engine ripped off an Eastern Air Lines jetliner on a flight with 125 persons aboard Saturday and the DC8 plane made an emergency landing at an Air Force base here.

About 20 were taken to the Barksdale Air Force Base hospital for examination.

Dorothy Griffith of Springfield, Pa., received a back injury. She was walking in the plane about the time the engine fell.

OTHERS TREATED

Most of the others were treated for bruises and shock.

The jet, Flight No. 301, was en route from New York to Mexico City. It had taken off from a fueling stop at Houston, Tex., when it lost one of its four jet engines.

Capt. Mel H. French of Huntington Station, Long Island, N.Y., the flight captain, said the big jet ran into severe turbulence 45 miles south of Houston.

Reports were that a downdraft had torn off the No. 3 engine, or the inside starboard engine.

French said he decided to turn back and head for Barksdale, about 200 miles northeast of Houston because of crash equipment available here.

French reported a smooth flight to Barksdale. The plane circled the air base for about 30 minutes while T33 chaser planes went up to be sure the landing gear was in shape to land.

Another Eastern plane from Houston was due to pick up the passengers and fly them to Mexico City via New Orleans.

The flight carried 117 passengers and a crew of eight.

STUDYING 'ANTI-MATTER'

Soviets Working On Super Bomb

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet scientists probably are seeking a breakthrough in the field of "anti-matter" which theoretically could lead to a bomb with explosive power thousands of times mightier than today's most formidable weapons.

This is among other suggestions advanced Saturday in a review of "Soviet nuclear straegy," prepared by the Center for Strategic Studies at Georgetown University.

Director of the center is retired Adm. Arleigh Burke, former chief of naval operations. The Soviet strategy study was made by a 17-man panel of military men, scientists, university faculty members and writers.

In effect, the review is another round in the debate between Russia and the United States over American interpretations of a book published in Moscow more than a year ago on military strategy.

Last week the Soviet military publication Red Star denounced American interpretations of the Russian book. Red Star complained particularly about "vile fabrications" concerning disagreements among Soviet military leaders on military doctrine.

Burke, in talking to newsmen, said:

"One thing for certain is that the aggressive Soviets have neither changed their views nor their intention to use nuclear weapons.

"If they ever think the use of nuclear weapons will permit them to dominate the world, they will use them."

This view is reflected in a portion of the center's report. The suggestion is made that the Russians, now doubting that they can ever achieve anything more than a balance-of-power factor with existing weapons are diverting resources into far-advanced research, aimed at entirely new families of weapons.

Reds Charge Allied Traffic Only Tolerated

BERLIN (UPI)—The Communists said Saturday that Western Allied traffic to Berlin has no legal basis and is being only "tolerated for the time being."

They said the day will come when the Western Allies will have to conclude an agreement with "sovereign" East Germany to travel to isolated West Berlin.

The Communists outlined their stand on the Western right of access to Berlin in a commentary in the authoritative East Berlin newspaper Berliner Zeitung.

The statement was considered a challenge to the Western right of free access. However, Western officials refused to comment on it. They take the view that such attacks need not be answered because Allied traffic is no concern of the East Germans. But the East Germans said Saturday it does concern them.

POSSESSES TWO WIVES

Bogus Psychiatrist Confined For Tests

WORCESTER, Mass. (UPI)—A man accused of posing as a psychiatrist at a state mental hospital for nine months was committed Saturday for mental observation. Authorities also claimed he is a bigamist.

Harold E. MacMillan Jr., 33, who allegedly passed himself off as a psychiatrist at Worcester State Hospital as Dr. William M. Blackwell of Fargo, N.D., was arraigned Saturday on a charge of practicing medicine illegally. He did not enter a plea in central district court.

MacMillan was sent to Bridgewater State Hospital to undergo 35 days of mental observation. Officials said they learned he has been married three times and still has two wives.

Dr. Richard W. Nelson, assistant administrator at Worcester State Hospital, said MacMillan had been hired as a staff psychiatrist after his credentials checked out.

A real Dr. Blackwell does exist in North Dakota.

MacMillan was arrested Friday when he returned home from Europe following an extensive European honeymoon with his new bride, the former Carol G. Bengtsson of Worcester, a registered nurse at the hospital.

MacMillans' father arrived here Saturday from Portland, Maine, with Geneva MacMillan, the legal wife of Harold Jr.

Harold MacMillan Sr. said his son and Geneva, who have a three-year-old daughter, were married legally for the first time only last February. They previously had been married illegally because a prior marriage to Priscilla MacMillan of Des Moines, Iowa, had never been dissolved, according to the elder MacMillan.

After Priscilla obtained a divorce, MacMillan and Geneva went through another wedding ceremony, the elder MacMillan said.

Struggle Flares In Italian Party

ROME (UPI)—A power struggle flared up in the Christian Democratic Party Saturday and threatened to prolong Italy's dangerous government crisis.

The picture was further complicated by economic troubles Communist-led labor unrest and by the refusal of the Socialists to cut all links with the Reds if and when they entered a new government.

President Antonio Segni, who raced through the traditional consultations with political party leaders after stop-gap Premier Giovanni Leone resigned four days ago, had been expected to name Christian Democratic leader Aldo Moro premier-designate Saturday.

Senator Cotton Forsees Chance To Defeat JFK

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., was described by Sen. Norris Cotton R-N.H., on Saturday night at the man most likely to restore Republican strength in Congress if he gets the 1964 presidential nomination.

Cotton described Goldwater as "an extreme conservative" but said the Arizonan is a sensible man who would not be "way out there" if elected.

HEADQUARTERS

Cotton expects to open campaign headquarters soon for a Goldwater drive in the March 10 New Hampshire primary. He said on a taped television program he thinks Goldwater would have a good chance to defeat President Kennedy.

"I certainly don't guarantee that he'll be elected, though I have faith and believe he has a good chance," Cotton said.

"But elected or not, of all the candidates in my opinion he is the one who can bring into Congress some strong Republican senators and representatives from the Midwest, the West, the Far West, the border states and even the South."

Despite Cotton's assurances on Goldwater's conservatism, Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N. Y., said Goldwater still is too far out for him.

Sen. Clifford P. Case, R-N. J., another Goldwater critic, said that New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's positions on the issues of the day qualify him as "the kind of person our party ought to nominate."

Rockefeller has formally announced his candidacy and has started campaigning in New Hampshire. Cotton said Goldwater can't wait until January, as the Arizona senator has said he will do, to announce his intentions.

Rebels Rallying To New Regime

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Two hundred armed rebels of the formerly outlawed Social Democratic party have rallied to the new revolutionary government with all their weapons, the government announced Saturday night.

Recruitment of these fighting men, who have been campaigning against U.S.-supported government troops near the Cambodian frontier, raised a question as to how many guerrilla outfits labeled Communist Viet Cong by Ngo Dinh Diem's administration may have been made up of non-Communist foes of his regime.

Rainfall Light In This Area

Only .06 inches of rainfall was recorded by FFA at Selman Field here early Saturday while heavy rains dumped almost two inches on southern and western portions of the state as they moved ahead of a sweeping cold front.

COOLER

Cloudy skies will become partly cloudy this afternoon and tonight while evening temperatures edge downward slightly. Tonight's lowest readings will be between 44 and 48 while the daytime high is expected to range from 68 to 72. Saturday's high was registered at 72 degrees under cloudy skies and the low was noted at 56 degrees at 6 a.m.

Chilly winds will blow through the Twin Cities from the north today, at speeds in the vicinity of 5 to 15 m.p.h.

NEW ORLEANS DOUSED

Rains, Winds Hit Louisiana Coast

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Heavy rains and high winds pounded a soggy section of the Gulf Coast on Saturday.

Thunderstorms with gusts of wind up to 65 miles per hour hit an area near the mouth of the Mississippi River.

Some minor flooding developed outside New Orleans.

New Orleans was doused by 2 inches of rain. More than an inch splashed down in Lake Charles, Baton Rouge and Lafayette in Louisiana and Biloxi in Mississippi.

TAPERS OFF

Rains tapered off in eastern Texas after a downpour that measured 4.39 inches in Port Arthur.

Fifteen-foot waves and winds with gusts of 50 m.p.h. hurled a shrimp boat, the Princess, over a jetty at Sabine, Tex. Coastguardmen took off the two men who were aboard.

A Coast Guard cutter went to the rescue of another shrimp boat, the Miss Caroline, that was sinking 10 miles northeast of Galveston in the Gulf of Mexico.

Wind and waves subsided during the day.

Rain fell again in eastern New York and New England. The fall measured more than an inch in Boston and Portland, Maine.

Gem Robbers To Lose Much Of Loot Value

NEW YORK (AP) — The gem robbers who escaped with between $1 and $3 million in jewelry Friday, could lose up to 80 per cent of the loot's face value in selling it.

A veteran diamond cutter who declined quotation by name, said, "If the tones were finished and set, they will lose almost all of their value."

He estimated that a stone worth $1,000 would eventually bring the robbers only about $200.

The cutter, who said he had been in the business for almost 25 years, works for the firm of Joseph B. Erdman, Specialists, Diamond Cutters and Polishers, Manhattan.

LUSH VOTE PASTURE

GOP Looking Away Toward Dixie Land

CHARLESTON, S. C. (AP) — Republicans took their campaign crayons this week and colored the South gold—the land of opportunity for 1964, the target for an unprecedented drive to grab all Dixie away from the Democrats.

"Instead of writing off the South, we are going to take it," said Rep. William E. Miller of New York, the party's national chairman. "I think 1964 is our year."

If golden was the word, then Goldwater was the way for most of the Republican leaders from 13 states in a two-day strategy conference in Charleston last week.

Nearly all predicted a sweep of the South by the GOP if Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona is the nominee. Goldwater is highly popular in the South because of his conservative views.

The word conservative kept popping up in conversations here.

With this as their banner, the Republicans hope to capitalize on the South's simmering discontent over Democratic President Kennedy's stand on civil rights, fiscal and foreign policies.

Republicans, in their closed sessions Friday and Saturday laid out an intensive organizational drive at the Southern grass roots.

A key force in the Dixie push is Raymond V. Humphreys of Washington, director of education and training for the national committee.

"We are on the verge of picking up the entire South," he said.

Humphreys has helped build precinct organizations almost from the ground up in Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana and South Carolina. He has spent most of the year in the South.

Republican leaders, asked why their party is gaining strength in the South, always began their answers with something like this, "It's the conservatives hunting a home."

Mine Blast, Train Wreck Stuns Nation

TOKYO (AP) — A coal mine explosion and a triple train wreck killed or injured hundreds of persons Saturday, giving Japan one of its worst shocks since the fire and bombs of World War II.

Officials of the Mitsui Mining Co., said the death toll from the mine explosion reached 327 with at least 348 miners injured. No one knew how many others were still trapped in the recesses of the mine.

GIANT FIREBALL

Many miners who tried to reach safety in isolated chambers of the mine apparently were killed by a giant fireball touched off by the explosion. Deadly carbon monoxide gas also took a toll. The mine is located on the southernmost island of Kyushu.

The official toll in the train wreck was 155 dead and more than 60 injured.

The nation waited to see what the twisted steel of the train wreck and the blackened, shattered mine would yield. Police feared both would yield more bodies.

It was shift-changing time in the mine when the explosion occurred at 3:15 p.m. A giant fireball zoomed through the passages, burning miners and caus-

U.S. Authorizes Envoy To Begin Viet Nam Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department has authorized U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge to begin discussions with the new government of South Viet Nam with a view to restoring full U.S. economic aid to that country.

A department spokesman said no time has been set for the discussions but an announcement could come very soon.

Such consultations were contemplated when the United States granted recognition to the new South Viet Nam government this week.

To come under discussion would be reactiviation of the commodity import program which had been running to about $95 million a year and new agreements for shipment of surplus foodstuffs from the United States.

The spokesman said military aid, which makes up the bulk of all U.S. aid to beleaguered South Viet Nam, never had been shut off.

But economic aid, allotted quarterly, had tapered off in the last weeks of the government of President Nhu Dinh Diem, which was overthrown recently.

Under the commodity import program, the United States supplies South Viet Nam with funds to purchase necessary imports, such as iron and steel, fertilizer, chemicals and fibres.

The spokesman noted that the program is about a month and a half behind schedule, since the third quarter expired Sept. 30.

Despite Cotton's assurances on Goldwater's conservatism, Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N. Y., said Goldwater still is too far out for him.

Sen. Clifford P. Case, R-N. J., another Goldwater critic, said that New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's positions on the issues of the day qualify him as "the kind of person our party ought to nominate."

Rockefeller has formally announced his candidacy and has started campaigning in New Hampshire. Cotton said Goldwater can't wait until January, as the Arizona senator has said he will do, to announce his intentions.

Rebels Rallying To New Regime

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Two hundred armed rebels of the formerly outlawed Social Democratic party have rallied to the new revolutionary government with all their weapons, the government announced Saturday night.

Recruitment of these fighting men, who have been campaigning against U.S.-supported government troops near the Cambodian frontier, raised a question as to how many guerrilla outfits labeled Communist Viet Cong by Ngo Dinh Diem's administration may have been made up of non-Communist foes of his regime.

Rainfall Light In This Area

Only .06 inches of rainfall was recorded by FFA at Selman Field here early Saturday while heavy rains dumped almost two inches on southern and western portions of the state as they moved ahead of a sweeping cold front.

COOLER

Cloudy skies will become partly cloudy this afternoon and tonight while evening temperatures edge downward slightly. Tonight's lowest readings will be between 44 and 48 while the daytime high is expected to range from 68 to 72. Saturday's high was registered at 72 degrees under cloudy skies and the low was noted at 56 degrees at 6 a.m.

Chilly winds will blow through the Twin Cities from the north today, at speeds in the vicinity of 5 to 15 m.p.h.

NEW ORLEANS DOUSED

Rains, Winds Hit Louisiana Coast

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Heavy rains and high winds pounded a soggy section of the Gulf Coast on Saturday.

Thunderstorms with gusts of wind up to 65 miles per hour hit an area near the mouth of the Mississippi River.

Some minor flooding developed outside New Orleans.

New Orleans was doused by 2 inches of rain. More than an inch splashed down in Lake Charles, Baton Rouge and Lafayette in Louisiana and Biloxi in Mississippi.

TAPERS OFF

Rains tapered off in eastern Texas after a downpour that measured 4.39 inches in Port Arthur.

Fifteen-foot waves and winds with gusts of 50 m.p.h. hurled a shrimp boat, the Princess, over a jetty at Sabine, Tex. Coastguardmen took off the two men who were aboard.

A Coast Guard cutter went to the rescue of another shrimp boat, the Miss Caroline, that was sinking 10 miles northeast of Galveston in the Gulf of Mexico.

Wind and waves subsided during the day.

Rain fell again in eastern New York and New England. The fall measured more than an inch in Boston and Portland, Maine.

Gem Robbers To Lose Much Of Loot Value

NEW YORK (AP) — The gem robbers who escaped with between $1 and $3 million in jewelry Friday, could lose up to 80 per cent of the loot's face value in selling it.

A veteran diamond cutter who declined quotation by name, said, "If the tones were finished and set, they will lose almost all of their value."

He estimated that a stone worth $1,000 would eventually bring the robbers only about $200.

The cutter, who said he had been in the business for almost 25 years, works for the firm of Joseph B. Erdman, Specialists, Diamond Cutters and Polishers, Manhattan.

GOP Looking Away Toward Dixie Land

CHARLESTON, S. C. (AP) — Republicans took their campaign crayons this week and colored the South gold—the land of opportunity for 1964, the target for an unprecedented drive to grab all Dixie away from the Democrats.

"Instead of writing off the South, we are going to take it," said Rep. William E. Miller of New York, the party's national chairman. "I think 1964 is our year."

If golden was the word, then Goldwater was the way for most of the Republican leaders from 13 states in a two-day strategy conference in Charleston last week.

Nearly all predicted a sweep of the South by the GOP if Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona is the nominee. Goldwater is highly popular in the South because of his conservative views.

The word conservative kept popping up in conversations here.

With this as their banner, the Republicans hope to capitalize on the South's simmering discontent over Democratic President Kennedy's stand on civil rights, fiscal and foreign policies.

Republicans, in their closed sessions Friday and Saturday laid out an intensive organizational drive at the Southern grass roots.

A key force in the Dixie push is Raymond V. Humphreys of Washington, director of education and training for the national committee.

"We are on the verge of picking up the entire South," he said.

Humphreys has helped build precinct organizations almost from the ground up in Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana and South Carolina. He has spent most of the year in the South.

Republican leaders, asked why their party is gaining strength in the South, always began their answers with something like this, "It's the conservatives hunting a home."

Mine Blast, Train Wreck Stuns Nation

TOKYO (AP) — A coal mine explosion and a triple train wreck killed or injured hundreds of persons Saturday, giving Japan one of its worst shocks since the fire and bombs of World War II.

Officials of the Mitsui Mining Co., said the death toll from the mine explosion reached 327 with at least 348 miners injured. No one knew how many others were still trapped in the recesses of the mine.

GIANT FIREBALL

Many miners who tried to reach safety in isolated chambers of the mine apparently were killed by a giant fireball touched off by the explosion. Deadly carbon monoxide gas also took a toll. The mine is located on the southernmost island of Kyushu.

The official toll in the train wreck was 155 dead and more than 60 injured.

The nation waited to see what the twisted steel of the train wreck and the blackened, shattered mine would yield. Police feared both would yield more bodies.

It was shift-changing time in the mine when the explosion occurred at 3:15 p.m. A giant fireball zoomed through the passages, burning miners and caus-

U.S. Authorizes Envoy To Begin Viet Nam Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department has authorized U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge to begin discussions with the new government of South Viet Nam with a view to restoring full U.S. economic aid to that country.

A department spokesman said no time has been set for the discussions but an announcement could come very soon.

Such consultations were contemplated when the United States granted recognition to the new South Viet Nam government this week.

To come under discussion would be reactiviation of the commodity import program which had been running to about $95 million a year and new agreements for shipment of surplus foodstuffs from the United States.

The spokesman said military aid, which makes up the bulk of all U.S. aid to beleaguered South Viet Nam, never had been shut off.

But economic aid, allotted quarterly, had tapered off in the last weeks of the government of President Nhu Dinh Diem, which was overthrown recently.

Under the commodity import program, the United States supplies South Viet Nam with funds to purchase necessary imports, such as iron and steel, fertilizer, chemicals and fibres.

The spokesman noted that the program is about a month and a half behind schedule, since the third quarter expired Sept. 30.

State Highway Progress Noted

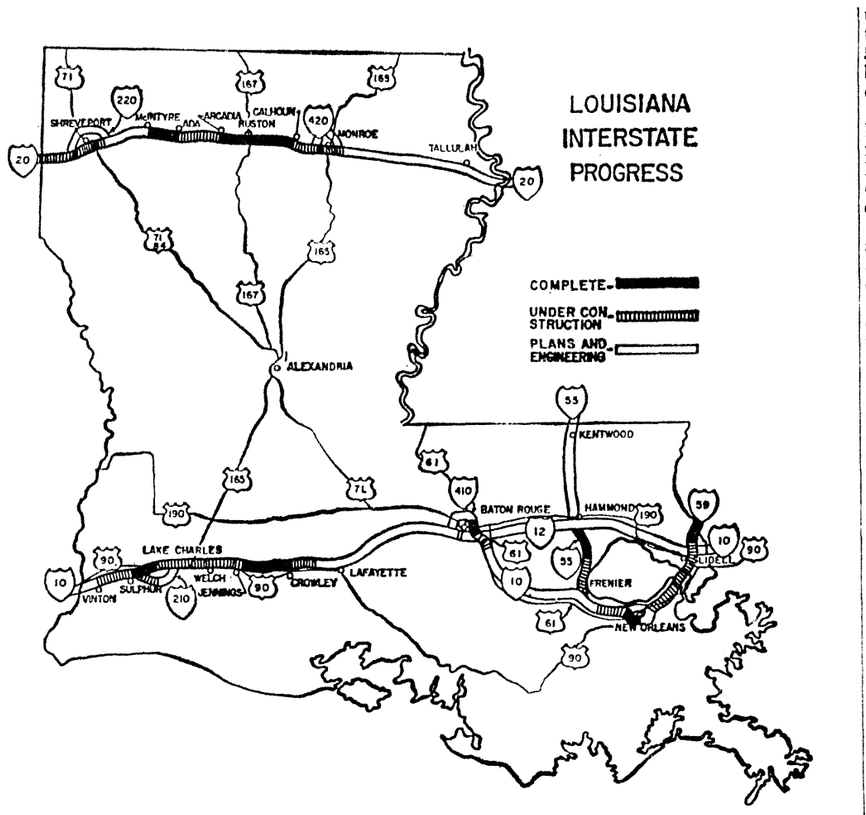
BATON ROUGE — Over $465 million in state and federal funds have been obligated for construction of Louisiana's 686 mile allotment of the national Interstate Highway System, according to Highway Director Ray W. Burgess.

Louisiana ranks third in the nation in the use of available federal funds. As quickly as the funds become available, they are matched with the necessary state funds and previously planned construction begins immediately. "We are building the Interstate System as quickly as time and funds will permit," Burgess said recently. "We plan far into the future, and begin construction where it is most needed as soon as we receive authorization for the obligation of funds."

To date, over 105 miles of the system is open to traffic, with another 170 miles under construction and the remaining 411 miles in the right - of - way acquisition and engineering stages.

Burgess summarized Interstate progress throughout the state as follows:

Interstate 10, the east-west superhighway across southern Louisiana, has a western termius near the Texas line west of Toomey, the route parallels US 90 from the Texas line to Lafayette. Interstate 10 connects Lake Charles, Lafayette, Baton Rouge and New Orleans with cities to the east and west of the state. Interstate 10 is further served by the north-south Interstates 55 and 59 which form a network of superhighways to serve the New Orleans and Florida parishes areas of the state.



OUTLINING THE PROGRESS of the Interstate highway system in Louisiana, this map shows some 105 miles completed (heavy black lines) and 170 under construction. The remaining 411 miles are in the right-of-way acquisition and engineering stages. (Map by Louisiana Department of Highways)

INTERSTATE 10

Present Interstate 10 progress from west to east is as follows:

From the Texas line to Vinton, I-10 is still in the right of way acquisition and engineering stage. Plans are being made for Toomey to Vinton.

Vinton to Sulphur is a 11.5 mile segment, began July 1, 1962 and now 35 percent complete. It is being built for a contract cost of $5,869,925.

From Sulphur to the existing Calcasieu River Bridge, a distance of 8 miles, the highway is completed and open to traffic. Construction cost for this segment was $8,308,000.

Lake Charles: The Lake Charles By-Pass for I-10 is presently under construction up to Lake Street. This 5.5-mile segment costs $17,750,000.

Lake Charles to Welsh: In Jefferson Davis Parish, there are five contracts for a 24 - mile total construction length. These contracts amount to a construction expenditure of $16,888,683 and the five projects range from 14 to 50 per cent completion.

Welsh to Jennings? Begun May 15, 1963, a 7.03 mile link is under contract for $5,394,853.

From Jennings to Crowley, 14 miles of I-10 was recently opened to traffic. Total cost of this construction was $10,770,000.

Work was begun in August on eight miles of the super highway between Crowley and Rayne, by W. R. Aldrich & Co. of Baton Rouge under a $5,139,625 contract.

A low bid of $3,051,852 was received October 30 for concrete pavement between Rayne and Duson.

From Duson to Port Allen at the Mississippi River, the Interstate is in the plans and engineering stage.

The substructure for the Interstate-10 bridge across the Mississippi River bridge at Baton Rouge is under contract for $10,264,296. Construction began May 10, 1963 and is in its earliest stages.

There are five other projects current along the Baton Rouge Expressway, part of which is of I-10 southward from Baton Rouge, and a segment of I-12 westward from Baton Rouge. These, with the bridge substructure included, come to a total contract amount of $30,669,764, and the projects range from those in the earliest stages to 95 per cent complete.

From Baton Rouge to Kenner, the present four-lane airline highway will adequately serve traffic needs until more urgently needed portions of the Interstate are completed. However, preliminary engineering work is being done on this stretch.

The Kenner to New Orleans I-10 segment, a 2.20 mile link in the vital New Orleans area superhighway, is now 27 percent complete. It is being built under a contract cost of 18,207,690.

CANAL BRIDGE

The Inner Harbor Canal Bridge superstructure was started in March, 1963 under an $823,804 contract to the W. B. Smiley Steel Co. This project is in its earliest stages. The approaches were begun in April of 1963, and constitute a 2.7-mile project being built by Boh Brothers under a $4,804,070 contract; the approaches are 5 per cent complete.

The Lake Pontchartrain 3 lane twin span bridges are nearing completion. This 5.4-mile project is of pre-cast concrete pile and slab construction. A high - level navigation span provides for the passage of boats, eliminating the necessity for a draw bridge.

Both approaches to the twin bridges are being built over hydraulic fills. The fills have been completed and bids will be accepted for pavement in the near future. The south approach, on the New Orleans side, is approximately eight miles in length, while the north approach runs about two miles.

From the end of this fill to its junction with Interstate 12 and 59 north of Slidell, Interstate 10 is under construction. From this point, I-10 swings east to Mobile and I-59 continues north into Mississippi.

From this triple junction, Interstate 12 will run west to Baton Rouge.

The four mile stretch from Slidell to the St. Joe Brick Yard on I-59 is under construction for $2,150,000.

From this point to the junction with U. S. 11 at West Pearl River, a four mile project was recently completed which included bridges over the West Pearl River. Cost of the construction was $3,800,000.

From West Pearl River to the Mississippi State line, including the Pearl River Bridge which divides the two states, the superhighway has been in use for over a year. Cost of the bridge was $345,000 and the 5½ miles of highway, which is broken by six smaller bridges, cost $2,900,000.

From the Mississippi State line toward New Orleans across Lake Pontchartrain, the Interstate superhighway will cost the state and federal government $35,855,000.

Burgess said that no construction has yet been started along the Interstate - 12 route except for a few miles in Baton Rouge. This highway, designed primarily for through traffic - eastward from Baton Rouge - is in the right-of-way acquisition and engineering stage. A total of $282,000 has been expended on right-of-way purchases for this link. A low bid of $5,005,815 was received September 25 for construction on Interstate 55, dropping southward from the Mississippi line to Tangipahoa north of Kentwood. From Tangipahoa to Hammond, plans are being prepared and right-of-way is being acquired. Plans for the I-55 interchanges with US 190 and I-12 at Hammond are now being made.

The Hammond by-pass for I-55, six miles of construction, is complete — cost $3,449,000. Eight miles from Ponchatoula south to the North Pass bridge has two lanes completed and open to traffic, and the other two lanes are under construction. Cost to date for this link has been $1,435,000.

From North Pass bridge to Frenier, where I-55 will intersect I-10, 14 miles of highway are under construction for $1,825,600.

Construction costs on I-55 for completed projects and projects under construction total $11,715,415. Over $1-million has been spent for right-of-way with a great deal more to be acquired from the Mississippi State line south to Hammond.

INTERSTATE 20

Interstate - 20 skirting through North Louisiana from the Texas line near Greenwood in Caddo Parish eastward to a point on the Mississippi River near Vicksburg, has progressed to within a year of being completed from Monroe to Shreveport.

I-20 projects are under construction from the Texas line through Shreveport. The first is 5.3 miles being constructed for a $3,685,174 contract amount. Two miles of this construction is 55 per cent complete, and 3.3 miles just started in June, is in the earliest construction stages. Work began July 8, 1963 on an interchange and railroad overpass just east of Greenwood at a cost of $2,189,939.

Work began in September, 1963 to carry this construction from the railroad overpass to Buncomb Road, just west of the Shreveport airport. The contractor on this 4.6 miles of pavement and grade separation structures was T. L. James & Co. of Ruston, whose bid was $2,510,718.

A low bid of $2,383,087 was received September 25 on the construction of I-20 from Buncomb Road to Curtis Lane in Shreveport, including the Monkhouse Interchange to serve the airport.

In Shreveport itself, the Expressway is well into its vast second stage of construction. From Curtis Lane, at the western edge of Shreveport to Hearne Avenue, work began July 8 under a $2,901,523 contract. This project joins the Hearne-to-Allen Avnue link in the Expressway started on January 29, 1963 and costing $5,773,225. Hearne to Allen is 17 per cent complete.

Allen Avenue to Spring Street, the major portion of the Expressway through Downtown Shreveport, was opened to traffic October 11. It was built under a $7,850,921 contract.

The Red River Bridge, a major segment in the Shreveport Expressway, is complete except for the deck which is now under construction. The substructure cost $1,094,600 and the superstructure was completed for $1,391,400. Approches for the bridge are now under construction for contract amounts totalling $5,163,101. The approaches were started in January, 1963 and are 14 per cent complete.

From the bridge approaches on the Bossier City side of Red River, Interstate 20 final plans are being prepared out to Foster on the eastern limits of Bossier. Interstate - 20 will eventually join US 80 near the Gamm Road. Current planning calls for the temporary use of the present multi-lane highway from Bossier City to McIntyre, about five miles west of Minden where existing I-20 now intersects. The existing multilane from Bossier City to McIntyre, through not constructed to Interstate specifications, is capable of handling the traffic volume while construction proceeds in more congested areas. As soon as possible, I-20 will replace the Bossier to McIntyre section, however.

McIntyre to Ada: This link of I-20 is complete and in use to a point just northeast of Ada on US 80. Total construction cost was $10,511,685.

Ada to Arcadia: Being constructed under contracts amounting to $7,643,400. Work is approximately one half complete.

Arcadia to Ruston: Recently completed under contracts amounting to $9,145,800.

Ruston to Calhoun: The Ruston-Calhoun section is complete and cost $9,846,200.

From Calhoun, about 12 miles west of Monroe, there are four current Interstate-20 projects totalling 13.2 miles for $15,631,593 extending to Texas Street on the eastern limits of Monroe. Recently the new Interstate-20 Ouachita River Bridge and approaches were dedicated, and are now in use. These were built under a contract cost of $7,395,657.

For the construction from Texas Street to Nutland Road, a low bid of $4,730,170 was received from S & W Construction Co. of Memphis on August 28. This project includes the very important U. S. 165 interchange and work on the by-pass itself. This much needed by-pass is now under construction from Rilla to State Route 15. The Texas Street to Nutland Road Interstate project will bring this 165 by-pass from its junction with State Rouge 15, through the interchange with the Interstate and to its connection with Powell Avenue in Monroe. The by-pass continues out Powell Avenue in Monroe. The by-pass continues out Powell to connect with US 165 north, completely by-passing the city.

From the Ouachita-Richland parish line to the Mississippi Interstate 20 is in the right-of-way acquisition and engineering stages. Because most of it runs through rural areas, construction is expected to proceed rapidly once underway.

Jackson Police Make No Plans For Clergymen

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — City authorities said Saturday they have no special plans for five Detroit area Methodist Clergymen, one a Negro, who plan to attempt to worship in two all-white Jackson churches Sunday.

Chief of Detectives M. B. Pierce said, "We'll do what the churches want us to do"

Several Jackson churches have been the scene of arrests recently as bi-racial groups attempted to stage a "kneel-in."

Past practice has been for church officials to turn away bi-racial groups and arrests have been made when "kneel - in" groups refused to move on.

The five reported en route to Jackson are the Revs. Archur Rich, Negro pastor of John Wesley Church; Alfred Bamsey, associate pastor of Grosse Pointe Methodist; Charles E. Sutton, associate minister of Central Methodist; Paul Lowley, associate minister of St. Mark's, and Richard Raines Jr., pastor of Whitfield Church.

The two churches involved here are Capitol Street and Galloway Methodist.

State Highway Progress Noted

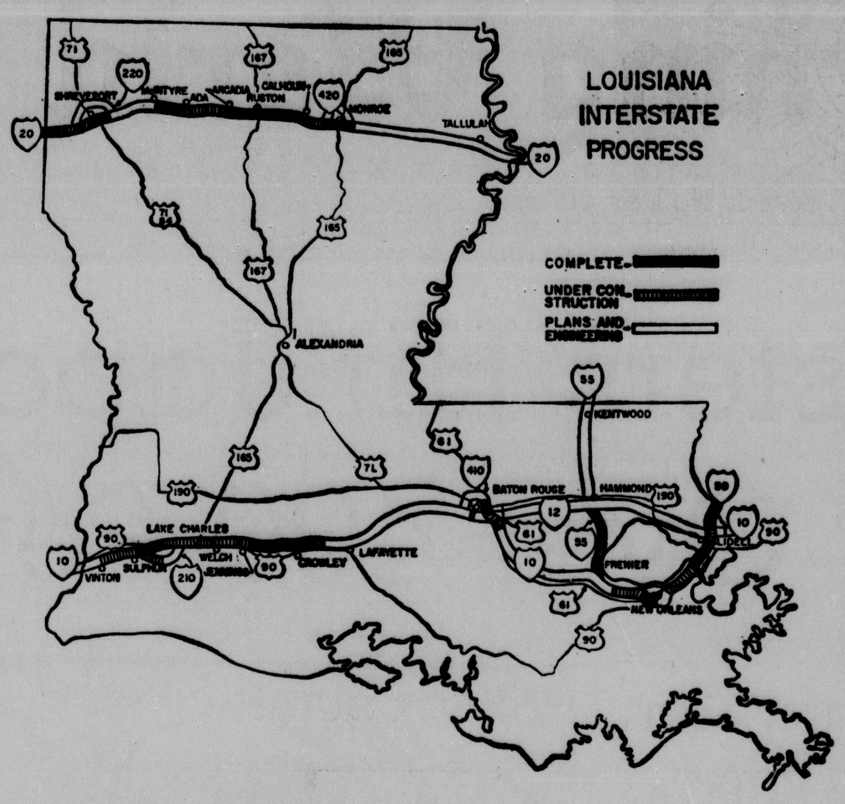
BATON ROUGE — Over $465 million in state and federal funds have been obligated for construction of Louisiana's 686 mile allotment of the national Interstate Highway System, according to Highway Director Ray W. Burgess.

Louisiana ranks third in the nation in the use of available federal funds. As quickly as the funds become available, they are matched with the necessary state funds and previously planned construction begins immediately. "We are building the Interstate System as quickly as time and funds will permit," Burgess said recently. "We plan far into the future, and begin construction where it is most needed as soon as we receive authorization for the obligation of funds."

To date, over 105 miles of the system is open to traffic, with another 170 miles under construction and the remaining 411 miles in the right - of - way acquisition and engineering stages.

Burgess summarized Interstate progress throughout the state as follows:

Interstate 10, the east-west superhighway across southern Louisiana, has a western termius near the Texas line west of Toomey, the route parallels US 90 from the Texas line to Lafayette. Interstate 10 connects Lake Charles, Lafayette, Baton Rouge and New Orleans with cities to the east and west of the state. Interstate 10 is further served by the north-south Interstates 55 and 59 which form a network of superhighways to serve the New Orleans and Florida parishes areas of the state.



OUTLINING THE PROGRESS of the Interstate highway system in Louisiana, this map shows some 105 miles completed (heavy black lines) and 170 under construction. The remaining 411 miles are in the right-of-way acquisition and engineering stages. (Map by Louisiana Department of Highways)

INTERSTATE 10

Present Interstate 10 progress from west to east is as follows:

From the Texas line to Vinton, I-10 is still in the right of way acquisition and engineering stage. Plans are being made for Toomey to Vinton.

Vinton to Sulphur is a 11.5 mile segment, began July 1, 1962 and now 35 percent complete. It is being built for a contract cost of $5,869,925.

From Sulphur to the existing Calcasieu River Bridge, a distance of 8 miles, the highway is completed and open to traffic. Construction cost for this segment was $8,308,000.

Lake Charles: The Lake Charles By-Pass for I-10 is presently under construction up to Lake Street. This 5.5-mile segment costs $17,750,000.

Lake Charles to Welsh: In Jefferson Davis Parish, there are five contracts for a 24 - mile total construction length. These contracts amount to a construction expenditure of $16,888,683 and the five projects range from 14 to 50 per cent completion.

Welsh to Jennings? Begun May 15, 1963, a 7.03 mile link is under contract for $5,394,853.

From Jennings to Crowley, 14 miles of I-10 was recently opened to traffic. Total cost of this construction was $10,770,000.

Work was begun in August on eight miles of the super highway between Crowley and Rayne, by W. R. Aldrich & Co. of Baton Rouge under a $5,139,625 contract.

A low bid of $3,051,852 was received October 30 for concrete pavement between Rayne and Duson.

From Duson to Port Allen at the Mississippi River, the Interstate is in the plans and engineering stage.

The substructure for the Interstate-10 bridge across the Mississippi River bridge at Baton Rouge is under contract for $10,264,296. Construction began May 10, 1963 and is in its earliest stages.

There are five other projects current along the Baton Rouge Expressway, part of which is of I-10 southward from Baton Rouge, and a segment of I-12 westward from Baton Rouge. These, with the bridge substructure included, come to a total contract amount of $30,669,764, and the projects range from those in the earliest stages to 95 per cent complete.

From Baton Rouge to Kenner, the present four-lane airline highway will adequately serve traffic needs until more urgently needed portions of the Interstate are completed. However, preliminary engineering work is being done on this stretch.

The Kenner to New Orleans I-10 segment, a 2.20 mile link in the vital New Orleans area superhighway, is now 27 per cent complete. It is being built under a contract cost of 18,207,690.

CANAL BRIDGE

The Inner Harbor Canal Bridge superstructure was started in March, 1963 under an $823,804 contract to the W. B. Smiley Steel Co. This project is in its earliest stages. The approaches were begun in April of 1963, and constitute a 2.7-mile project being built by Boh Brothers under a $4,804,070 contract; the approaches are 5 per cent complete.

The Lake Pontchartrain 3 lane twin span bridges are nearing completion. This 5.4-mile project is of pre-cast concrete pile and slab construction. A high - level navigation span provides for the passage of boats, eliminating the necessity for a draw bridge.

Both approaches to the twin bridges are being built over hydraulic fills. The fills have been completed and bids will be accepted for pavement in the near future. The south approach, on the New Orleans side, is approximately eight miles in length, while the north approach runs about two miles.

From the end of this fill to its junction with Interstate 12 and 59 north of Slidell, Interstate 10 is under construction. From this point, I-10 swings east to Mobile and I-59 continues north into Mississippi.

From this triple junction, Interstate 12 will run west to Baton Rouge.

The four mile stretch from Slidell to the St. Joe Brick Yard on I-59 is under construction for $2,150,000.

From this point to the junction with U. S. 11 at West Pearl River, a four mile project was recently completed which included bridges over the West Pearl River. Cost of the construction was $3,800,000.

From West Pearl River to the Mississippi State line, including the Pearl River Bridge which divides the two states, the superhighway has been in use for over a year. Cost of the bridge was $345,000 and the 5½ miles of highway, which is broken by six smaller bridges, cost $2,900,000.

From the Mississippi State line toward New Orleans across Lake Pontchartrain, the Interstate superhighway will cost the state and federal government $35,855,000.

Burgess said that no construction has yet been started along the Interstate - 12 route except for a few miles in Baton Rouge. This highway, designed primarily for through traffic - eastward from Baton Rouge - is in the right-of-way acquisition and engineering stage. A total of $282,000 has been expended on right-of-way purchases for this link. A low bid of $5,005,815 was received September 25 for construction on Interstate 55, dropping southward from the Mississippi line to Tangipahoa north of Kentwood. From Tangipahoa to Hammond, plans are being prepared and right-of-way is being acquired. Plans for the I-55 interchanges with US 190 and I-12 at Hammond are now being made.

The Hammond by-pass for I-55, six miles of construction, is complete — cost $3,449,000. Eight miles from Ponchatoula south to the North Pass bridge has two lanes completed and open to traffic, and the other two lanes are under construction. Cost to date for this link has been $1,435,000.

From North Pass bridge to Frenier, where I-55 will intersect I-10, 14 miles of highway are under construction for $1,825,600.

Construction costs on I-55 for completed projects and projects under construction total $11,715,415. Over $1-million has been spent for right-of-way with a great deal more to be acquired from the Mississippi State line south to Hammond.

INTERSTATE 20

Interstate - 20 skirting through North Louisiana from the Texas line near Greenwood in Caddo Parish eastward to a point on the Mississippi River near Vicksburg, has progressed to within a year of being completed from Monroe to Shreveport.

I-20 projects are under construction from the Texas line through Shreveport. The first is 5.3 miles being constructed for a $3,685,174 contract amount. Two miles of this construction is 55 per cent complete, and 3.3 miles just started in June, is in the earliest construction stages. Work began July 8, 1963 on an interchange and railroad overpass just east of Greenwood at a cost of $2,189,939.

Work began in September, 1963 to carry this construction from the railroad overpass to Buncomb Road, just west of the Shreveport airport. The contractor on this 4.6 miles of pavement and grade separation structures was T. L. James & Co. of Ruston, whose bid was $2,510,718.

A low bid of $2,383,087 was received September 25 on the construction of I-20 from Buncomb Road to Curtis Lane in Shreveport, including the Monkhouse Interchange to serve the airport.

In Shreveport itself, the Expressway is well into its vast second stage of construction. From Curtis Lane, at the western edge of Shreveport to Hearne Avenue, work began July 8 under a $2,901,523 contract. This project joins the Hearne-to-Allen Avnue link in the Expressway started on January 29, 1963 and costing $5,773,225. Hearne to Allen is 17 per cent complete.

Allen Avenue to Spring Street, the major portion of the Expressway through Downtown Shreveport, was opened to traffic October 11. It was built under a $7,850,921 contract.

The Red River Bridge, a major segment in the Shreveport Expressway, is complete except for the deck which is now under construction. The substructure cost $1,094,600 and the superstructure was completed for $1,391,400. Approches for the bridge are now under construction for contract amounts totalling $5,163,101. The approaches were started in January, 1963 and are 14 per cent complete.

From the bridge approaches on the Bossier City side of Red River, Interstate 20 final plans are being prepared out to Foster on the eastern limits of Bossier. Interstate - 20 will eventually join US 80 near the Gamm Road. Current planning calls for the temporary use of the present multi-lane highway from Bossier City to McIntyre, about five miles west of Minden where existing I-20 now intersects. The existing multi-lane from Bossier City to McIntyre, through not constructed to Interstate specifications, is capable of handling the traffic volume while construction proceeds in more congested areas. As soon as possible, I-20 will replace the Bossier to McIntyre section, however.

McIntyre to Ada: This link of I-20 is complete and in use to a point just northeast of Ada on US 80. Total construction cost was $10,511,685.

Ada to Arcadia: Being constructed under contracts amounting to $7,643,400. Work is approximately one half complete.

Arcadia to Ruston: Recently completed under contracts amounting to $9,145,800.

Ruston to Calhoun: The Ruston-Calhoun section is complete and cost $9,846,200.

From Calhoun, about 12 miles west of Monroe, there are four current Interstate-20 projects totalling 13.2 miles for $15,631,593 extending to Texas Street on the eastern limits of Monroe. Recently the new Interstate-20 Ouachita River Bridge and approaches were dedicated, and are now in use. These were built under a contract cost of $7,395,657.

For the construction from Texas Street to Nutland Road, a low bid of $4,730,170 was received from S & W Construction Co. of Memphis on August 28. This project includes the very important U. S. 165 interchange and work on the by-pass itself. This much needed by-pass is now under construction from Rilla to State Route 15. The Texas Street to Nutland Road Interstate project will bring this 165 by-pass from its junction with State Rouge 15, through the interchange with the Interstate and to its connection with Powell Avenue in Monroe. The by-pass continues out Powell Avenue in Monroe. The by-pass continues out Powell to connect with US 165 north, completely by-passing the city.

From the Ouachita-Richland parish line to the Mississippi Interstate 20 is in the right-of-way acquisition and engineering stages. Because most of it runs through rural areas, construction is expected to proceed rapidly once underway.

Then the residents returned with a complaint that the dead weeds smelled.

Jackson Police Make No Plans For Clergymen

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — City authorities said Saturday they have no special plans for five Detroit area Methodist Clergymen, one a Negro, who plan to attempt to worship in two all-white Jackson churches Sunday.

Chief of Detectives M. B. Pierce said, "We'll do what the churches want us to do"

Several Jackson churches have been the scene of arrests recently as bi-racial groups attempted to stage a "kneel-in."

Past practice has been for church officials to turn away bi-racial groups and arrests have been made when "kneel - in" groups refused to move on.

The five reported en route to Jackson are the Revs. Archur Rich, Negro pastor of John Wesley Church; Alfred Bamsey, associate pastor of Grosse Pointe Methodist; Charles E. Sutton, associate minister of Central Methodist; Paul Lowley, associate minister of St. Mark's, and Richard Raines Jr., pastor of Whitfield Church.

The two churches involved here are Capitol Street and Galloway Methodist.

AT NEVILLE TODAY

'Tosca' To Open Concert Season

The local community concert series opens this afternoon with the Goldovsky Grand Opera Theatre presentation of Puccini's ever-popular "Tosca" on the stage of Neville High School auditorium at 3 p.m.

Admission is through season membership in the Northeast State Concerts Association. Series tickets will be available at the door at prices ranging from $6 to $11. Northeast State College students are admmitted to the concert series on ID cards.

Now in its 18th year, the Goldovsky Grand Opera Theatre is making its 10th cross - country tour. Performances are in English and special techniques are used to make opera live and appealing to their American audiences.

Boris Goldovsky, the founder, is known to millions as "Mr. Opera" for his intermission commentaries on the weekly matinee network broadcasts from the Metropolitan Opera House in New York City.

Edward Alley, with the company since 1960, is tour director and conductor. He was musical director and conductor of the Seventh Army Symphony when it performed at the Brussels World's Fair in 1958.

Performing artists include Druscilla Lodge, soprano; James Wainner, tenor, and Sherrill Milnes, baritone.

Making her first tour with the Goldovsky Grand Opera Theatre, Miss Lodge joined the company after recent successes in Kentucky Opera Association productions of "Aida," "Madame Butterfly" and "Il Trovatore" in Louisville. A graduate of Indiana University, she received much of her vocal training and opera experience in Germany.

Wainner, leading tenor of the Brooklyn Opera Company and a frequent performer with the Little Orchestra Society, has appeared as soloist with the Cleveland Orchestra, Houston Symphony and the Washington Opera Society. He has made two cross-country tours with the Bel Canto Trio, in addition to summer performances at Aspen, Marlboro and Tanglewood Music Festivals.

Milnes, winner of a 1962 Ford Foundation Grant Award, won acclaim for his performances in "Andrea Chenier" in Baltimore two years ago. Making his third Goldovsky Grand Opera tour, he starred in "Barber of Seville" and "La Traviata" the past two seasons.

Several things are unique about the Goldovsky tour productions. First of all, "Mr. Opera" is well known for his extensive research in the field of acoustical scenery. Of special interest to music lovers will be the unusual self-supporting fiberglass ceiling which serves as a sound reflector and assures a perfect balance between vocalists and the orchestra.

Secondly, it is an iron-clad rule of the founder and musical director that no singer must ever watch the conductor in performance as this not only interferes with the dramatic action but undermines the performer's self-reliance and the more important auditory rapport with the pit. As a result, singers rehearse with their backs to the conductor.

Goldovsky's emphasis on opera's theatrical aspect has been at once cause and effect of his company's Opera - in - English policy. It is his conviction that only when an audience hears opera in its own language does it become fully involved in the action, stage business and character portrayal.

In the Goldovsky scheme of things, it is even more essential that the language of performance be native to the singer, for only then can he give a complete character realization to his role.

He also believes in using talented, good looking young people in his productions — young people who conduct themselves like romantic heroes and heroines.

HEART SURGERY

Downtown Monroe Celebration Slated

Jack Masur, president of the Greater Monroe Downtown Association, Saturday announced plans for downtown Monroe's 158th anniversary celebration to be held Friday and Saturday, Nov. 15-16.

This has been an annual affair, and a highly successful event in downtown Monroe for the past four years. Many activities surrounding the event lend a festive air to the celebration.

Store windows will be trimmed to tie in with the old fashion theme for the celebration. Employees will be dressed in colorful old-fashioned attire, and a costume contest will be held on DeSiard Street at 6 p.m.

Among feature events will be sidewalk bazaars. Merchants will offer outstanding values and specially priced merchandise from counters and racks displayed in the sidewalk in front of their stores, as well as inside.

Other events adding to festivities will be the Dixie Land Band on DeSiard, a clown walking the street and into stores, giving away balloons, and a Saturday morning movie for the kiddies. The movie will be from 8:45 a.m. until noon at the Paramount Theatre, and consists of cartoons and features.

Businessman Seeks Police Jury Position

Thomas W. Humphries, 49-year-old Monroe businessman and farmer, announces his candidacy for police juror of Ouachita Parish Ward 10

Humphries was born in Grayson, graduated from Columbia High School and has lived in Ouachita Parish for the past 29 years.

From his home and office at 3401 Byers Dr. he operates a diversified business which includes real estate building contracting, cotton farming, and the raising of Registered Polled Hereford Breeding Stock.

Humphries is married to the former Ethel Hammock of Jackson, Miss. They have three children, Ann, Linda and Tommy. He is a member of the First Baptist Church.

He is chairman of the Ouachita Parish Welfare Board, on the Board of Directors of the Northeast Louisiana Mental Health Association, and was state delegate to the 1962 National Mental Health Congress in St. Louis, Mo. He is immediate past president of the Ouachita Parish Cattleman's Association, on the State Livestock Advisory Committee of the Louisiana Farm Bureau, and is editor of the Ouachita Farm Bureau Reporter.

He is also a member of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, Ouachita Parish Wildlife Unit, Ouachita Parish Farm Bureau, Monroe Rotary Club, and is a Mason.

T. W. HUMPHRIES

Humphries issued the following statement in announcing his candidacy: "I have lived in Ward 10 of Ouachita Parish for the past 29 years and have learned to love our community and its people a little more each year. I feel that Ouachita Parish has a great potential for development and growth during the next 10 years. My past experience has made me aware of the needs of our people. This opportunity to serve on the police jury affords me a better position to aid in this development of our community for our people.

"If elected I dedicate myself to work honestly and diligently for all projects leading toward a greater Ouachita Parish.

"I feel that my duty should be first to the people and interests of Ward 10.

"I also believe that members of the police jury should cooperate with each other and other local governing bodies with one thought in mind, that is, to do what is best for our people in Ouachita Parish. This can and should be done, I believe, in harmony with the representatives of the other Wards.

"I will do my best to represent each one of you fairly and honestly. I will endeavor to co-ordinate the wisdom and experience of our older citizens with the energy and enthusiasm of our younger citizens to the betterment of our community.

"I will endeavor to uphold your confidence in me, and will appreciate your support and vote."

Diem Foresaw Overthrow; Inside Story Of Plot Is Given

EDITOR'S NOTE — The overthrow of the Diem regime in South Viet Nam was no spur-of-the-moment operation. It was achieved through months of supersecret but highly precise planning, and it went off like clockwork. Here is the detailed story by Roy Essoyan, Associated Press correspondent on the scene. He describes the principal figures involved, what they did and the prospects for the future.

By ROY ESSOYAN

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—"Every time an American ambassador goes away, somebody starts a coup."

The words were Ngo Dinh Diem's and they were probably the most prophetic he ever uttered.

Diem was saying goodby in his sumptuous cream stucco palace in downtown Saigon to U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, who was due to leave two days later for consultations in Washington on the mushrooming crisis in South Viet Nam.

The time was noon Friday, Nov. 1.

Barely an hour later the first crackle of rifle fire signaled the start of the coup that was to end Diem's dictatorial eight-year rule.

Less than 24 hours later Diem's bullet-riddled body and the body of once - powerful Ngo Dinh Nhu, were dragged out of the joint general staff headquarters of the South Vietnamese army.

In between, practically his entire army joined the meticulously planned and efficiently executed 17-hour revolt.

Many months before, Diem and his family had lost the loyalty of practically every segment of the population. The handwriting appeared clearly on the wall. The generals could read it. But Diem had always been remote from the realities of life.

He quit the priesthood in his youth because the Church was "too worldly" for him. He ruled he said, by a "mandate from heaven."

Diem's total aloofness from his people and the increasingly harsh rule of his brother and his brother's acid-tongued wife set the stage for their downfall.

The Buddhist crisis that erupted last May merely hastened it. It drove the Diem family to brutality and provided a rallying cry for national disaffection and resentment.

The coup was backed by practically every senior commander in the armed forces, and an outburst of popular relief greeted its final success.

According to information gathered from Vietnamese and Western sources, the plotters started meeting months ago. They knew each other's resentments and they did not have to gather in conspiratorial cellars or skulk down dark alleyways to evade Diem's secret police and an army of informers.

The first tentative plans were probably exchanged over a glass of cold trente trois, a popular local beer, after a few sets of tennis in the spacious general staff compound on Saigon's outskirts.

Maj. Gen. Tran Van Don, a key figure in the coup and now minister of defense, says the plotters discussed some details of strategy at La Cigale, a popular Saigon nightclub, and in the eighth floor bar of the swank Caravelle Hotel, innocent-appearing gathering spots.

"That's why we have been back there so often since the coup, to indicate our gratitude," he observes.

But the fate of Diem's regime could well have been sealed on the golf course.

Some time in the last two months, on the fairways, one of the leaders of the coup sounded out a high-ranking American on what the U.S. attitude would be toward a coup.

It was one of many soundings and previous to this one the American rejoinder had always been a "no comment."

But by this time the Kennedy administration had lost its final illusions about Diem's regime and the American told the Vietnamese general the United States would not object—according to the best available information.

U.S. and Vietnamese officials emphatically deny Americans were directly involved in planning and executing the coup. But there seems little question the United States encouraged the coup with official statements expressing disapproval of the Diem regime's repressive measures against the Buddhists.

More important, a progressive series of U.S. aid cuts convinced coup leaders of U.S. sentiments far more than words.

Without assurance the United States would not intervene in Diem's defense, it is felt here, the rebel leaders would have been foolhardy to attempt a coup.

The clockwork precision with which the coup was executed by Vietnamese generals led one American military expert to comment, "It shows the Vietnamese can run a pretty good war if political considerations are removed."

He was referring to one of the Vietnamese army's main grudges against Diem's suspicion-encrusted regime—that he held all the reins of military power, shifted military commands for political purposes and to protect himself from attack, and went over the heads of his top commanders in directing military operations.

Coup leaders also have said they were disturbed when Nhu started dropping hints he would rather make a deal with Communist North Viet Nam than submit to U.S. pressure for reforms and a streamlined nonpolitical war effort against the Communists.

"The coup was a masterpiece of planning and execution," one Western military expert says. "I've been told a detailed staff planning was involved in troop movements outside Saigon weeks before the coup, and within Saigon during the battle. Everything was memorized. Nothing was put on paper.

"Secrecy was maintained throughout by departmentalizing jobs, one man to a job."

Another expert comments: "They thought of all the little things that are so frequently overlooked in coups that backfire. They not only seized radio stations and telecommunications centers right off the bat, they even took over telephone switchboards that could have been used, as they were used the last time, to rally support.

"Gasoline allocations to commands outside Saigon—of dubious loyalty to the rebels—were reduced four days before the coup to prevent Diem forces from moving too many troops if they rallied to a palace call for help."

The pinpoint accuracy of artillery fire that reduced the biggest center of resistance in Saigon, the barracks and ammunition storehouse of the palace guard one mile from the palace, suggested the artillery must have been in position for some time before the coup.

Weeks earlier several large-scale military operations were launched north and south of Saigon. They bagged practically no guerrillas but they went a good way to get a lot of rebellion-minded generals together at one time.

The day of the coup the boundaries of the 3rd army Corps around Saigon were moved south to the banks of the Mekong River, removing the 7th Division from the command of a Diem political appointee to that of Brig. Gen. Ton That Dinh, a key figure.

This secured the southern flank below Saigon for the rebel cause.

The 5th Division under Dinh's trusted Col. Nguyen Van Thi protected the northern flank; Thieu, remembered for his loyalty, now has taken the rank of brigadier general and command of the 3rd Corps.

Dubious divisions such as the 21st on the southernmost tip of the delta and the 9th just above it were assigned to preoccupying engagements with the Viet Cong.

By midday Friday, Nov. 1, everything was set. The sky was blue, flecked with fluffy clouds. The weather was hot and drowsy.

Ambassador Lodge and Adm. Harry Felt, visiting U.S. Pacific commander, bade Diem farewell after a long formal call. They smiled politely at the president's parting remark.

At his headquarters near the airport Gen. Don fretted. He had been informed that Felt's departure, originally scheduled for 11:30 a.m., less than two hours before the hour set for the coup, was being delayed by the Diem visit.

An aide phoned to say the departure would be postponed to 12:30 or possibly 1:30, just past the zero hour. The plot was suddenly in danger.

Don is a quiet, handsome, usually relaxed man with one nervous mannerism. He twirls a big square gold ring on his finger when he is lost for a word or under other minor stress.

"I felt like rushing Adm. Felt aboard that plane to get it off the ground," he said later.

As it turned out Felt reached the airport not too much after the appointed time.

By 1 p.m., in downtown Saigon and around Diem's Gia Long Palace the streets were deserted and shop fronts shuttered for the siesta. The city appeared to slumber in the tropic heat.

Fifteen minutes later the rebels struck.

Three battalions of red-kerchiefed marines swiftly surrounded and seized the national and municipal police headquarters in the western suburbs, the telegraph office, the radio stations and the Ministry of Defense telecommunications center. Only a few shots were fired.

Newsmen asked some officers what was up. The marines smiled, shrugged and said they did not know, they were just obeying orders.

Then in rapid-fire succession what was up become obvious.

Seventh Division units moved into the city.

A government special forces unit near the airport was subdued after a short firefight. Six fighter bombers peeled out of the sky, rocketed navy headquarters on the waterfront, troops closed in and navy headquarters was taken.

Antiaircraft and small arms fire shattered the siesta quiet. People popped out of doors and windows for a look and quickly scurried away.

All key suburban installations fell to the rebels in the first two hours. Then the rebel forces closed in on the center of town. They stopped and regrouped some 10 blocks away, waiting for word to attack.

One group, peeled off toward the barracks of the palace guard one mile from the palace. Until dusk firing was intermittent and confused. There was no major contact.

Two palace tanks, parked in front of the U.S.. Information Service building two blocks from the palace, opened up blindly, firing down Le Loi Street. They missed a lone pedicab driver pedaling down the broad boulevard. Parked cars were raked from stem to stern.

There was no answering fire and no enemy in sight at that point.

In lulls downtown Saigon presented a strange spectacle. People wandered outdoors. Two GIs asked the way to the nearest bar. Children dashed around collecting spent cartridge cases. A mother played with her son on a grass traffic circle in view of a tank. Two drunks sauntered past the National Assembly, one expostulating: "Tell them to knock that off. They're scaring everybody."

The roof garden of the Rex, U.S. military officers' mess overlooking the palace, was crowded with Americans warned off the streets. Some whiled away the time rolling dice, keeping slot machines clanging and drinking as bullets spat below and shells whistled close overhead.

At 4:30 p.m., Diem telephoned Lodge and asked him what he knew about the coup. Lodge said he could hear firing but knew nothing more. He said he was concerned for Diem's personal safety and offered to do what he could.

Diem brushed him aside and said: "I shall do what duty and good sense requires."

That was the last Lodge heard from Diem.

At 6 p.m., the rebels started shelling the barracks of the palace guard to cut off possible reinforcements for the palace.

At 8 p.m., according to best available information now, Diem and Nhu stepped quietly through one of the many palace gates, walked unobtrusively through the darkened streets to a waiting car two blocks away and were whisked off to a small Catholic church in the tenement district of Cholon, Saigon's Chinese twin city.

The guard barracks was overwhelmed at midnight. Four hours later rebel tanks moved on the palace itself, guns blazing across deserted intersections. Soldiers darted door to door. Buildings around the palace caught fire. Billows of smoke rose over the city.

The palace held out for more than 2½ hours. At 6:37 a.m. A white flag was finally hoisted from the palace, a cheer broke out outside and rebel troops poured in through the gaping holes in the seven-foot wall surrounding the palace grounds.

The once immaculate grounds were littered with debris. The facade was pockmarked with shell hits.

Inside Nhu's office downstairs, gray with fallen plaster, the bank of telephones on his desk lay shattered. Ten new copies of a war book called "Shoot to Kill" were scattered on a table.

On a table in Diem's office upstairs was a pile of men's magazines, one with a nude on the cover.

Diem and Nhu, who had refused several rebel promises of safe conduct, were arrested in the church.

Don said later Diem and Nhu were killed in an armored personnel carrier during a struggle over possession of a gun belonging to the rebel captain assigned to bring them to army headquarters.

He said the fight broke out when Nhu, livid with rage, lunged for the captain's pistol in the murky darkness of the personnel carrier as it rolled away.

The coup was led by a group of relatively young Western - trained army officers. Hard-core leaders probably numbered no more than six. Twenty-three officers including 19 generals comprise the ruling Revolutionary Council, from whom the provisional government takes its orders.

The big man of the coup, before and after, is generally accepted as Maj. Gen. Duong Van Minh, chief of state in the new government. French - trained "Big Minh" is liked and respected by Americans.

He had been stripped of his field command by Diem and made "military advisor to the president." He expressed his feeling about that hollow post once by saying, "I have a big office in the palace with a big desk and three phones. Where do the phones go? Nowhere."

Don is generally considered the No. 2 man in the coup. He was joint staff chief and commander of the armed forces under Diem but held little real power. He is outspoken, ready to admit an error and considers killing the Viet Cong his most important job.

Dinh, at 37 the youngest general in the junta, is a tough - talking, boyish-looking new minister of defense. As military governor of Saigon during Diem's crackdown on the Buddhists, Dinh denounced "foreign adventurers" and indirectly accused the United States of planning a coup. But he is considered an able military man and has said he was deceived by Diem.

The coup was led by a group of relatively young Western - trained army officers. Hard-core leaders probably numbered no more than six. Twenty-three officers including 19 generals comprise the ruling Revolutionary Council, from whom the provisional government takes its orders.

The big man of the coup, before and after, is generally accepted as Maj. Gen. Duong Van Minh, chief of state in the new government. French - trained "Big Minh" is liked and respected by Americans.

He had been stripped of his field command by Diem and made "military advisor to the president." He expressed his feeling about that hollow post once by saying, "I have a big office in the palace with a big desk and three phones. Where do the phones go? Nowhere."

Don is generally considered the No. 2 man in the coup. He was joint staff chief and commander of the armed forces under Diem but held little real power. He is outspoken, ready to admit an error and considers killing the Viet Cong his most important job.

Dinh, at 37 the youngest general in the junta, is a tough - talking, boyish-looking new minister of defense. As military governor of Saigon during Diem's crackdown on the Buddhists, Dinh denounced "foreign adventurers" and indirectly accused the United States of planning a coup. But he is considered an able military man and has said he was deceived by Diem.

Pope Receives Otto Preminger

VATICAN CITY (AP)—American movie producer-director Otto Preminger was received with his wife in private audience Saturday by Pope Paul VI.

Preminger was presented with the Grand Cross of Merit by the Roman Catholic order of the Knights of the Holy Sepulchre on Nov. 6 for his new film "The Cardinal."

After the audience, Preminger said that Pope Paul, speaking in English, said he knew about the picture, which tells the fictional story of an American Roman Catholic who rises from priest to cardinal.

LANGUAGE CLASSES

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Coral Way elementary school has become thoroughly bilingual.

Classes in all subjects are taught in both Spanish and English. The idea is to train Cuban refugee children in England and give American youngsters a chance to become completely fluent in Spanish.

Soviets Are Going Western

MOSCOW (AP) — The blonde in the beehive hairdo and the yellow dress wiggled across Gorki Street, almost stopping traffic. She looked like a million rubles.

In the restaurant of the Moskva Hotel a dance band pumped out a cool Western-style tune and couples shuffled around cheek-to-cheek.

Down the street in the big display windows of the GUM department store a dummy model with silver hair, the sultry look and arched back of a Dior mannequin sported a new line in teen-age girls' frillies.

It could have been Paris, London or New York. But it wasn't. It was Moscow.

GOING WEST

For Moscow is going West. And it is the young people—the girls in beehives and short skirts, young men in pop singer hairstyles and tight blue jeans—who are taking it there.

Soviet leaders, apparently sensing a growing hunger among the young for new and better things, are taking the hint—giving them more of the things they want.

Every day, about their own streets, Muscovites can plainly see that their country lags behind the West in consumer goods. They see it in the things Western visitors have — their clothes are better, have more style, more variety, more color. Westerners have more of the worldly things that make life richer and easier.

But the Russians are confident that some day, maybe soon, they will have all of this in plenty.

They say: "Things are getting better all the time."

Westerners who have been here long enough to note the slow change agree.

New neon signs brighten the once dark streets. They may be mostly political slogans, but still they manage to give a touch of Times Square or Piccadilly Circus. Cautiously, new cocktail bars appear in once somber hotels, now gay with colored lights and streamers. Teen-agers crowd into them.

Clothes-conscious young Russians stop and stare in admiration at an American or English girl—at her fashionable shoes, her tweed skirt or gay blouse or sloppy sweater.

Russians believe Premier Khrushchev when he says that eventually the Soviet Union will overtake the West.

But they still ask questions.

A young woman said: "My mother wants a new refrigerator. But she has been told she must wait four years for it. I do not understand why one should wait four years for a new refrigerator."

COULDN'T BUY

Then she brightened, and added: "There was a time when you couldn't buy a refrigerator."

It's the same with autos. Soviet cars look mostly alike and cost plenty—two or three times the price of an equivalent model in the West. And you may have to wait five years or more before delivery.

Westerners in Moscow are proud of saying: "The American or European car is one of the finest pieces of Western advertising you could want."

Any foreign auto gets admiring looks from Russians, especially the young, because it is different and stylish, and looks better than the local product.

The Russians want such things. They want cars and refrigerators and washing machines and nice clothes—just as any other people want them.

"It will be a good thing when they do get them," one Moscow-seasoned West European diplomat said. "It'll be a safer world when Russians can get a new car every two or three years, buy a refrierator when they want one and don't have to queue for a pair of nylons."

Area Bands Win Honors At Delhi Festival Event

DELHI (Special) — High school marching bands from Ruston and Oak Grove won overall superior ratings in competition at the District One Marching Festival here Saturday.

The festival, sponsored by the Louisiana Music Educators Association, entertained a total of eight high school bands from the northern portion of the state and awarded nine superior ratings based on inspection and routine.

Trophies were presented to the drum majors of the Oak Grove and Ruston bands for their top ratings in both categories.

The host band, Delhi, received a rating of superior for inspection and excellent for routine. Other participating bands and their respective rating are:

Farmerville, excellent and excellent; LaSalle of Olla, superior and good; Winnsboro, superior and excellent; Caldwell Parish, superior and very good; and Ouachita Parish, superior and very good.

The festival, held annually at different schools, was staged at the Delhi High School football field.

Soviets Are Going Western

MOSCOW (AP) — The blonde in the beehive hairdo and the yellow dress wiggled across Gorki Street, almost stopping traffic. She looked like a million rubles.

In the restaurant of the Moskva Hotel a dance band pumped out a cool Western-style tune and couples shuffled around cheek-to-cheek.

Down the street in the big display windows of the GUM department store a dummy model with silver hair, the sultry look and arched back of a Dior mannequin sported a new line in teen-age girls' frillies.

It could have been Paris, London or New York. But it wasn't. It was Moscow.

GOING WEST

For Moscow is going West. And it is the young people—the girls in beehives and short skirts, young men in pop singer hairstyles and tight blue jeans—who are taking it there.

Soviet leaders, apparently sensing a growing hunger among the young for new and better things, are taking the hint—giving them more of the things they want.

Every day, about their own streets, Muscovites can plainly see that their country lags behind the West in consumer goods. They see it in the things Western visitors have — their clothes are better, have more style, more variety, more color. Westerners have more of the worldly things that make life richer and easier.

But the Russians are confident that some day, maybe soon, they will have all of this in plenty.

They say: "Things are getting better all the time."

Westerners who have been here long enough to note the slow change agree.

New neon signs brighten the once dark streets. They may be mostly political slogans, but still they manage to give a touch of Times Square or Piccadilly Circus. Cautiously, new cocktail bars appear in once somber hotels, now gay with colored lights and streamers. Teen-agers crowd into them.

Clothes-conscious young Russians stop and stare in admiration at an American or English girl—at her fashionable shoes, her tweed skirt or gay blouse or sloppy sweater.

Russians believe Premier Khrushchev when he says that eventually the Soviet Union will overtake the West.

But they still ask questions.

A young woman said: "My mother wants a new refrigerator. But she has been told she must wait four years for it. I do not understand why one should wait four years for a new refrigerator."

COULDN'T BUY

Then she brightened, and added: "There was a time when you couldn't buy a refrigerator."

It's the same with autos. Soviet cars look mostly alike and cost plenty—two or three times the price of an equivalent model in the West. And you may have to wait five years or more before delivery.

Westerners in Moscow are proud of saying: "The American or European car is one of the finest pieces of Western advertising you could want."

Any foreign auto gets admiring looks from Russians, especially the young, because it is different and stylish, and looks better than the local product.

The Russians want such things. They want cars and refrigerators and washing machines and nice clothes—just as any other people want them.

"It will be a good thing when they do get them," one Moscow-seasoned West European diplomat said. "It'll be a safer world when Russians can get a new car every two or three years, buy a refrierator when they want one and don't have to queue for a pair of nylons."

Area Bands Win Honors At Delhi Festival Event

DELHI (Special) — High school marching bands from Ruston and Oak Grove won overall superior ratings in competition at the District One Marching Festival here Saturday.

The festival, sponsored by the Louisiana Music Educators Association, entertained a total of eight high school bands from the northern portion of the state and awarded nine superior ratings based on inspection and routine.

Trophies were presented to the drum majors of the Oak Grove and Ruston bands for their top ratings in both categories.

The host band, Delhi, received a rating of superior for inspection and excellent for routine. Other participating bands and their respective rating are:

Farmerville, excellent and excellent; LaSalle of Olla, superior and good; Winnsboro, superior and excellent; Caldwell Parish, superior and very good; and Ouachita Parish, superior and very good.

The festival, held annually at different schools, was staged at the Delhi High School football field.

Scouts In Action

"What does a boy want from Scouting?" With this provocative start, Jack Panky, scout executive, spoke to the Cub Scout leaders attending the closing banquet of he Scout Pow-Wow at Northeast State College.

Panky listed seven things a boy wants when he joins the Cub Scouts: 1. physical fitness; 2. self-reliance; 3. to understand his obligation to God; 4. to develop citizenship; 5. to help people by good will and good citizenship; 6. to learn willingness in sharing; and 7. to understand democratic living.

Panky continued by listing some of the symbols of freedom and democracy such as the church, the eagle, our flag, and the flags of the United Nations, the Liberty Bell and the Mayflower, which had been used in decorations on the tables made by den mothers of various pack.

The Pow-wow was attended by over fifty persons and represented the following Packs: 3 and 4 from Bastrop, 37 and 174 from West Monroe, 180 of Winnfield, 67 of Sterlington; 59 and 46 from Ruston, 16 from Farmerville, 20 from Vidalia, 25 from Lake Providence and 6, 31, 30, and 29 from Monroe.

There was active participation during the afternoon of the Pow-wow in various workships such as arts and crafts, games, such ones both boys and adults could enjoy, administration for cubmasters and other leaders and material resources in the form of books, pamphlets and other printed matter.

Three Cub Packs received new cub masters during the week: Robert Blackstock is new cubmaster for Pack 132, sponsored by Clara Hall P. T. A.; Aubrey Phillips will lead Pack 31 which is sponsored by the North Monroe Kiwanis Club and James Bradford is new cubmaster at Minnie Ruffin School, also sponsored by its P. T. A. Pack 29 has a new cubmaster in R. Birkhead.

Orrie White, Jr., scout master of Troop 32 is busy keeping up with his boys building a new camping trailer.

And speaking of camping, early-bird awards must go to Troop 67 of West Monroe. They are the first troop to be officially registered for summer camp at Camp Kiroli. This troop is sponsored by First Pentecostal Church and is under the Scoutmaster Bobby Pedigo.

State Dietetic Group Installs Officers Here

A slate of new officers was installed in closing ceremonies Saturday of the Louisiana Dietetic Association, ending a three-day meet in the Virginia Hotel.

Mrs. Mary Jane Gelpi, of New Orleans, was installed as president of the group. She will share the leadership with another New Orleans woman, Miss Sara J. Crumley, new secretary, and Mrs. Gladys McCartney, of Baton Rouge, treasurer, Miss Marlene Bond, of Monroe, was outgoing president.

Highlights of the three-day statewide convention included a talk by the noted La-Canada, California author Ronald Deutsch.

The convention closed at noon Saturday after hearing two speakers prior to the installation ceremony. Dr. Charlotte M. Young, speaker of the House of Delegates of the American Dietetic Association and professor of medical nutrition of the graduate school of nutrition at Cornell University, Ithca, N. Y., spoke along with Dr. John R. McDonough. Dr. McDonough is medical officer of the Public Health Service and instructor at the University of North Carolina.

HALLOWEEN TIP

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A tip for next Halloween. If you have to be away from home when the youngsters make their rounds, fill a bag with candy and set it on the porch.

John B. Lowe inaugurated the plan two years ago and found that children have a sense of fairness. A note attached to the bag suggested the trick-or-treaters "Take some. Leave some."

Last Halloween, when Lowe returned home the bag contained more candy than he purchased.

SECRETARIES FOLDED UP

MILWAUKEE (AP) — How do you ship four-foot high secretary birds from Kenya in Africa to Milwaukee?

You fold them up like a jackknife, wrap them up — mummy fashion — with muslin, put them in a small box and place them on a jet transport.

George Speidel, director of the Milwaukee Zoo, said the zoo's four new secretary birds, which have extremely delicate legs, arrived in "beautiful condition." He credited their unique packaging.

Chimps Used In Warfare Gas Tests

HOLLOMAN AIR FORCE BASE, N. J. (AP)—Holloman's famous chimpanzees, pioneers of the space age, now are being used in warfare nerve gas experiments.

Injections of the gases are making the smart, alert chimpanzees senseless, dull, and oblivious to their surroundings.

Both chimps and rhesus monkeys are being injected—the correlation being that chimps represent man and monkeys the chimps—to test effects of the gases on nervous systems, and when the effects will wear off.

The tests have been described as successful. Maj. Herbert G. Reynolds, chief of the Holloman Comparative Psychology Branch of the Aeromedical Research Branch, said the animals are left immobile. They can't do anything for several hours following an injection.

The tests are using only a small portion of the 83 chimpanzee colony at Holloman.

"Some of the chimps are highly trained animals," Reynolds said. "Their responses to certain tasks at control panels were quick, alert and correct.

"After the injections, they would sit and stare at the panels."

Chimpanzees recovered their senses much quicker than the monkeys.

"The idea of the gases is to impair not destroy," Reynolds said. None of the animals is injected with a lethal dose of the gas.

With the threat of complete destruction in a thermonuclear war, with neither side apt to win other warfare tactics are being devised.

Nerve gas is one. The theory is that complete immobilization of the enemy, short of death, would give troops the opportunity to take over an area while its residents were in a paralyzed condition and unable to resist—much different than the horrible destructiveness of a hydrogen bomb conflict.

The gases are being developed at the Army's chemical center at Edgewood Arsenal, Md. Reynolds said each year about ,000 nolds said each year about 3,000 chemical agents are checked as possible nerve gases.

These are narrowed to 30 and the five or six that have the most potential are tested on the animals.

Reynolds emphasized that the animals receive the injections under strict regulations specified by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

ELECTION BACKGROUND

Candidate Crop Bountiful In Franklin Parish Races

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the ninth in a series of articles on the upcoming December 7th primaries. Today's article is on Franklin Parish. The series is intended to inform the voters.)

By SAMA HANNA

Political Editor

Franklin Parish is having a bountiful fall.

Two bumper crops were made — one in cotton and the other, of course, in politics.

This is a big political year in Franklin with probably a record number of candidates generated by a wave of interest in public affairs.

Spurned by a strong anti-Kennedy feeling, the election has brought out candidates for every office except clerk of court. Numerous young men are going to the post.

Sheriff A. J. Stephens has five opponents, including two former sheriffs, after his first term in office while Assessor Willie Reems has two opponents.

But the hottest races are being waged for the Legislature.

Rep. Lantz Womack, completing six years in office, is seeking re-election against seven opponents, — no doubt a record for the representative's race. Sen. J. C. (Sonny) Gilbert, seeking his second consecutive term, of Sicily Island has two opponents in the three-parish race.

Candidates for the House of Representatives in Franklin, besides Womack, include C. H. (Red) Foster, a Wisner insurance man, Homer Hodges, a Winnsboro farmer and former deputy and game warden, L. D. Knox, a farmer, Bruce Landis III, a Winnsboro councilman and automobile dealer, N. G. Lee, a farmer, K. C. Loftin, a businessman, contractor and farmer, and Landis L. Magee, a Winnsboro insurance man.

Dr. Ralph E. King, a Winnsboro physician who served three terms in the Senate, is running for his old seat along with Caleb Martin, a Winnsboro businessman.

They're in the 33rd Senatorial District race with Gilbert. The district is composed of Franklin, Richland and Catahoula.

Gilbert unseated King in the last election.

Meantime, two former sheriffs are trying to return to the office that they once occuppied — Allen Price, who has farming interests, and Hiram Waller, who served for 12 years before Stephens beat him four years ago. Waller has been in the insurance field since.

Other candidates include Norman D. Elrod, who operates a service station, W. N. Posey, a constable, and H. C. (Bud) Shaw, a roofing contractor.

Reems, the assessor with two terms in office, is opposed by J. W. (Kit) McCain, a former state trooper who is the co-owner of a drug store in Winnsboro, and Arthur L. Rhodes, a Winnsboro businessman.

Lowe is unopposed as he completes his first term. Dr. A. J. Reynolds of Winnsboro will be the new coroner.

Franklin even has four candidates for the Democratic Central Committee — a post now held by John T. O'Brien, a former juror. O'Brien is running against P. L. Drak, a retired farmer and mail carrier, Murray H. Martin, a contractor, and Charles I. Watson, a Wisner insurance man.

In addition, seven candidates are seeking a spot on the five-man Parish Democratic Committee — B. I. Berry, J. R. Donnell, Elmer Emfinger, James M. Fletcher, W. L. Harper, Emmett B. Moore, and J. E. Richardson.

Here are the other Franklin Parish candidates on a ward-by-ward basis:

High Twelve Club Renamed

The Twin Cities High Twelve Club has been re-named the Louis Daniel High Twelve Club in honor of the late Louis Daniel, former secretary of the club.

Daniel, of Monroe, was elected state third vice president of Louisiana High Twelve Clubs prior to his death Oct. 29 of this year.

The new name was authorized in a resolution signed by club president Fred M. Culver. In the resolution Daniel was cited for his efforts in the organization of the West Monroe, Bastrop and Northeast Louisiana High Twelve clubs.

U.S. SECRETARY

PARIS (UPI) — George W. Ball, U.S. undersecretary of state, flew in from New York Saturday for a one-day stopover on his way to talks in Bonn and London. He returns here Nov. 19 for the meeting of the Council of Ministers of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development.

ASTHMA & SMOG

Air poisoned by smog, gas, dust and pollen aggravates recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma and Bronchitis. At the first sign of difficult breathing, wheezing, coughing and mucus congestion from such cause, start taking MENDACO to combat allergy, loosen and help remove choking phlegm, and thus promote freer breathing and more restful sleep. Most druggists keep and recommend MENDACO.

ELECTION BACKGROUND

Candidate Crop Bountiful In Franklin Parish Races

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the ninth in a series of articles on the upcoming December 7th primaries. Today's article is on Franklin Parish. The series is intended to inform the voters.)

By SAMA HANNA
Political Editor

Franklin Parish is having a bountiful fall.

Two bumper crops were made — one in cotton and the other, of course, in politics.

This is a big political year in Franklin with probably a record number of candidates generated by a wave of interest in public affairs.

Spurned by a strong anti-Kennedy feeling, the election has brought out candidates for every office except clerk of court. Numerous young men are going to the post.

Sheriff A. J. Stephens has five opponents, including two former sheriffs, after his first term in office while Assessor Willie Reems has two opponents.

But the hottest races are being waged for the Legislature.

Rep. Lantz Womack, completing six years in office, is seeking re-election against seven opponents, — no doubt a record for the representative's race. Sen. J. C. (Sonny) Gilbert, seeking his second consecutive term, of Sicily Island has two opponents in the three-parish race.

Candidates for the House of Representatives in Franklin, besides Womack, include C. H. (Red) Foster, a Wisner insurance man, Homer Hodges, a Winnsboro farmer and former deputy and game warden, L. D. Knox, a farmer, Bruce Landis III, a Winnsboro councilman and automobile dealer, N. G. Lee, a farmer, K. C. Loftin, a businessman, contractor and farmer, and Landis L. Magee, a Winnsboro insurance man.

Dr. Ralph E. King, a Winnsboro physician who served three terms in the Senate, is running for his old seat along with Caleb Martin, a Winnsboro businessman.

They're in the 33rd Senatorial District race with Gilbert. The district is composed of Franklin, Richland and Catahoula.

Gilbert unseated King in the last election.

Meantime, two former sheriffs are trying to return to the office that they once occuppied — Allen Price, who has farming interests, and Hiram Waller, who served for 12 years before Stephens beat him four years ago. Waller has been in the insurance field since.

Other candidates include Norman D. Elrod, who operates a service station, W. N. Posey, a constable, and H. C. (Bud) Shaw, a roofing contractor.

Reems, the assessor with two terms in office, is opposed by J. W. (Kit) McCain, a former state trooper who is the co-owner of a drug store in Winnsboro, and Arthur L. Rhodes, a Winnsboro businessman.

Lowe is unopposed as he completes his first term. Dr. A. J. Reynolds of Winnsboro will be the new coroner.

Franklin even has four candidates for the Democratic Central Committee — a post now held by John T. O'Brien, a former juror. O'Brien is running against P. L. Drak, a retired farmer and mail carrier, Murray H. Martin, a contractor, and Charles I. Watson, a Wisner insurance man.

In addition, seven candidates are seeking a spot on the five-man Parish Democratic Committee — B. I. Berry, J. R. Donnell, Elmer Emfinger, James M. Fletcher, W. L. Harper, Emmett B. Moore, and J. E. Richardson.

Here are the other Franklin Parish candidates on a ward-by-ward basis:

High Twelve Club Renamed

The Twin Cities High Twelve Club has been re-named the Louis Daniel High Twelve Club in honor of the late Louis Daniel, former secretary of the club.

Daniel, of Monroe, was elected state third vice president of Louisiana High Twelve Clubs prior to his death Oct. 29 of this year.

The new name was authorized in a resolution signed by club president Fred M. Culver. In the resolution Daniel was cited for his efforts in the organization of the West Monroe, Bastrop and Northeast Louisiana High Twelve clubs.

U.S. SECRETARY

PARIS (UPI) — George W. Ball, U.S. undersecretary of state, flew in from New York Saturday for a one-day stopover on his way to talks in Bonn and London. He returns here Nov. 19 for the meeting of the Council of Ministers of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development.

ASTHMA & SMOG

Air poisoned by smog, gas, dust and pollen aggravates recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma and Bronchitis. At the first sign of difficult breathing, wheezing, coughing and mucus congestion from such cause, start taking MENDACO to combat allergy, loosen and help remove choking phlegm, and thus promote freer breathing and more restful sleep. Most druggists keep and recommend MENDACO.

Neither party took a stand on the poll tax issue.

Opposition to the poll tax had few public supporters, but these used strong language against repeal.

For instance, Austin attorney John Campbell in a speech said "The voters weeded out by the tax are those voters who are not responsible — those who can be led by rabble-rousers."

Supporters said elimination of the poll tax would broaden the voter base and result in more democracy.

The congressional race developed when Rep. Homer Thornberry, D-Tex., resigned to take a federal judgeship in El Paso. His seat will be vacated Dec. 20.

Thornberry, a member of the powerful House Rules Committee, has represnted the 10th District since 1948.

Eligible to vote were 2,300,000 but never more than a small number ballot in special elections.

Party designations did not appear on the ballot.

In addition, Dallas voted for two state legislative seats and Austin one.

Polls opened at 8 a. m. and closed at 8 p. m. The weather generally was clear to partly cloudy.

Going into the Texas race, the U. S. House had 257 Democrats and 178 Republicans. The GOP captured two previously Democratic seats in California when incumbents died, and retained a Republican in Pennsylvania and one in North Dakota.

Dobbs quit a job as a political analyst, observer and broadcaster for Life Line Inc., Washington, to run. Life Line produces a conservative radio program distributed nationally.

Thornberry defeated Dobbs about 45,000 to 25,000 in an earlier race for the seat.

Dobbs had the blessings and campaign help of the state GOP headquarters in addition to Austin Republicans. He said no one would have "to lead me by the hand in Washington." He said he would oppose Kennedy administration spending.

Ritter, 29, a mild-mannered spokesman for Democratic party unity, is tabbed a liberal. He was the biggest vote getter in two Democratic primaries in 1962 and then defeated his GOP opponent by a 2-1 margin in the November election for state representative.

The Austin legislative race was for the post Ritter resigned to run for Congress. He is a businessman and lawyer.

ing cave-ins that crushed others.

The train wreck occurred Saturday evening when a passenger train jammed with weekend commuters struck a derailed freight train, then swerved across the tracks and knifed into another commuter train traveling in the opposite direction.

Cars telescoped as steel sliced through steel, mangling passengers. Power lines along the tracks tumbled down in a glare of light that was followed by darkness punctuated only by the screams of trapped passengers.

At least one American was in the twisted wreckage—William Scott, 28, of Colorado Springs, Colo., a student at a Tokyo university. His body was taken to a small Buddhist temple where priests chanted prayers and waved incense over the victims.

Until the double tragedies struck, it had been a perfect weekend in Japan. Weather in most of the nation was crisp and clear, luring hundreds of thousands of Japanese to the mountains and seashores.

The attention of the nation had been riveted on West German President Heinrich Luebke now visiting Emperor Hirohito as the first European head of state to tour Japan since World War II.

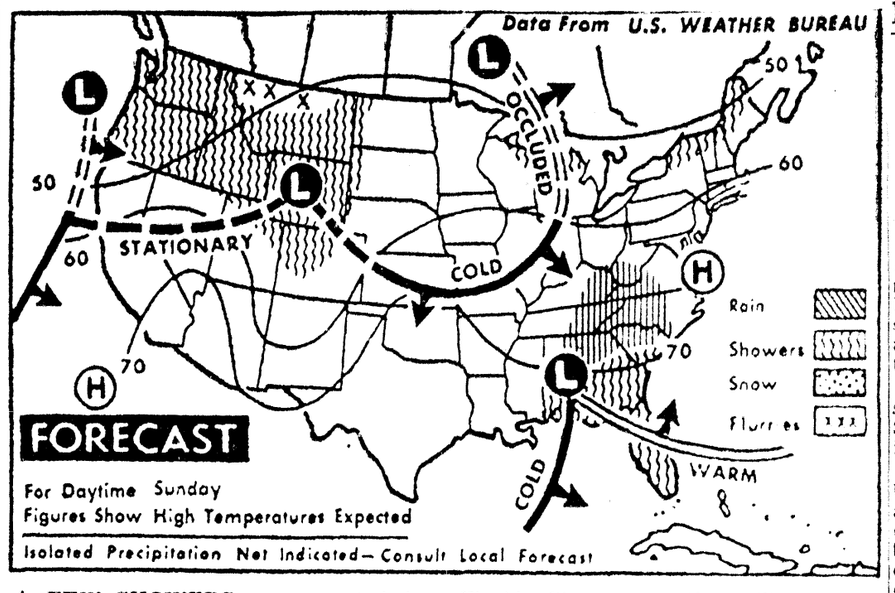
However, Japanese newspapers and television quickly focused on the mine disaster and, six hours later, added the new horror of the train wreck.

Television cameras showed the anxious faces of Japanese scanning casualty lists, or watching rescue teams at work with cutting torches on the train wreckage or stumbling from the mine entrance with the twisted, blackened bodies of dead miners.

American Navy men from the U.S. base at Yokosuka helped care for victims of the train wreck.

Confusion arose over the number of men killed in the mine, with officials declaring there was hope some of those unaccounted for had found their way to safety in the maze of tunnels underground.

The mine blast, which spread destruction both above and below ground at the big modern Mitsui Miike Colliery, cast a pall of mourning over the prosperous port city of Omuta, 600 miles from Tokyo.



A FEW SHOWERS are expected in northern New England and upper Lakes region today. Rain is forecast for eastern sections of Ohio and Tennessee valleys with showers and scattered thundershowers in Carolinas and Florida. Showery weather will continue in north Pacific states and rain in lower elevations of north and central Rockies with snow in higher elevations. (AP Wirephoto)

HARD-NOSED BUSINESSMAN

Executive Relies Upon Philosophy

LAKEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Alan C. Stoneman is a hard-nosed businessman who believes in making a profit but at he same time feels that creativity is an essential factor in any industrial organization.

Business and creativity may seem strange bed - fellows but Stoneman claims they go hand-in-hand.

Stoneman graduated from the University of Illinois in 1926 with a Bachelor of Arts degree in industrial administration and through years of experience has developed what he calls a "philosophy of management."

He's no starry-eyed idealist but he believes there is a "set of intangibles" affecting any business because business deals with people."

Stoneman talks in terms which sometimes seem strange coming from the head of a business which had sales of almost $120 million last year.

He speaks of the "resurgence of the individual" and "philosophy for growth." And as president of Purex Corp., which produces scores of Household Items, he and his fellow - executives put fancy - sounding words and theories into practice.

Internal policy of Purex is aimed at stimulating the individual "who has a desire to achieve who possesses initiative, who is creative, who is reaching for better things," said Stoneman. "We know that in our changing economy, the innovator makes the most progress."

Youths Escape Serious Injury In Car Mishap

Several local youngsters escaped without serious injuries when their vehicle went out of control in a curve on Trenton Street Saturday night, struck a tree and utility pole and overturned.

West Monroe police said that only one was taken to Glenwood Hospital for treatment — Brenda Young, 14, of 411 Mill St. She was treated for bruises and contusions and released. George S. Tabor, 17, of 107 Fourth St., Rayville, was charged with reckless driving following the incident.

Police said he reportedly was driving south on Trenton Street at a high rate of speed, according to witnesses. The car went out of control near Pelican Drive, started skidding and overturned in the yard of 2301 Trenton St. The vehicle struck a tree and a utility pole while skidding out of control. The other four youths in the car, all juveniles, were uninjured.

PLANE MISHAP

LONDON (UPI) — A British Eagle Airline Viscount transport with 49 passengers skidded off a London airport runway Saturday because of a locked nosewheel, but no one was hurt. The plane was landing on a flight from Malta.

Wrong Laundry Bundle Taken

The sign read "Help Yo-Self Washateria," and that's exactly what someone did Saturday night, taking the wrong bundle.

Monroe Police reported that a large bundle of assorted laundry was either taken by mistake or stolen from the washateria at S. 2nd Street and Winnsboro Road.

The clothing had been left at the self service laundramat by Mrs. J. H. Griffith, 115 Stone Ave. early Saturday evening. When she returned to pick up the clothing and linens, the bundle was gone.

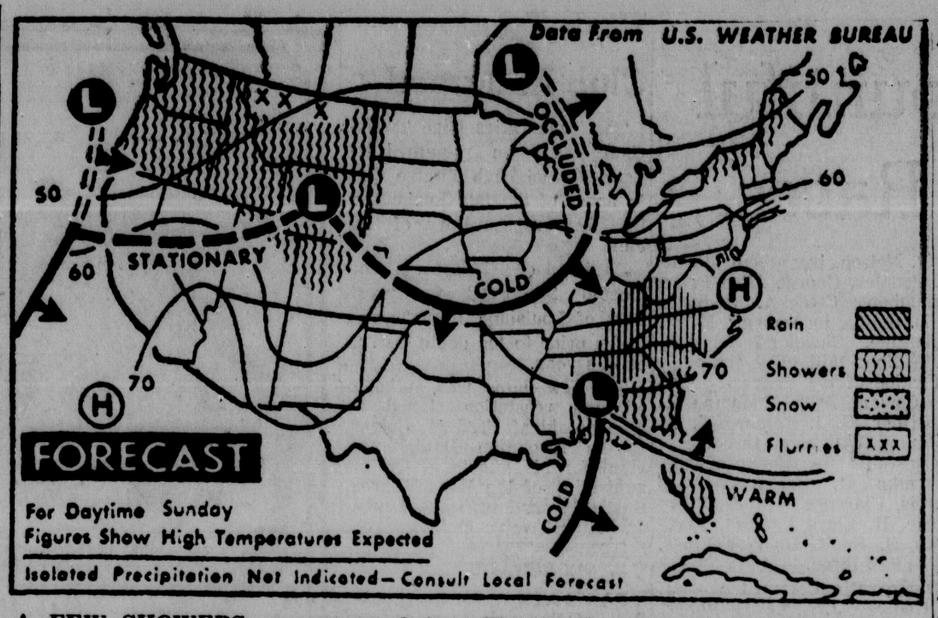
However, Japanese newspapers and television quickly focused on the mine disaster and, six hours later, added the new horror of the train wreck.

Television cameras showed the anxious faces of Japanese scanning casualty lists, or watching rescue teams at work with cutting torches on the train wreckage or stumbling from the mine entrance with the twisted, blackened bodies of dead miners.

American Navy men from the U.S. base at Yokosuka helped care for victims of the train wreck.

Confusion arose over the number of men killed in the mine, with officials declaring there was hope some of those unaccounted for had found their way to safety in the maze of tunnels underground.

The mine blast, which spread destruction both above and below ground at the big modern Mitsui Miike Colliery, cast a pall of mourning over the prosperous port city of Omuta, 600 miles from Tokyo.



A FEW SHOWERS are expected in northern New England and upper Lakes region today. Rain is forecast for eastern sections of Ohio and Tennessee valleys with showers and scattered thundershowers in Carolinas and Florida. Showery weather will continue in north Pacific states and rain in lower elevations of north and central Rockies with snow in higher elevations. (AP Wirephoto)

HARD-NOSED BUSINESSMAN

Executive Relies Upon Philosophy

LAKEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Alan C. Stoneman is a hard-nosed businessman who believes in making a profit but at he same time feels that creativity is an essential factor in any industrial organization.

Business and creativity may seem strange bed - fellows but Stoneman claims they go hand-in-hand.

Stoneman graduated from the University of Illinois in 1926 with a Bachelor of Arts degree in industrial administration and through years of experience has developed what he calls a "philosophy of management."

He's no starry-eyed idealist but he believes there is a "set of intangibles" affecting any business because business deals with people."

Stoneman talks in terms which sometimes seem strange coming from the head of a business which had sales of almost $120 million last year.

He speaks of the "resurgence of the individual" and "philosophy for growth." And as president of Purex Corp., which produces scores of Household Items, he and his fellow - executives put fancy - sounding words and theories into practice.

Internal policy of Purex is aimed at stimulating the individual "who has a desire to achieve who possesses initiative, who is creative, who is reaching for better things," said Stoneman. "We know that in our changing economy, the innovator makes the most progress."

Youths Escape Serious Injury In Car Mishap

Several local youngsters escaped without serious injuries when their vehicle went out of control in a curve on Trenton Street Saturday night, struck a tree and utility pole and overturned.

West Monroe police said that only one was taken to Glenwood Hospital for treatment — Brenda Young, 14, of 411 Mill St. She was treated for bruises and contusions and released. George S. Tabor, 17, of 107 Fourth St., Rayville, was charged with reckless driving following the incident.

Police said he reportedly was driving south on Trenton Street at a high rate of speed, according to witnesses. The car went out of control near Pelican Drive, started skidding and overturned in the yard of 2301 Trenton St. The vehicle struck a tree and a utility pole while skidding out of control. The other four youths in the car, all juveniles, were uninjured.

Wrong Laundry Bundle Taken

The sign read "Help Yo-Self Washateria," and that's exactly what someone did Saturday night, taking the wrong bundle.

Monroe Police reported that a large bundle of assorted laundry was either taken by mistake or stolen from the washateria at S. 2nd Street and Winnsboro Road.

The clothing had been left at the self service laundramat by Mrs. J. H. Griffith, 115 Stone Ave. early Saturday evening. When she returned to pick up the clothing and linens, the bundle was gone.

Germany Holds Memorial Rites

DACHAU, Germany (AP) — Solemn memorial services were held throughout Germany Saturday for Jewish victims of Crystal Night—the night 25 years ago when Nazi-led mobs roamed German cities burning synagogues, beating Jews and looting Jewish property.

Special services were held at Dachau and Flossenbuerg, in Bavaria, sites of infamous concentration camps.

West German newspapers devoted an entire page in their editions to the anniversary.

The night of Nov. 9, 1938 became known as Crystal Night because of the smashing of windows in Jewish stores.

It was the first organized, large-scale terror against the Jews in Nazi Germany. Thousands of Jews were taken to concentration camps.

Some were released later but others were never seen again.

The Nazi government called the attacks on Jews a "spontaneous reaction" to the assassination by a Jewish refugee of Ernst Vom Rath, a secretary of the German Embassy in Paris.

It was the excuse the Nazis had been waiting for to speed up their program against the Jews. The groundwork had been laid some years before with boycotts of Jewish stores and with the Nuerenberg racial laws.

'BLUE CHIP SPECIAL'

Capitalists Enter Kremlin's Wall

MOSCOW (UPI)—It was the greatest mass invasion of the Soviet Union by capitalists since the Bolshevik Revolution — and neither the Kremlin nor Wall Street may ever be the same.

There was a whingding verbal battle that went on for two days, and then the Kremlin's boss man himself ruled it a draw.

"Communist," Premier Nikita Khrushchev told such visiting American tycoons as the president's of IBM, ALCOA and the New York Stock Exchange, "is a dirty word in your country. In our country capitalist is a dirty word.

"But let us all reach agreement on the necessity for letting history be the judge."

The 20 blue chip capitalists from the United States never yielded Khrushchev an inch, but they rated him "a brilliant man," a "clever, cool" opponent.

The capitalists and Khrushchev had plenty of time to size each other up. The visitors saw so much of the premier—about seven hours including receptions — they didn't have much chance to see anything else in Moscow.

WORDS FLOWED

From the moment the group touched down in their chartered Caravelle jet, the champagne and words flowed.

Before the Who's Who list of businessmen winged off to Russia to start a European junket sponsored by Time Magazine, they were received by President Kennedy. But not until virtually the last minute did they know whether their Moscow visit would bring them eyeball-to-eyeball with Khrushchev.

But Khrushchev is a man of vast curiosity and apparently he did not want to miss such a group. So the morning after their arrival, the Americans were ushered into the Kremlin's Oval Room and seated at several tables facing the world's No. 1 Communist.

From the opening moment Khrushchev took the offensive.

"You represent the industrial and financial circles of the United States which is the richest country in the world," he said. "We as of now take second place after you. We want to come past you and take first but not by any thought of war. We want to achieve victory in honest competition."

"GREAT SUCCESS"

Khrushchev, struggling with agricultural failures, conceded: "I am familiar with food production industry in the U.S. It's certainly a very good one and the U.S. has achieved great success."

Kendrick R. Wilson Jr., Avco Corporation board chairman spoke up to tell the Soviet leader that "in America it's the people who own businesses. There are 20 million people who are owners of the businesses."

"Capitalists," replied Khrushchev blandly, "are very astute people. It's a new way to cheat the people. A poor person who has several dollars has to give them and that makes him feel morally tied in. He thinks he's part owner but as soon as he's no longer needed he can be fired and sent along to the unemployment office. None of these strategems will save capitalism."

Khrushchev then lectured his guests on the history of capitalism, winding up by saying that small enterpreneurs always became or were gobbled up by "monopoly capitalists."

By this time Khrushchev was noticing the clock, and got back to business.

Trade restrictions, he said were "harmful to America" and "unreasonable."

DEPENDS ON CONFIDENCE

The American side of the trade question was put by Walter Wheeler Jr., chairman of the board of Pitney Bowes. "We are businessmen," he said, "we all want to trade. But it depends on confidence. . .we are concerned about your avowed purpose of trying to change our form of government.

To which Khrushchev replied that "capitalism itself will generate the forces which replace capitalism."

The most heated exchange of the entire mission to Moscow came when Chauncy Cook President of General Foods asked Khrushchev why the Berlin Wall had been built and why people were shot who tried to cross it.

"A state frontier is a state frontier," said Khrushchev calmly. "And every state whenever its borders are violated shoots the violator. You do this."

"Not to keep people in, we don't!" shot back Cook.

Then, admonishing Cook not to "overstep the boundaries" of the meeting, Khrushchev summoned a truly Khrushchevian homily.

"If you start throwing hedgehogs under me I will throw a couple of porcupines under you.

When the interview was over Khrushchev invited his guests to the November 7th Kremlin reception the following day.

In the evening, with 2,000 other guests, they attended a reception in white marbled St. Catherine's Hall.

There were further frank exchanges of opinion. About Cuba, peaceful coexistence, Sino-Soviet differences and, finally, a new challenge for the American business leaders to take home with them: Russia would overtake the United States economically in only seven years time. Sipping their champagne, the Americans let that one go.

A quick change of venue next. The 20 business leaders and Khrushchev left the Kremlin and continued the party at Moscow's Sovietskaya Hotel.

In a basement banqueting room, Khrushchev, along with First Deputy Premiers Anastas Mikoyan and Alexei Kosygin, sat down at a round table lit by candles while the businessmen crowded around.

IN BEST FORM

The Americans took turns sitting down for five minutes of exchanges. Khrushchev was in his best form. His round face was split by a grin most of the time.

He asked Bank of America President Rudolph Peterson how about a 101 billion dollar loan.

"I haven't thought over the interest rate," Peterson replied with a smile.

Egar Bronfman, president of the Seagrams Distillery, got in a liquor bid.

"Seriously," said Khrushchev, "let's talk about buying whiskey."

"Who should I talk to?" Bronfman asked.

"Talk to Mikoyan, our trade expert."

Then Coca Cola President J. Paul Austin got into the act with a bid to sell his drink in Russia. But Mikoyan said he had tried to introduce the drink in Russia in 1936 without success. Personally, he said, he didn't care for it.

After their seven hours with Khrushchev, most of the businessmen polled by United Press International said they were impressed by the man, his quick thinking and his qualities as a politician.

"I was favorably impressed with Khrushchev," said Avco's Wilson. "He was completely frank."

James H. Binger of the Honeywell Regulator Co. said "there's no question he'd make a good politician or businessman."

The official news agency Tass said that Khrushchev told the Americans:

"Just recall the Biblical story of Noah's Ark. According to this story there were seven pairs of clean and seven pairs of unclean beasts. We regard ourselves as clean and the capitalists regard themselves as clean. Do not let us argue. Let us trade and develop economic relations."

Alcoa President John D. Harper said:

"It was an experience we will never forget."

In advertising, America has found the key to unlock the resourcefulness and ingenuity of our economy.

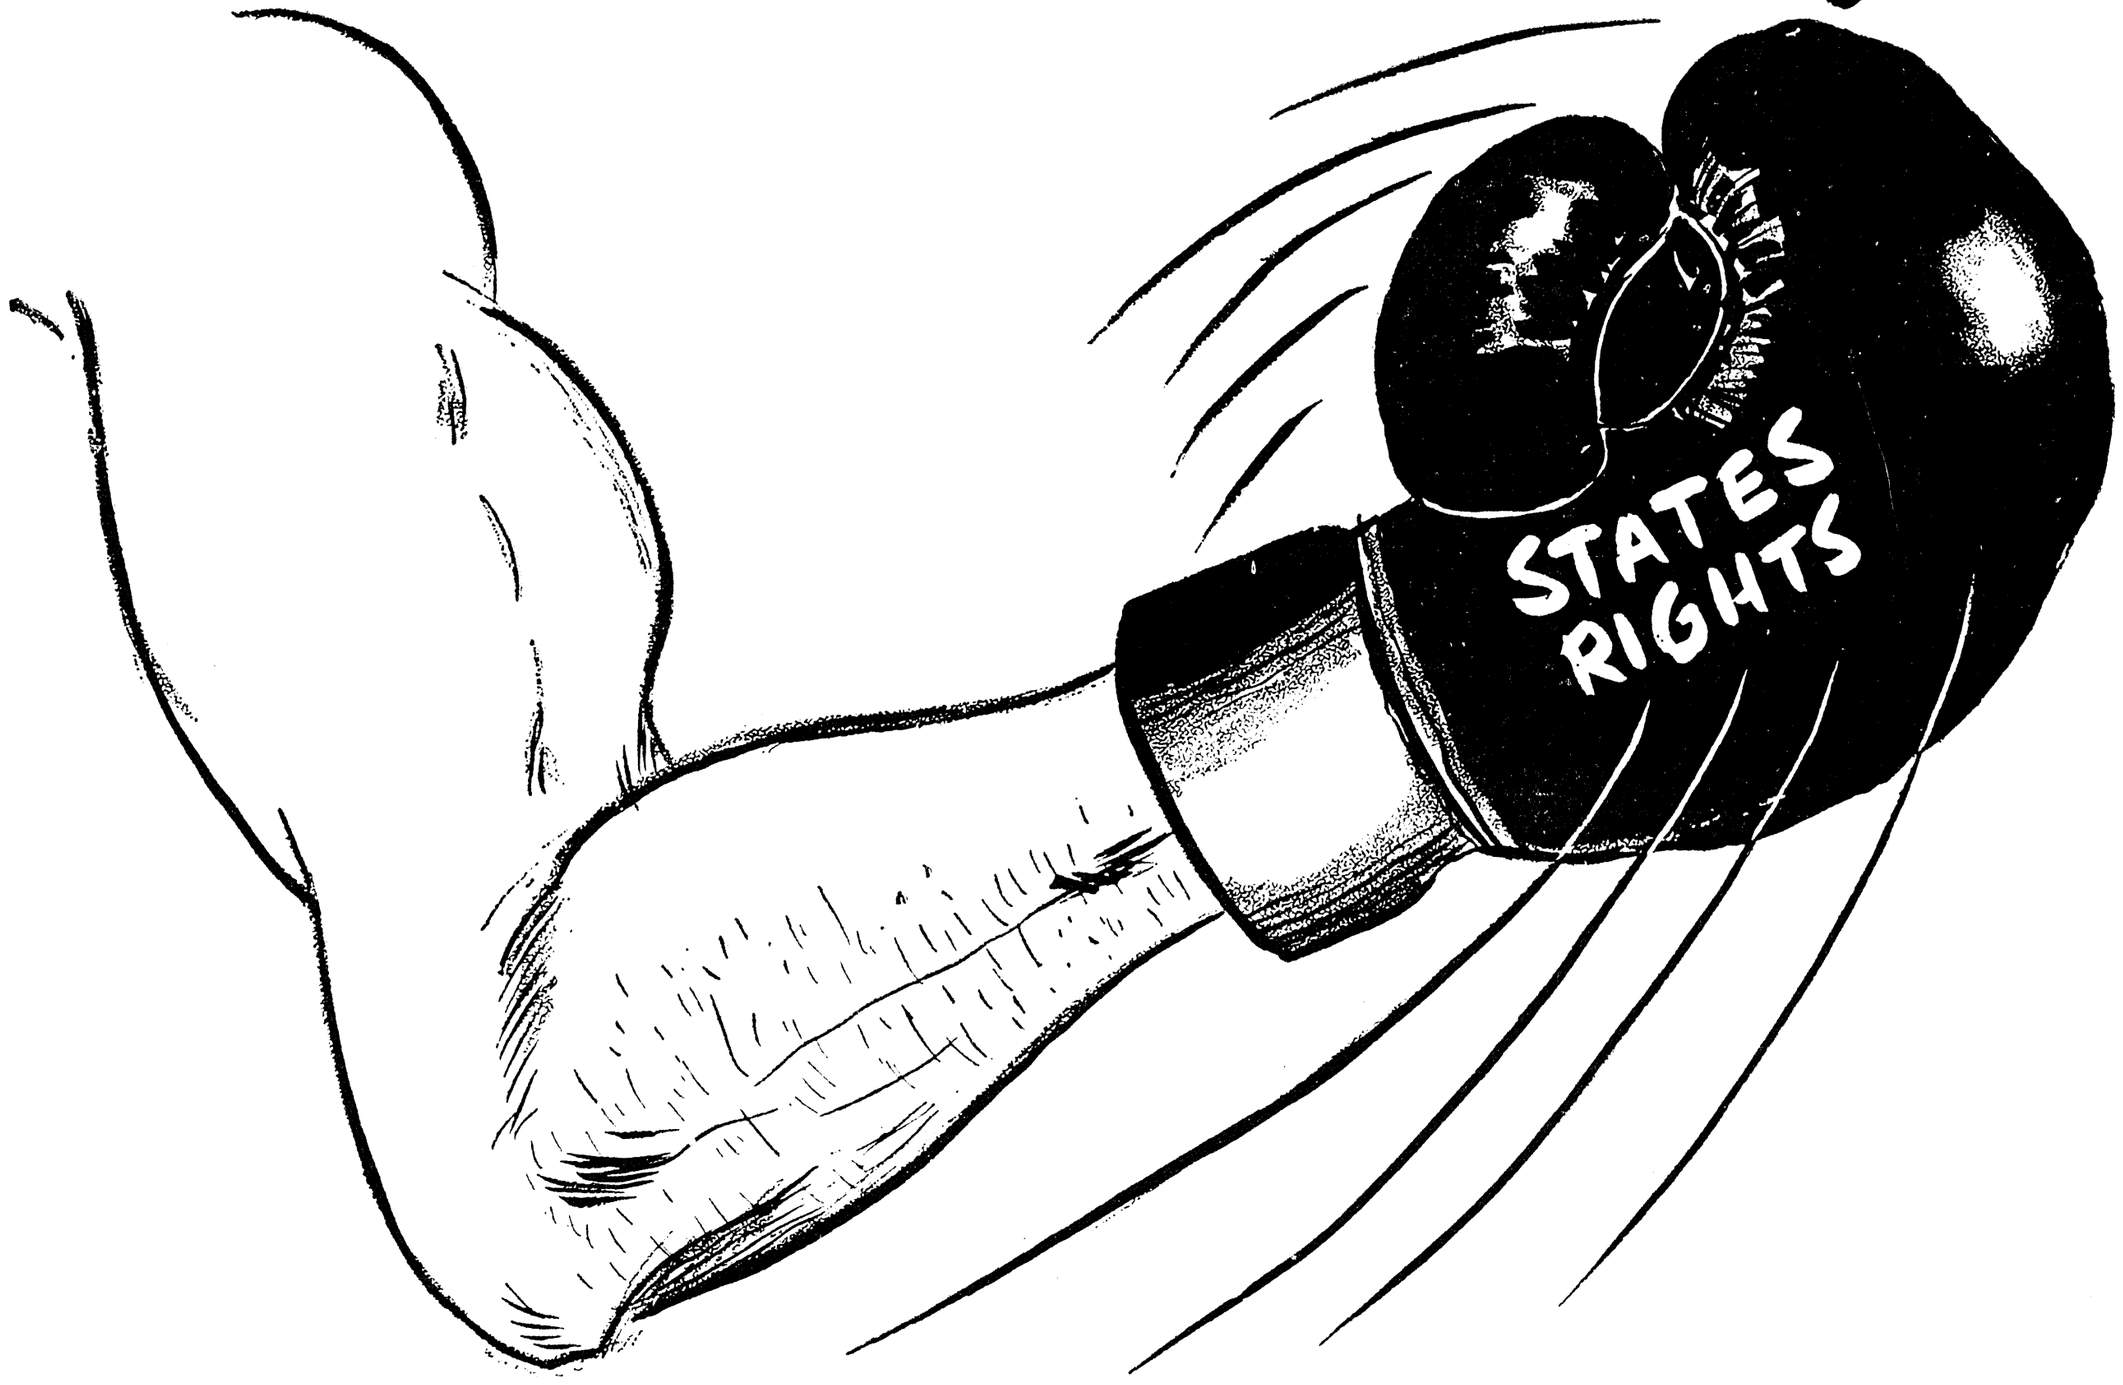
HELP McKEITHEN "KO" KENNEDY!



All of us recognize that today's number one threat to our way of life is a continuation of the dictator - like administration of the political power-hungry Kennedys. Our State and our country can not stand another four years of Jack, Bobby and other members of the Kennedy clan.

All of us know there are two Kennedy backed candidates in the race for governor. Washington is pulling out all the stops to get one of these two elected. There is also word from Washington that we must beat McKeithen. That makes it more urgent than ever that we must join forces behind John McKeithen and help him KO the Kennedys and clan.

The state - wide polls consistently show that McKeithen is the only openly avowed anti-Kennedy candidate who can keep one of the two Washington chosen candidates out of the second primary.

Results of the latest poll, which was completed last Wednesday, are shown below:

Morrison	–	30%
McKeithen	–	25%
(Gillis) Long	–	20%
Kennon	–	14%
Jackson	–	8%

The most significant change in this poll over ones of the past is that McKeithen is a couple of percentage points higher than he was in the preceding tabulation.

It's understandable that McKeithen would be in this strong position when you know how large the crowds are that turn out for his rallies. See photos in another section of this newspaper which show the thousands who assembled in Monroe Thursday night.

FROM THE BEGINNING OF HIS CAMPAIGN JOHN MCKEITHEN HAS PLEDGED HIMSELF TO STUMP THE STATE FROM ONE END TO THE OTHER TO DEFEAT KENNEDY!

81 PER CENT OF GOAL

UGF Donations Climb To $211,887

Total receipts on the Ouachita Parish United Givers Fund campaign have reached $211,887, or 81.3 per cent of the $260,573 goal.

During the last week, campaign volunteers working to complete their assignments turned in over $17,000. General Chairman Jack Campbell praised the continued work of volunteers in pushing the drive to a successful conclusion. "Victory is in sight," Campbell stated. "There is enough money still out, based on last year's gifts, to put the campaign over the top if all reports could be completed and turned in.

At the fourth report meeting on October 30, the campaign was officially extended three weeks because of the large number of contributors not heard from at that time.

Campbell explained that nearly half of the firms assigned in the campiagn still have not turned in their reports to United Givers. "If these firms could complete their solicitations and report to UGF Headquarters," the chairman said, "we could be assured of a victory by November 20."

"The UGF goal to raise the operating funds for 13 health, welfare and character building agencies is a modest one. In comparison with the amount raised by other communities similar in size to ours, Ouachita Parish isn't raising as much as it could," Campbell said. He urged all firms and organizations to wrap up their employee solicitators by the end of next week. He also issued an urgent reminder to all workers to complete their calls now. "Let's be over the top by the 20th," Campbell said.

LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE

N.O. Group Labeled 'Communist Front'

The Southern Conference Educational Fund headquarted in New Orleans has been declared a "Communist front organization" by the Louisiana Joint Legislative Committee on Un-American Activities.

The committee, made up of members of the House and Senate, is a legislative fact-finding committee and has been conducting an investigation of the SCEF for the past 11 months.

Rep. Mike John Jr. of Monroe, a member of the committee, said Saturday that the group, "contrary to mis-leading reports, is not a police committee. We just get the facts."

The committee recently obtained search warrants and state troopers and New Orleans city police raided SCEF offices in New Orleans and seized records of the organization.

John said all records seized in the raid have been subpoened by the Internal Security Subcommittee of the U. S. Senate, headed by Sen. James O. Eastland of Mississippi.

The resolution declaring the SCEF to be a "communist front" was passed this week at a meeting of the committee in Baton Rouge, John said.

The resolution said in part: "Be it therefore hereby resolved, this Committee does declare as a legislative finding that the Southern Conference Education Fund, Inc. is in fact a Communist Front Organization and is also a Subversive Organization because of its aiding and abeting the Communist Conspiracy."

John said the SCEF has been operating in Louisiana without a charter. He said the committee had been unable to find any records in the office of the Secretary of State to indicate the organization ever took out a Louisiana charter.

Evidence obtained in the raid was used by the committee in reaching its findings, John said, and will be turned over to the Orleans Parish District Attorney for submission to a grand jury investigation.

U.N. To Supply Fund For Saving Temple In Egypt

CAIRO (AP)—The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization guaranteed Saturday to supply the money to save Egypt's 3,000-year-old Abu Simbel temple that otherwise would be submerged by the Nile when the Aswan Dam is completed.

The United Arab Republic's minister of culture and national guidance, Dr. Abdel Kader Hatem, and the UNESCO director-general, Rene Maheu, signed an agreement defining procedure for turning over to the U.A.R. voluntary contributions collected by UNESCO.

Three Types Of Loans For Buyers

You've done the groundwork! You've figured out: how much house you can afford and the size of your down payment and monthly instalments. Now you must decide what kind of mortgage is best for you.

Basically, there are three main kinds: a conventional-mortgage loan; an F.H.A. loan; and a V.A. loan. A Federal - government agency participates in the two latter plans.

But, in principle, all work about the same. You, the borrower, agree to pay equal-monthly instalments stretched over a relatively long period of time. Part of your monthly payment goes to meet interest costs on the money you borrowed. And the remainder — or principal — is applied to reduce the loan. At the end of the specified period, you have repayed the entire loan. The size of your monthly payments depends on: the amount you borrow; interest rate and the number of years you take to pay off the loan.

Now, which mortgage is best for you? Here again, your banker can advise you, for all three kinds are available through banks. In fact, commercial banks now hold over $35 billion in home loans and they're playing a bigger and bigger role in residential housing. So take advantage of their experience and know-how.

A little prior study will also help. So here are the A, B, C's of home financing as described by the American Bankers Association in a fact-filled booklet, "YOU, YOUR BANK AND YOUR MORTGAGE." You can order a copy through your bank when you want to go into the matter more thoroughly.

A. Conventional - Mortgage Loan. Most home loans granted today are conventional mortgages. Banks and other lending institutions make them completely independent of any federal agency. So they assume all risk and must use the property involved as security. But processing and red tape are kept to a minimum, and you can get quicker action and closing. Other advantages are smaller total-interest costs and greater equity in the property. Usually, you repay in equal monthly instalments over the life of the loan. Local law regulates the length of the loan and the size of minimum down payments. Regulations and practices vary greatly from area to area.

B. FHA Loan. The Federal government insures these loans through the Federal Housing Administration. Your bank — or any other recognized lender — can make the loan.

Area Economic Meet Slated

The economic future of 10 parishes in Northeast Louisiana will be explored at an Area Economic Development Conference to be held November 21 on the Northeast Louisiana State College campus here.

The conference is scheduled for 8:30 a.m. in the Union Building auditorium.

Agricultural, business and industrial leaders who are interested in economic development of the Northeast Louisiana area are invited to attend. Parishes represented will include Caldwell, Franklin, Jackson, Lincoln, Morehouse, Ouachita, Richland, Union, West Carroll, and Winn.

Sponsors of the program include Louisiana State University, the Louisiana State Chamber of Commerce and its members, and local groups interested in economic development.

Local arrangements for the conference are under direction of the Northeast Louisiana Area Planning Committee, including James Nicholson, dean of administration at Northeast College; J. J. Joyce, county agent for Ouachita parish; and Dr. James Bobo, dean of business administration at the College.

The conference program will include an address on the basic for economic development by Dr. Paul T. Hendershot, head of the economics department at Louisiana Polytechnic Institute; reports from parish economic development groups; a panel discussion, and workshop sessions on agriculture, forestry, finance and organization for development.

A luncheon with LSU President John A. Hunter as speaker will close the meeting. His topic will be "Economic Development: A Challenge in the Space Age."

Reports from parish development groups will be given by the following: Caldwell parish, Louis E. Floyd, president of the Columbia Lions Club; Franklin, W. O. Gwin, president of the Winnsboro Chamber of Commerce; Jackson, J. D. Koonce, parish superintendent of schools, Jonesboro; Lincoln, T. C. Beasley, president of Ruston Brick Works; Morehouse, Harold Runyon of Retail Implements, Bastrop.

Ouachita, Howard Griffin, chairman of the Monroe Chamber of Commerce industrial development committee; Richland, Lamar Bryant, general manager of Delcraft Industries, Delhi; Union, Royce B. Bird, vice president of the Farmerville Bank; West Carroll, D. N. Hamilton, president of West Carroll Industrial Development Corp., Oak Grove; Winn, District Judge Harwell L. Allen of Winnfield.

Participating in the panel will be Lamar Walters of Baton Rouge, executive vice president of the State Chamber of Commerce; Paul Ransom of Monroe, vice president of the Louisiana Farm Bureau Federation; C. H. Lewis Jr., of Alexandria, executive director of the Louisiana Forestry Association; Dr. Ralph T. Green, vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, Tex.; organization, James A. Butchart, chairman of the Central Mississippi Development District, Canton, Miss.

Chips From The Stump

Morrison

COLFAX (Special) — Gubernatorial candidate deLesseps Morrison said Saturday in his opinion the number one issue in the current campaign is the need for energetic leadership at state level.

"Sometimes things in government have to get pretty bad before they get better, and in Louisiana today things are really bad," Morrison said.

Stumping with members of his ticket through central Louisiana, Morrison said lack of leadership on the part of recent administrations, "is reflected over and over again in the problems confronting our state.

"Our massive unemployment, with more than 75,000 persons unable to find jobs, our educational system which ranks last in the nation, and an appalling political climate marked by favors for a chosen few and deals behind locked doors," Morrison said, "are examples of what lack of leadership does to a state."

He added that "only through strong leadership can these evils be corrected, because it is only through inept leadership, or lack of leadership, that these conditions can exist."

Morrison said he thought the people of Louisiana "are ready for a completely honest administration, and one with the proven ability to provide the type energetic leadership our state so sorely needs."

He said "Only the Morrison-Claude Duval team has such a record of demonstrated ability and demonstrated leadership."

Louisiana's unemployment problems can be solved only by finds new jobs, Morrison said, "which means attracting new industry, new payrolls. And to attract new industry we must have a stable political climate.

"This is going to mean rooting out the corruption, the waste and inefficiency and it means making certain that we are getting our money's worth from every tax dollar we spend," he added.

Morrison said recent administrations "have been more interested in taking care of themselves than in meeting the needs of our people.

"I can assure you that the Morrison-Duval ticket will put the needs of the people first, and I think you will be amazed at what can be accomplished under an honest, efficient administration," he said.

McKeithen

BASILE (Special) — Gubernatorial candidate John McKeithen promised here Saturday "An open door policy in the Governor's office."

McKeithen said, "One day a week the governor will be available for private conversation with each citizen in this state who feels he or she must see the governor. We're going to open the door to the governor's office so that on a face to face basis they can discuss their problems with him and no one is going to have to go through anyone to get in. It won't take influence and knowing some important person."

McKeithen also pledged: "A code of ethics by everyone in my administration and that includes the governor and his executive secretary right on down the line. It is inconceivable to me why any man should fear such a code of ethics if he is living up to his oath of office. We welcome a code of ethics just as I welcome the opportunity to sit down face to face with the citizens of this state. Government will once again hold its head high because government will be working for the betterment of all citizens and not a mere handful of chosen people."

McKeithen continued, "And we will immediately put into effect a central listing of all state employees so that each citizen will know not only who is employed by the state, but also their salaries and their duties. Government by secrecy and hidden lists just can't be government dedicated to the public good."

Kirkpatrick

PLAQUEMINE (Special) — Claude Kirpatrick. Independent candidate for governor speaking to the Sixth District Police Juror Convention in Plaquemine pointed out the need for cooperation between local and state officials.

Kirkpatrick said, "I would like to commend the juror system in Louisiana as the strongest remaining bulwark standing against centralized government. We must return many of the functions of the government, now being administered at the state level, and let the authority be vested in you as a juror you are possibly closer to the people than any other group of elected officials in Louisiana."

"Most of the parishes in the sixth district are growing very rapidly. This calls for much training at the local level. Much of our new industry is located outside of our city limits and thus comes in direct contact with our police juries. The same situation exists in many other sections of our lovely state. I urge every jury in Louisiana to cooperate with our industries and help them in any way possible. One new plant can mean hundreds of new jobs for the people, and there are several plants that are located in certain parishes simply because they felt they were wanted. Also keep in mind that you as a group, can mean much in aiding a better understanding between industry and government in Louisiana.

"Before I took leave from the department of public works, I had many opportunities to work with senators, representatives and police jurors from all over the state. I cooperated with you then because I know that it is the way to get the job done."

Passman

OAK GROVE (Special) — Congressman Otto E. Passman, stumping Saturday in the Fifth Congressional District in support of the Kennon-Dugas gubernatorial ticket, lashed out at "two candidates in this race for governor who are not only willing to misrepresent the facts, but to promise everything to everybody, everywhere, in their frantic bid for votes."

He said, however, the people were not being "taken in by these falsehoods and misrepresentations."

His references in this respect were made with regard to candidates Gillis Long and John McKeithen, both of whom, he said, are "going to practically any extreme and using practically any means, trying to get votes at any price."

Passman cited "several instances which have developed in the campaign" to document his assertions.

One was a disclaimer from McKeithen in which he had denied "any connection whatsoever" with the Kennedys, when the "actual facts," according to Passman, "completely refute these denials."

And, with reference to what he termed the "Kennedy brothers' civil rights bill, which is soon to be moved to the floor of the U.S. House of Representatives, he said Long's vote last January 9 to "pack" the House Rules Committeee will be a "major factor" in opening the way through the committee for passage of this "obnoxious, freedom - destroying legislation."

Passman cited Kennon's past record against the "liberal - socialist type of government which the Kennedys represent and this great man's solid accomplishments for our state — a record which is unsurpassed in Louisiana" as "our best hope for a brighter day."

He pointed out that Kennon is offering a "positive all-state program for good government, industrial and general economic development, and the defeat of the Kennedys," adding: "And surely these things are what we want and desperately need."

Kennon

RAYVILLE (Special) — Robert F. Kennon, governor of Louisiana from 1952 to 1956, said Saturday he would stand on his record of honesty, integrity and the important issues in his current campaign for governor.

"I will leave innuendo, rank untruths, and desperation to those who have nothing else to contribute in the campaign.

"You may be sure," Kennon warned, "that from now until December 7, all news media will be filled with rank misstatement of facts and gutter type politics."

"Already," Kennon said, "I have been accused of helping select Chief Justice Earl Warren, having a conflicting interest with the State of Louisiana, and have even been called a dummy candidate for the administration now in office, all of which are obvious untruths."

Kennon said he would continue to deal with the real issues in the campaign. "These include a good government program for Louisiana, industrial development and a diligent effort to remove the Kennedy administration from Washington," Kennon said.

He identified the three Kennedy candidates as deLesseps Morrison, Congressman Gillis Long, and John J. McKeithen, "all supporters of President Kennedy in 1960."

The former governor said the Kennon-Dugas ticket" goes well all over the state. My opponents know it and the people know it. We are running strong in every section of the state. There are no speculations about whether the Kennon-Dugas ticket will be in the run-off. Everybody knows we will be high, but there is much conjecture about which of the other candidates will be second."

"Many people ask me who I think will be in the run-off, but I frankly don't know because I don't know which one will get the bloc vote to be delivered by Martin Luther King," Kennon said. "all three of my major opponents have gotten the bloc vote before," Kennon stated.

Kennon and his running mate, Francis Dugas, candidate for Lt. governor were joined on the stump in the 5th district by Congressman Otto E. Passman, who lashed out at Washington liberalism and urged the voters to "vote for Judge Kennon, because he is the only man in this race who has an established record of opposition against the liberal trends in our national government. He offers a record, his opponents offer promises."

Long

BREAUX BRIDGE, La. (AP) —Rep. Gillis W. Long Saturday demanded that gubernatorial rival Robert Kennon withdraw from the race because of disclosure of his oil lease transactions with a member of the highway board under his former administration.

Long also said he wanted to know if there is any connection between Kennon's "getting an interest in 36 producing oil wells and his reducing the gasoline tax by two cents when he first took office."

On Friday, Kennon confirmed he had obtained oil interests in a tract of state land while he was governor. He said there was no conflict of interest.

Jackson

NAPOLEONVILLE, La. (AP) —Education Supt. Shelby Jackson said Saturday he would do all he could to promote commercial fishing if elected governor.

He said commercial fishing is a basic industry necessary to the state's prosperity "and we must protect it."

He promised to make the slogan "Sportsmen paradise," which is carried on state auto tags, "a reality."

McKEITHEN RALLY in Monroe Thursday night set an all-time record for Northeast Louisiana political gatherings. More than 4,000 supporters were on hand in an open air meeting at the corner of South 2nd Street and Ouachita Avenue. While similar crowds are turning out all over the state, McKeithen was especially gratified that such a tremendous showing was given him on home ground. In addition to outlining plans for State government, McKeithen continued to lash out at the Kennedy administration and sounded the war cry "Help McKeithen KO the Kennedys". Other speakers included his running mates, Ashton Mouton for Lt. Governor and Speedy Long, Insurance Commissioner. Mayor W. L. "Jack" Howard of Monroe introduced McKeithen and reiterated his reasons for his endorsement of the candidate. The program was emceed by James W. Moore, chairman for McKeithen forces in Ouachita Parish. Leon Johnston and Curtis Hensley were co-chairmen for the Rally.

Chips From The Stump

Morrison

COLFAX (Special) — Gubernatorial candidate deLesseps Morrison said Saturday in his opinion the number one issue in the current campaign is the need for energetic leadership at state level.

"Sometimes things in government have to get pretty bad before they get better, and in Louisiana today things are really bad," Morrison said.

Stumping with members of his ticket through central Louisiana, Morrison said lack of leadership on the part of recent administrations, "is reflected over and over again in the problems confronting our state.

"Our massive unemployment, with more than 75,000 persons unable to find jobs, our educational system which ranks last in the nation, and an appalling political climate marked by favors for a chosen few and deals behind locked doors," Morrison said, "are examples of what lack of leadership does to a state."

He added that "only through strong leadership can these evils be corrected, because it is only through inept leadership, or lack of leadership, that these conditions can exist."

Morrison said he thought the people of Louisiana "are ready for a completely honest administration, and one with the proven ability to provide the type energetic leadership our state so sorely needs."

He said "Only the Morrison-Claude Duval team has such a record of demonstrated ability and demonstrated leadership."

Louisiana's unemployment problems can be solved only by finds new jobs, Morrison said, "which means attracting new industry, new payrolls. And to attract new industry we must have a stable political climate.

"This is going to mean rooting out the corruption, the waste and inefficiency and it means making certain that we are getting our money's worth from every tax dollar we spend," he added.

Morrison said recent administrations "have been more interested in taking care of themselves than in meeting the needs of our people.

"I can assure you that the Morrison-Duval ticket will put the needs of the people first and I think you will be amazed at what can be accomplished under an honest, efficient administration," he said.

McKeithen

BASILE (Special) — Gubernatorial candidate John McKeithen promised here Saturday "An open door policy in the Governor's office."

McKeithen said, "One day a week the governor will be available for private conversation with each citizen in this state who feels he or she must see the governor. We're going to open the door to the governor's office so that on a face to face basis they can discuss their problems with him and no one is going to have to go through anyone to get in. It won't take influence and knowing some important person."

McKeithen also pledged: "A code of ethics by everyone in my administration and that includes the governor and his executive secretary right on down the line. It is inconceivable to me why any man should fear such a code of ethics if he is living up to his oath of office. We welcome a code of ethics just as I welcome the opportunity to sit down face to face with the citizens of this state. Government will once again hold its head high because government will be working for the betterment of all citizens and not a mere handful of chosen people."

McKeithen continued, "And we will immediately put into effect a central listing of all state employees so that each citizen will know not only who is employed by the state, but also their salaries and their duties. Government by secrecy and hidden lists just can't be government dedicated to the public good."

Kirkpatrick

PLAQUEMINE (Special) — Claude Kirpatrick. Independent candidate for governor speaking to the Sixth District Police Juror Convention in Plaquemine pointed out the need for cooperation between local and state officials.

Kirkpatrick said, "I would like to commend the juror system in Louisiana as the strongest remaining bulwark standing against centralized government. We must return many of the functions of the government, now being administered at the state level, and let the authority be vested in you as a juror you are possibly closer to the people than any other group of elected officials in Louisiana."

"Most of the parishes in the sixth district are growing very rapidly. This calls for much training at the local level. Much of our new industry is located outside of our city limits and thus comes in direct contact with our police juries. The same situation exists in many other sections of our lovely state. I urge every jury in Louisiana to cooperate with our industries and help them in any way possible. One new plant can mean hundreds of new jobs for the people, and there are several plants that are located in certain parishes simply because they felt they were wanted. Also keep in mind that you as a group, can mean much in aiding a better understanding between industry and government in Louisiana.

"Before I took leave from the department of public works, I had many opportunities to work with senators, representatives and police jurors from all over the state. I cooperated with you then because I know that it is the way to get the job done."

Passman

OAK GROVE (Special) — Congressman Otto E. Passman, stumping Saturday in the Fifth Congressional District in support of the Kennon-Dugas gubernatorial ticket, lashed out at "two candidates in this race for governor who are not only willing to misrepresent the facts, but to promise everything to everybody, everywhere, in their frantic bid for votes."

YEAR OF PEACE

War Atmosphere Lifts Over Algiers

ALGIERS (UPI) — Algiers, once the scene of terrorist killings and bombings and wanton destruction, now is peaceful.

The sick, heavy wartime atmosphere has lifted here and in other cities and villages. The people are easy in the streets and fields.

Authorities have been slow moving barbed-wire and sand bag fortifications from some key buildings. But there are fewer armed troops in the streets, and Moslems walk through "European" districts without fear of being gunned down in the back.

Algeria officially became independent July 5, 1962, and although there is still much to do, she has confounded most of her arch critics in the succeeding 12 months.

The streets of this city now are clean. There is no longer the smell of burning in the morning air. The ugly OAS slogans — standing for the pathetic, but dangerous Secret Army Organization (OAS) — have been painted over. Moslem apartments, ripped apart by OAS plastic bombs, are slowly being repaired.

PLAY IN STREETS

There is unemployment and some hunger. But Arab children play in the streets of Bab-El-Pued, the working class OAS "citadel." Their mothers hang washing in verandas from where 14 months ago OAS commandos fired on Arab civilians and French troops.

For nearly three years from 1954, the start of the Algerian revolutionary war, rebels of the Moslem National Liberation Front (FLN) terrorized Algiers' Europeans.

As the country fought inch - by inch toward indepence, the OAS sprung up and vowed to keep Algeria French. Led by disgruntled French army officers, it had the sympathy of most of country's Europeans.

In a vain but desperate attempt to make the Algerians fight back and thus forfeit in the yes of the French their right to self-rule, the OAS carried on a terrorist campaign with few annals in modern life.

But now the OAS is finished. Premier Ahmed Ben Bella, a "pragmatic socialist," is trying to build Algeria with one eye on the United Arab Republic (U.A.R.) of President Gamal Abdel Nasser and the other on the West, notably France.

Ben Bella remains popular in the country as a whole. His provincial trips are scenes of frantic welcomes from Algeria's peasants. He is truly Algeria's "hero" in the "bled," or countryside.

He works hard, lives simply, and gives the impression of capability, strength and goodness.

Within recent months, as the country's socialism moves forward, Ben Bella has nationalized some 4 million acres of farms and vineyards. Most of these were left vacant by fleeing Europeans. He also has taken over more than 600 small businesses, hotels and movie houses.

Certain factories have been handed over to the workers. But the banned Communist and Socialist revolutionary parties want more socialism. And so do most of the urban workers.

Unemployment remains high. There have been riots and demonstrations in western Algeria in the last few months by hungry workers.

All but about 60,000 of the estimated 1,100,000 Europeans who were here two years ago have left. Technicians have been hard to replace. Many industries closed down, throwing thousands out of work at short notice.

Mohammed Khider, once Ben Bella's chief aid, wants a larger part for the FLN, now the country's only political party, at the expense of the elected constituent assembly.

Another leading rebel, 44-year-old Mohammed Boudiaf, was arrested late in June on charges of trying to oust the premier. Boudiaf, who has trong support from the urban working classes, spent almost six years in French detention with Ben Bella during the revolutionary war, and hardly spoke to him for the last three of them.

Former Premier Youssef Ben Khedda, Belkacem Krim, guerrilla leader Silarbi — Ben Bella's opponents are numerous. But so far he has maintained tight control of the country with, in the background, Col. Houari Boumedienne, Algerian defense minister and commander of the 65,000 Algerian troops who spent most of the war in Tunisia and Morocco while the guerrillas carried the action to the French in Algeria.

Ben Bella is not blind to the immense work which lies before Algeria. His country recently reached agreement with France for important aid and also settled a growing dispute over the French and Algerian interests in the largely-French financed Sahara oil industry.

Ben Bella wants foreign investment and has openly appealed for it.

The United States has been a steady donor to the new republic. The Soviet Union, which support has been slow to respond, and Ben Bella's banning of the Communist party may have decided Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev to stay out.

But Bulgaria, Communist China, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia have provided aid in the form of food, arms and medical doctors.

1ST TON OF ORE

Floors Of Ocean Yielding Minerals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The ocean floors are beginning to give up some of their vast store of mineral treasure.

The first ton of ore ever "mined" from the deep sea bottom is now being analyzed.

Meanwhile, the shallower coastal seas in many parts of the world are being prospected or exploited — for diamonds, gold, silver, platinum, iron, tin, phosphorite.

Eventually, according to John Crawford of the Bureau of Mines, the sea is bound to yield a rich harvest of minerals which are becoming yearly more scarce on the continents.

Scientists know the ocean floors are strewn with wealth waiting only to be picked up. It is up to the mining engineers to locate it precisely, determine where the richest deposits are, and invent the machinery for bringing it economically to the surface.

To mine the deep sea will require development of a new technology. In some respects it will be almost as difficult, though hopefully not as costly, as flying to the moon. And it will be more immediately rewarding in terms of products useful to mankind.

The first ton of ore ever dredged up from the deep sea consisted of potato-sized nodules rich in manganese and containing varying amounts of iron, nickel, cobalt and copper.

It was recovered from a depth of 12,000 feet about 200 miles west - southwest of the tip of Mexico's Baja California last January by the Spencer F. Baird, a research vessel of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography.

The 2,000-pound "sample," which took about five days to dredge up, was obtained for the Bureau of Mines which is now studying it at the U.S. Metallurgy Center in Reno, Nevada.

Manganese nodules, a product of mysterious sea-water chemistry, grow on the bottom of all of the world's oceans. The richest deposits so far found are in the Pacific.

YEAR OF PEACE

War Atmosphere Lifts Over Algiers

ALGIERS (UPI) — Algiers, once the scene of terrorist killings and bombings and wanton destruction, now is peaceful.

The sick, heavy wartime atmosphere has lifted here and in other cities and villages. The people are easy in the streets and fields.

Authorities have been slow moving barbed-wire and sand bag fortifications from some key buildings. But there are fewer armed troops in the streets, and Moslems walk through "European" districts without fear of being gunned down in the back.

Algeria officially became independent July 5, 1962, and although there is still much to do, she has confounded most of her arch critics in the succeeding 12 months.

The streets of this city now are clean. There is no longer the smell of burning in the morning air. The ugly OAS slogans — standing for the pathetic, but dangerous Secret Army Organization (OAS) — have been painted over. Moslem apartments, ripped apart by OAS plastic bombs, are slowly being repaired.

PLAY IN STREETS

There is unemployment and some hunger. But Arab children play in the streets of Bab-El-Pued, the working class OAS "citadel." Their mothers hang washing in verandas from where 14 months ago OAS commandos fired on Arab civilians and French troops.

For nearly three years from 1954, the start of the Algerian revolutionary war, rebels of the Moslem National Liberation Front (FLN) terrorized Algiers' Europeans.

As the country fought inch - by inch toward indepence, the OAS sprung up and vowed to keep Algeria French. Led by disgruntled French army officers, it had the sympathy of most of country's Europeans.

In a vain but desperate attempt to make the Algerians fight back and thus forfeit in the yes of the French their right to self-rule, the OAS carried on a terrorist campaign with few annals in modern life.

But now the OAS is finished. Premier Ahmed Ben Bella, a "pragmatic socialist," is trying to build Algeria with one eye on the United Arab Republic (U.A.R.) of President Gamal Abdel Nasser and the other on the West, notably France.

Ben Bella remains popular in the country as a whole. His provincial trips are scenes of frantic welcomes from Algeria's peasants. He is truly Algeria's "hero" in the "bled," or countryside.

He works hard, lives simply, and gives the impression of capability, strength and goodness.

Within recent months, as the country's socialism moves forward, Ben Bella has nationalized some 4 million acres of farms and vineyards. Most of these were left vacant by fleeing Europeans. He also has taken over more than 600 small businesses, hotels and movie houses.

Certain factories have been handed over to the workers. But the banned Communist and Socialist revolutionary parties want more socialism. And so do most of the urban workers.

Unemployment remains high. There have been riots and demonstrations in western Algeria in the last few months by hungry workers.

All but about 60,000 of the estimated 1,100,000 Europeans who were here two years ago have left. Technicians have been hard to replace. Many industries closed down, throwing thousands out of work at short notice.

Mohammed Khider, once Ben Bella's chief aid, wants a larger part for the FLN, now the country's only political party, at the expense of the elected constituent assembly.

Another leading rebel, 44-year-old Mohammed Boudiaf, was arrested late in June on charges of trying to oust the premier. Boudiaf, who has trong support from the urban working classes, spent almost six years in French detention with Ben Bella during the revolutionary war, and hardly spoke to him for the last three of them.

Former Premier Youssef Ben Khedda, Belkacem Krim, guerrilla leader Silarbi — Ben Bella's opponents are numerous. But so far he has maintained tight control of the country with, in the background, Col. Houari Boumedienne, Algerian defense minister and commander of the 65,000 Algerian troops who spent most of the war in Tunisia and Morocco while the guerrillas carried the action to the French in Algeria.

Ben Bella is not blind to the immense work which lies before Algeria. His country recently reached agreement with France for important aid and also settled a growing dispute over the French and Algerian interests in the largely-French financed Sahara oil industry.

Ben Bella wants foreign investment and has openly appealed for it.

The United States has been a steady donor to the new republic. The Soviet Union, which supports has been slow to respond, and Ben Bella's banning of the Communist party may have decided Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev to stay out.

But Bulgaria, Communist China, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia have provided aid in the form of food, arms and medical doctors.

Georgia Senator Might Have Been President

EDITOR'S NOTE — If he hadn't been from Georgia, Dick Russell might have been President. Instead, he's digging in as head of the Southern senators who will try to talk to death President Kennedy's civil rights legislation.

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the opinion of many colleagues, the man who will bark the signals in the civil rights filibuster might have become President if he hadn't been from Georgia.

Because he is from Georgia, Sen. Richard Brevard Russell instead will command about 18 Southern senators who will try to talk to death President Kennedy's civil rights program.

The tall, balding senator with the George Washington nose will be pitting canny strategy and an unequalled knowledge of the Senate rules against an emotional surge generated by Negro demonstrations and police-dog reaction.

It remains problematical whether Russell's opponents can collect the necessary two-thirds approval of those voting and apply the cloture rule to end debate, thus killing off the filibuster.

Before that happens the cots may go up in the cloakrooms for around-the-clock sessions to test the stamina of Russell's troops.

Whatever the outcome, Dick Russell seems likely to retain his position as the most powerful individual in the Senate.

At 65, with 30 years of Senate service behind him, Russell remains the quiet, courtly gentleman who reflects his heritage as the bachelor son of a struggling country lawyer who rose to be chief justice of his state.

Russell can turn tiger on the Senate floor when he detects what he believes are unfair assaults on states rights. But his colleagues continue to respect him even as he shows his claws.

As a representative of moderate conservatism, Russell had two shots at his party's presidential nomination and was defeated in each largely because he was branded as too sectional.

In the 1948 convention which nominated President Harry S. Truman, Southerners piled up 263 protest votes for Russell, who wasn't even on hand. When many of his Southern brethern bolted, Russell stayed—silent but regular.

In 1952, the Georgia senator went after the nomination. The fact that he got only 292 out of about 1,200 votes demonstrated again that a man whose record and personality probably would have been acceptable had he hailed from the North, West or East could not surmount the political disadvantage of his ties to the South.

Philosophical about this, Russell maintains his party regularity despite his strong opposition to parts of his President's program.

"While I am always for those who are running on the Democratic ticket," he said, "I must confess that I have had varying degrees of enthusiasm for various candidates on the ticket."

Russell helped campaign for the Kennedy-Johnson ticket in 1960. But even the persuasive powers of his longtime friend and close associate, Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson, may not be enough to get him into the 1964 campaign after the President's civil rights stand.

The senator didn't mince words in denouncing Kennedy or his legislative program, with emphasis on the section which would enforce desegregation on privately-owned businesses which serve the public.

"The President of the United States has a higher call to leadership than to use threats of mass violence and disregard of reasonable local laws as a means of securing action in the courts and Congress, however desirable he may regard it to be," he said.

And on the accommodations section: "If the commerce clause will sustain an act to compel the white owner of a dining hall to accept a Negro against his wishes, it can be used to sustain the validity of legislation that will compel his admittance into the living room or bedroom of any citizen."

Outside the field of civil rights, Russell is a man to be reckoned with on national issues. When he speaks, the Senate listens.

When it votes, the stand he takes is influential—if not always decisive.

Russell looks upon the Senate as the greatest stabilizing force in preserving our Constitution. He cherishes the Senate's traditions as the last world body of free debate.

Moreover, he is a charter member of the inner circle, where "Check it with Dick" is a frequently used phrase when controversial legislation is at hand.

As chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee and high ranking membership on the appropriations and space committees, as well as the Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee, he has a finger on almost every government activity.

NO THANK YOU NO

Thank you for calling, but I'm not running for Police Jury membership in Ward two. And as long as we have a man like I think Leland Carpenter is I'll never interfere.

Town Past Colorful

Mt. Lebanon thrived in the days of stagecoaches, but its fortunes faded when the railroad was routed around it. Here is a glimpse at its colorful past and the people who played an important role in its early days.

By MARY ANNE CORPIN

Staff Writer

Mt. Lebanon, La. has a population of 100 people today. A century ago there were more than that number of slaves on just one farm in the community.

The railroad changed the destiny of the town, located just south of Gibsland in Bienville parish.

"When the railroad went through, it missed Mt. Lebanon by three miles. Everything went up to the railroad."

Mrs. William Woods of 103 Carolina St., Monroe, was speaking. At 74, she still recalls her grandmother who ran a stagecoach house at Mt. Lebanon — the changeover point for east-west travelers.

BETTER SHAPE

The house still stands, in better shape now than when it was built 116 years ago.

For the past 59 years, annual reunions of the descendants of Capt. and Mrs. Jesse Smith have taken place in the house. This year's reunion doubled the town's population for one day— they came from Texas, Louisiana and Virginia.

Only an old church and a few homes remain — "no stores, not even a post office."

Once the town had a future. It was founded by settlers from South Carolina in 1835-36.

The names of the 15 men who established the first permanent homes there have been carried on by residents throughout north Louisiana: Martin Canfield, George Rogers, Dr. Jaspar Gibbs, Hiram Gibbs, Dr. Quarbes, Tandy Key, William Key, William Thurmond, M. Ardis, George Brown, E. Hardy, W. B. Prothro, Reuben Drake, Joseph Canfield and John Canfield.

FAMILY MOVED

In October, 1848, Jesse and Emily Smith and their six children moved from a plantation near Macon, Ga. to Mt. Lebanon.

The 500 - mile trip overland in wagons took two months.

They lived at Black Lake, five miles west of Mt. Lebanon. Seven more children were born, and Smith built a schoolhouse and brought in a teacher.

In those days, the mail was brought in once a week by horseback.

Stagecoaches came through Mt. Lebanon from Trenton (now West Monroe) to Shreveport. Horses were changed at the Smith Crossing, and passengers were served meals at the Smith farm house, until the route changed in 1853.

Robert A. Smith was 20, and the eldest son of the family, when the Civil War erupted in 1861. He had attended Centenary college at Jackson and had his degree from Homer college.

Monroe, La., Nov. 10, 1963 1-B

He enlisted in February, 1862, served under Gen. Stonewall Jackson and was wounded at the Battle of Gettysburg.

During the same year, Jesse Smith died from pneumonia and his widow was left with their children and 10 other orphaned children of friends and relatives.

They were near enough to hear gunfire from the Battle of Mansfield. Northern soldiers marched through, taking with them meat, mules and cotton. The family was left almost destitute.

GUNFIRE from the Battle of Mansfield could be heard at the Jesse Smith family home.

The 100 slaves chose to stay with the Smiths, although they were freed in 1865.

But the next year, a hail storm destroyed the farm buildings and livestock, and the state took most of the land for taxes.

Overwhelming misfortune forced Mrs. Smith to give up the farm and move to Mt. Lebanon where she boarded young ladies from a female academy.

The township, incorporated in 1835, included the first newspaper published in Bienville parish, known first as the Bienville Times and then the Louisiana Baptist.

The Baptist State Convention had been organized there in 1847 with 13 members. Ten years before that, the first post office was established. Earliest mail came in by private carriers, and postage for one letter cost 25 cents.

K. P. McDaniel was the first mayor in 1853 when the town was incorporated.

In the downtown area were the Methodist church, Bagley home, Parnell shop, Masonic lodge, Key store house, Dr. Egan's office, C. G. Thurmond's store house, Col. Rogers' home, Martin Canfield's home, Sandy Key house, Baptist church, M. Ardis home, Dr. Quarbes' house, Gibbs' store, Stahl's shoe shop, the printing office, and the homes of Dr. Courtney and Reuben Drake. Several adjacent farms were included in the township.

The town was laid off from an 80-yard-wide central street called the parallelogram.

At one time or another, a brick yard, tannery, and textile factory were located there.

Mt. Lebanon University was founded in 1852, burned in 1885 and was re-built as Mt. Lebanon College in 1886.

CAMPUS COVERED OVER

It was moved to Pineville in 1909 and now is known as Louisiana College. The old campus became covered with underbrush and trees.

Soon after Mrs. Smith moved her large family to Mt. Lebanon, her sons purchased a house constructed in 1847 by Reuben Drake.

The stages were re-routed through Mt. Lebanon in 1873. Horses again were changed at the Smith house and passengers ate dinner there.

Mrs. Nona Levins, who died in 1932, was the youngest child of Capt. and Mrs. Smith.

She wrote later: "When the stage route was changed to come through Mt. Lebanon, we boarded the men and horses and gave dinner to the passengers. This was about halfway between Shreveport and Monroe and the east and west bound stages passed here about noon.

"Later the schedule was changed and they passed here in the night, and many times I have gotten up to let people have beds.

FOUR HORSES

"These stages were drawn by four big horses and the driver rode outside on a high seat.

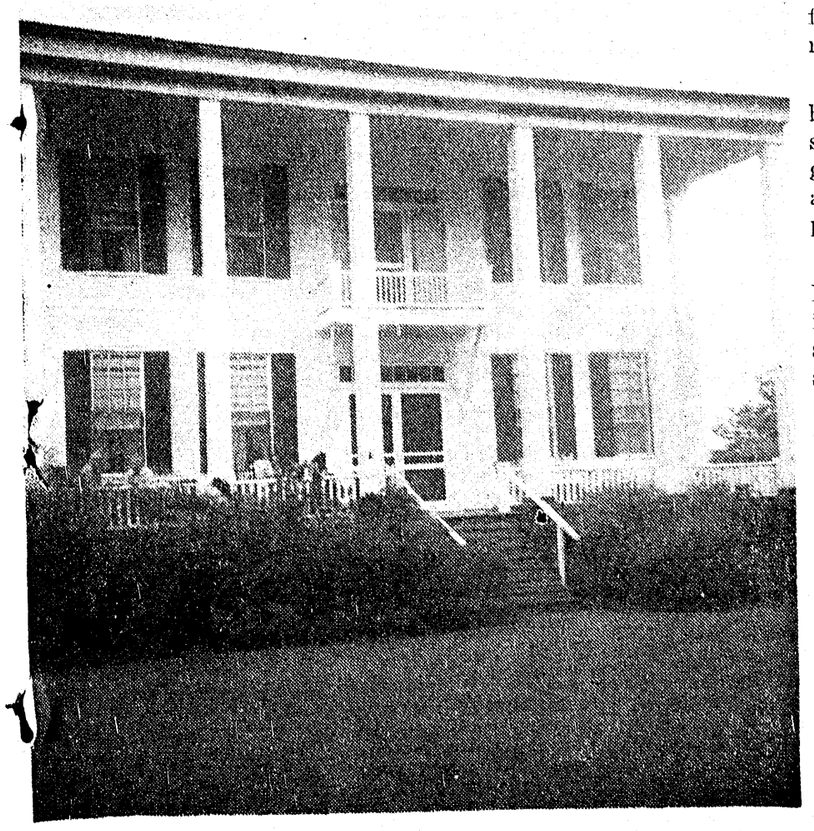
"He would blow his bugle as he came into the village and the small boys and curious old men got pleasure from seeing the stage and passengers as it came to the post office."

Mrs. Levins also wrote: "Mt. Lebanon was an important place in those days. We had the best stores in the parish and the best schools, and the people were intelligent and stood for law and order."

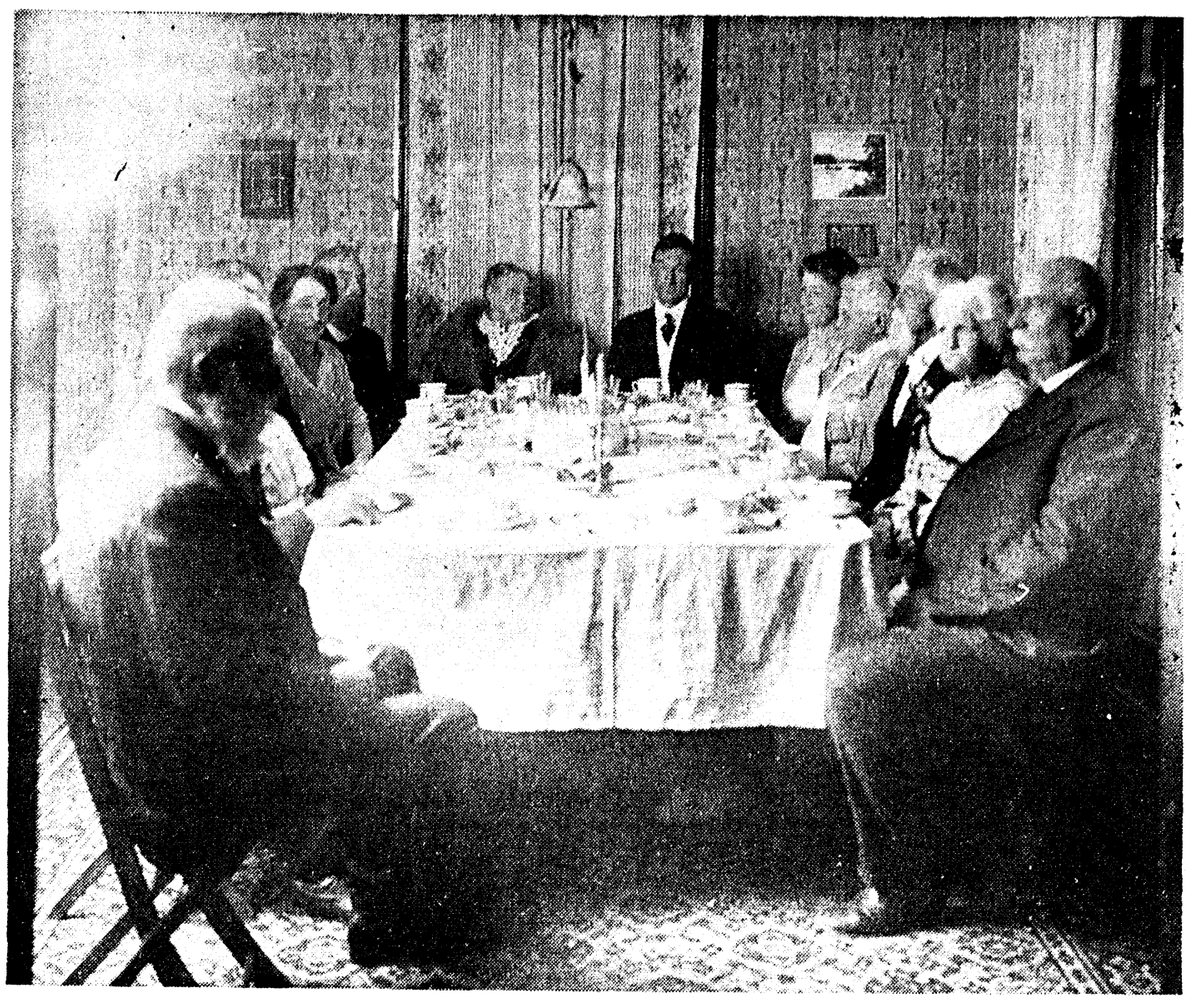
Jesse and Emily Smith's oldest son Robert, was elected president of Mt. Lebanon University in 1872, then served as president of Trenton Institute at Trenton, president of Homer College and superintendent of the public school at Monroe.

He organized the E. A. Seminary at Arcadia in 1883.

Mt. Lebanon had a public school system until 1927 when the school board moved the school to Gibsland.



SMITH HOME SITE, now 116-years-old, is one of the few buildings still standing in the little community of Mt. Lebanon, La.



INTERIOR OF SMITH FAMILY HOUSE is shown in this photograph taken at Mr. and Mrs. Robert Smith's 50th wedding anniversary in 1916. At reunions, the family ate at the dining room table in "shifts," according to age groups. Mrs. William Wood of Monroe, a granddaughter of the original settlers, recalls how as a child she and the other youngsters "spent our time trying on everybody's hats while they were eating." Robert Smith was her father's oldest brother.

INVESTMENT

Before the Civil War, Capt. Smith invested $64,000 in the Vicksburg, Monroe, Shreveport and Texas Railroad. Tracks were laid from Monroe to Vicksburg and the railroad began operation in 1857.

During the war, the Union army seized it, and the firm was sold in 1865. Bond holders sued to recover their investments. The case was finally decided in 1881— but not for full refunds. Capt. Smith's family recovered $10,000.

A new survey located the railroad three miles north of Mt. Lebanon. Tracks were completed in 1883.

This meant the end of the stage coach route. Mt. Lebanon began its gradual decline.

Today, the little town drowses at the intersection of Louisiana highways 89 and 418, in the northern part of the parish.

The town is shown on the official map of Louisiana — and Rand McNally Commercial Atlas of 1963 lists its current population.

But the 1960 census of population of the U. S. Department of Commerce fails to include the community, and as far as the Encyclopaedia Brittanica World Atlas is concerned, the town doesn't exist.

FAMILY REUNION . . .

The Smith family reunion is held once a year, in the house constructed of select heart pine by slaves now long dead.

The 12-inch sills and handmade square nails are still in good condition. The house had been improved on, and is painted white.

The structure sits high above the earth, and the ground-level section where horses were sheltered still remains.

At the last reunion, the baby dress worn by Emily Smith in 1819 was displayed — still in perfect condition.

Nearby is the Mt. Lebanon cemetery. Thirteen soldiers of the Confederacy lie buried there, as is "Uncle Wess" Gladscow, described as "an old darkie who had a blacksmith shop.

"Uncle Wess was respected by all and when he died at an advanced age, all business was closed and his white friends attended the burial," Mrs. Levins wrote.

Annual meetings of the Mt. Lebanon cemetery association draw descendants from throughtout the state. They are old-time affairs, with dinner on the grounds and a day of work.

Graves of the Confederate soldiers went unmarked until 1924, when small stones and a larger central marker were purchased. "On July 10, 1924," recalled Mrs. Levins, "we had a celebration and dinner there and set up these stones."

ROBERT A. SMITH, eldest son of Capt. and Mrs. Jesse Smith, fought for the Confederacy in the Civil War. Here, he is shown with his wife, the former Anna G. Dunham, when they observed their 50th wedding anniversary in 1916.

Town Past Colorful

Mt. Lebanon thrived in the days of stagecoaches, but its fortunes faded when the railroad was routed around it. Here is a glimpse at its colorful past and the people who played an important role in its early days.

By MARY ANNE CORPIN

Staff Writer

Mt. Lebanon, La. has a population of 100 people today. A century ago there were more than that number of slaves on just one farm in the community.

The railroad changed the destiny of the town, located just south of Gibsland in Bienville parish.

"When the railroad went through, it missed Mt. Lebanon by three miles. Everything went up to the railroad."

Mrs. William Woods of 103 Carolina St., Monroe, was speaking. At 74, she still recalls her grandmother who ran a stagecoach house at Mt. Lebanon — the changeover point for east-west travelers.

BETTER SHAPE

The house still stands, in better shape now than when it was built 116 years ago.

For the past 59 years, annual reunions of the descendants of Capt. and Mrs. Jesse Smith have taken place in the house. This year's reunion doubled the town's population for one day— they came from Texas, Louisiana and Virginia.

Only an old church and a few homes remain — "no stores, not even a post office."

Once the town had a future. It was founded by settlers from South Carolina in 1835-36.

The names of the 15 men who established the first permanent homes there have been carried on by residents throughout north Louisiana: Martin Canfield, George Rogers, Dr. Jaspar Gibbs, Hiram Gibbs, Dr. Quarbes, Tandy Key, William Key, William Thurmond, M. Ardis, George Brown, E. Hardy, W. B. Prothro, Reuben Drake, Joseph Canfield and John Canfield.

FAMILY MOVED

In October, 1848, Jesse and Emily Smith and their six children moved from a plantation near Macon, Ga. to Mt. Lebanon.

The 500 - mile trip overland in wagons took two months.

They lived at Black Lake, five miles west of Mt. Lebanon. Seven more children were born, and Smith built a schoolhouse and brought in a teacher.

In those days, the mail was brought in once a week by horseback.

Stagecoaches came through Mt. Lebanon from Trenton (now West Monroe) to Shreveport. Horses were changed at the Smith Crossing, and passengers were served meals at the Smith farm house, until the route changed in 1853.

Robert A. Smith was 20, and the eldest son of the family, when the Civil War erupted in 1861. He had attended Centenary college at Jackson and had his degree from Homer college.

He enlisted in February, 1862, served under Gen. Stonewall Jackson and was wounded at the Battle of Gettysburg.

During the same year, Jesse Smith died from pneumonia and his widow was left with their children and 10 other orphaned children of friends and relatives.

They were near enough to hear gunfire from the Battle of Mansfield. Northern soldiers marched through, taking with them meat, mules and cotton. The family was left almost destitute.

GUNFIRE from the Battle of Mansfield could be heard at the Jesse Smith family home.

The 100 slaves chose to stay with the Smiths, although they were freed in 1865.

But the next year, a hail storm destroyed the farm buildings and livestock, and the state took most of the land for taxes.

The Great $5.32 Oil Override

Sooner or later someone was certain to come forth with some supposedly "terrible scandal" about some candidate in the present Democratic gubernatorial primary.

Some one always does, in Louisiana primaries, so, on Friday, came "the great revelation."

Here it is:

Former Governor Robert F. Kennon owns an override on mineral rights of some state bottoms land of Caddo Lake (an area known as Ferry Lake).

Not one cent of state revenue is involved in Mr. Kennon's financial interest, which is a mere pittance but "oil leases", "state", "Kennon" are jumbled together in the hope someone will think something is wrong. Actually the attempts to discredit was aimed at Mr. Kennon because he is a front-runner in the present gubernatorial primary. Naturally, it had its inception, we understand, in the camp of a candidate predicted to run fourth or fifth.

"The great revelation" gives all of the supposedly "scandalous details." The land involved totals 6,500 acres. Thirty - six wells have been drilled on it.

Reading "the great revelation," the public mind might go back to the 1920 - 1930 era, when state officials and their friends gave leases on lush and virgin oil land to "dummy" corporations or "dummy" individuals. These, in turn, made legal sales of the mineral rights to oil companies at huge profits for the "dummies," the state itself, meaning the people of Louisiana, were the losers of what the dummies gained.

The Facts Listed

The public mind, on reading about a "Kennon override" on 6,500 acres and 36 oil wells, also might figure that, well, an oil well ought to be worth at least a million dollars and 36 of them—gee whiz, 36 million dollars.

But, what are the facts about this "terrible Kennon override?"

Mr. Kennon made public his profits and other details on the deal very quickly Friday. For example:

1. Over the half a dozen or more years that Mr. Kennon has held the override, the average yield has been $10 a month.

2. During the last two years, royalty payments to him from the override have averaged less than $4 a month.

3. Mr. Kennon's royalties for the past three months, plus the first ten days of the present month of November have been $5.32.

4. Not one cent of the state's revenue from the mineral rights ever was affected by the "Kennon override." Thus there could not possibly have been any "conflict on interest."

So, Mr. Kennon Friday offered his override for sale to anyone who will give him a hundred dollars and pay the cost of transfer fees. Up to now there have been no takers.

We don't believe there will be any . . . .

Who wants to pay a hundred dollars for an oil override that yields $5.32 in royalties in a period of more than three months?

No Revelation

Actually, "the great revelation" is no revelation at all. To the personal knowledge of the World at least six daily newspapers of the state have been made aware in the past few months that this particular Kennon override was on the official books in the Caddo parish courthouse and urged to "go into it" — meaning to try to make some political hay out of it.

Finally, the dull details were "integrated" into black printer's ink on white newsprint paper.

The records of the original lease by the Caddo Parish Levee Board to Gulf Oil have been available to anyone who wanted to see them since 1910 — when Mr. Kennon was eight years old. That lease was 45 years old when Mr. Kennon first got into an override. The Kennon override was on a sublease by Gulf to a private citizen in 1955 which, like the original lease, was fully inspected by the state minerals board to see that the state's royalty interests were protected. They were and are now, in the sublease as they were in the original lease. The override does not affect any state interest of any kind and the state has no interest in it.

The original lease in 1910 was between Gulf and the state. The sublease in 1955 was between Gulf as a private company and a private Caddo Parish citizen. The override was a private transaction between the Caddo citizen and Mr. Kennon. State revenue was never involved in the override in any way.

As a windup if anyone wants a minerals right sublease override yielding, as of now, $5.32 in three months, Mr. Kennon has one for sale for $100 and filing costs.

So, what has "the great revelation" revealed? Not even "much ado about nothing" as Mr. Kennon says; just very little ado about anything.

Deficit Spending

Monroe, La.

To the Editor

One column in this morning's World caught my attention beyond any other. The president is asking for a new and higher debt ceiling. I have mentioned more than once that if I ran my own business in as sloppy a manner as this country is mishandled, I would be bankrupt in no time. It seems odd that a majority of the Congress cannot see this. Possibly it is because they receive their raises in pay pretty often, in spite of the condition of the rest of the nation.

I do not object to anyone receiving a good salary for services rendered, but there is the question of service — I believe there are several in the "Gravy Train" who do not care much what happens, as long as they can keep their own, and their family's feet in the trough. This is not only in national government, it is the same here in this state.

Since I am a taxpayer every year, but a voter, (citizen) only once every four years, I really have room to say what I think of conditions. Now, with so many running for office in the Democratic Primary, it seems that politics, whether of the local or state or national plane, is getting to be one of the most lucrative places one can nest in.

Of all the candidates for governor, as well as other state posts, I have not heard much of what has been done in the present administration — although I believe the people as a whole should remember what has been done, and, so doing, vote to see that such blundering does not happen again. I am referring to what is termed the governor's mansion. Of all the dirty deals handed the people lately, this one caps them all. Two weeks ago there was an article from Baton Rouge, stating there would be an extra $150,000 added to the cost of this monstrosity making it amount to roughly a million, one hundred fifty thousand of the taxpayer's dollars.

I have spent almost all of my life in construction, and, I will make this statement — A home for any incumbent could be built, suitable and fit, for the $150,000, thus saving the people a million for better use — some of it could have been put to good use here for a better water supply. I wonder if there are rooms for the riding horse in this mansion!!!

As for this "Democratic primary", it is useless and costly. Quite a few cannot vote in primary balloting, and, even after the primary, sometimes there is a runoff, even after the election, making three times voting as well as the cost of each election. A general primary would help, but to my way of thinking, no primary is necessary. Let all the people vote, not just those who voted for Kennedy.

Thanks For Treats

To the Editor:

As chairman of the "Share the Treats" program for the North Monroe Kiwanis Club I would like to use your "Letters to the Editor" column as a media to thank you for your assistance in making the effort a success. We do sincerely appreciate the publicity you gave the program.

The very biggest word of thanks must go, however, to the teachers and students in the elementary schools in the city school system, plus Lakeshore and Good Shepherd schools. Without such a sharing spirit "Share the Treats" would never have gotten off the ground. Thanks again to you and the teachers and a really big thanks to the children of Monroe for Sharing.

Sincerely,
Roy Jones, Chairman
Boys and Girls Work Committee

RALPH DE TOLEDANO

Soul-Searching In Vote Results

AROUND THE COUNTRY, at Democratic and Republican headquarters, the Wednesday morning quarterbacks are busily at work trying to find a design to Tuesday's elections. (The difference between a Monday morning quarterback and a Wednesday morning quarterback is that the latter usually played in the game).

This year, there will be a great deal of soul searching — more than usual — because of the changing nature of the nation's electoral patterns. Even when all the figures are in and tabulated (a tedious but necessary job) it may not be possible to be categorial about what happened across the country last Tuesday.

A case in point in the Philadelphia election. President Kennedy took a great risk in campaigning for the Democratic incumbent, Mayor James Tate. But Mr. Tate's margin of victory was an unimpressive 67,000 votes in a city which President Kennedy carried by some 331,500 votes in 1960. At the start of the campaign, it was freely predicted that Mayor Tate would romp in with a plurality of 150,000 to 200,000.

What the political analysts must now determine is this: Would Mayor Tate have lost without Mr. Kennedy's intervention? Or did the President's appearance before cool and meager crowds in Philadelphia hurt the Democratic candidate? The pundits must answer another question: Was the Philadelphia result in any way abnormal or is it part of a continuing trend in urban voting?

THIS IS THE BIG one. A careful study of 1962 election results showed that the power of the big cities in national elections was diminishing. The new election power centers are the suburbs. Therefore, a Democratic victory in a Philadelphia or Indianapolis election may loom large in the headlines, but it does not strengthen the national party. When a city like Philadelphia begins to whittle down its Democratic pluralities, it is a real matter for concern to the Administration.

The pundits will have themselves a time analyzing the New Jersey vote. The Republicans increased their majority in the State Senate and recaptured the Assembly. Democratic Governor Hughes suffered a series of defeats, such as the rejection of his $750 million bond issue — and Democratic candidates fell by the wayside in "safe" constituencies. Again the questions: Was this simply the return to Republicanism of a state once firmly in the GOP column? Was it a reproach to President Hughes? Did civil rights play a part?

Certainly the Negro issue entered the picture in Kentucky, but the political analysts will have a rough time coming to any conclusions about is potency there. A Goldwater Republican, Louis Nunn ran surprisingly strong, being edged out by a flimsy 16,000 votes and with talk of vote fraud in the air. Edward Breathit, the Democratic victor, represented the liberal wing of his party in a state which has leaned in that direction. The Kentucky race, therefore, would indicate that the Goldwater position on civil rights is acceptable to those who advocated racial militancy in the past. But to confuse the pundits, the Republican candidate got a large vote in some Negro wards — to the surprise of the professionals.

THE KENTUCKY results are already being read as an omen of Goldwater strength in Southern and border states — and with some reservations as an indication that the resentment to the President's civil rights program cuts deep outside of the conservative South. Those Negro wards, however, are puzzling.

Also in the Department of Bewilderment are the results in Indiana where a Democrat narrowly defeated a Republican for mayor of Indianapolis in the face of a statewide sweep in which the GOP grabbed control of 15 of the state's 25 city halls. Here, a liberal Democrat won where, in the past, conservative Democrats usually were elected with Republican help.

Throughout the nation, this helter-skelter of ideologies and candidates seemed to prevail. Did it prove anything? For those who got elected, certainly. As usual, they could point to their sterling qualities as the cause. In the Rockfeller-Goldwater stakes? In the Kennedy versus the GOP choice? At this point, the wise man will say, you pays your money . . . If it proves anything, it is that the nation is going through a political adjustment which will become increasingly apparent in 1964 and will be clearly delineated by 1968.

How Do You Stand, Sir?

By BARRY GOLDWATER

U.S. Senator From Arizona

NO AREA OF OUR economy has been treated with less respect or been more shockingly maligned and abused by political power enthusiasts than American agriculture.

Consider for a moment the impact of politics upon the American farmer.

The ridiculous imbalance of economic concepts has brought American agriculture to a potentially disastrous revamping of its institutional structure. Fundamentally, the farm problem which we are functioning under was developed during a period of economic stress.

Minor changes in this policy notwithstanding, government planners have managed to foist upon us an acceptance of the illusion that the federal government should either fix prices on certain commodities or exert a maximum influence upon them.

During the economic upswing that followed World War II and Korea, the farmers proved a significant and disturbing exception to the rule of general prosperity. The reason for this was that we followed too closely the policies of earlier years. We did not allow for readjustments in the agricultural economy as a result of generally-improved conditions.

CONSEQUENTLY, DESPITE the application of practically every conceivable government program for agriculture, the farmers have been more hurt than helped by Washington - inspired directives.

Added to this bureaucratic confusion, and perhaps aided and abetted by it, is the rapidly - decreasing farm population. How such a confused and deteriorating situation could occur at a time when technological revolution offers so much hope and inspiration is a challenge to us all.

There may be a host of answers to this problem. Not being blessed with an intricate knowledge of farming, I don't pretend to offer any series of formulae which would satisfy the total agricultural needs of our country.

This much I can say. A man farms his land in order to provide crops to sell at the marketplace and to reap a maximum of profit for himself. He is, therefore, no different from the shopkeeper, the barber, the restaurant owner or any of the myriad of other types of people who derive their living from the provision of goods and services to the consuming public.

THE FARMER AND his small business counterpart in the urban areas depend for their livelihood upon the laws of supply and demand. Logically, the government's role in their affairs must be a minor one. Subsidy crutches remove them from the competitive pattern of the economy and make of them nothing less than pawns of government.

On the other hand, a minimum of restrictions on farm production and marketing will permit the farmer a maximum of dependence on free markets as the best guide to production and consumption. The truth is that politics and agriculture don't mix. Politics means government, and whenever government starts doing things for people in any walk of life, it automatically and unavoidably takes from them certain rights.

At the present time, the government is attempting to control the law of supply and demand through the use of detrimental legislation. Agriculture suffers, and the resultant expense is ruinous to both farmers and consumers.

This is contrary to the bent of our farmers, just as it is contrary to the bent of all Americans. No one wants something for nothing. To be paid for not producing, to have opportunity and incentive destroyed, is not giving the farmer the right of free choice.

How do you stand, sir?

Ridiculous Charges

Charges by a couple of state legislators that the Public Affairs Research Council (PAR) released its report calling for an overhaul of the state's scholarship grants to students in private schools in a manner intended to help a political candidate are utterly ridiculous and absurd. They are, in themselves, an effort to play politics during a red hot 10 - man gubernatorial Democratic Primary, although any effort to put even a touch of political complexion on the case is far fetched.

PAR's report showed that the millions of dollars Louisiana's taxpayers are putting up for private school scholarship grants as a means of making segregated education available in areas where schools have been desegregated by federal court orders are being misused in some instances, spent unwisely in others, and may not be providing — in many instances — education comparable to that given in the public schools of the state; this, although the educational grants to students going to private schools are much larger than the average annual amount of money per student given to public school districts by the state.

The school grants system is administrated by the Louisiana Financial Assistance Commission (LFAC), created by the Legislature for that purpose. Originally the grants system was administrated by the state board of education. PAR thinks administration should be returned to the state board. State Representative Lantz Womack, of Franklin Parish, vice chairman of LFAC, says this should not be done. Further, he says that PAR may have released its report at this time — 30 days ahead of the Democratic Party primary voting for governor — to help one or more candidates in that primary. State Senator T. W. Gravolet, LFAC chairman, joined Mr. Womack in contending that LFAC should not be abolished and administration of the grants turned back to the state board, as PAR recommended.

As to whether the grant system should be under the state board or under the present special commission, the World is not prepared to express an opinion at the moment. It is unimportant at the moment — to PAR as well as to the public. It is merely one single and minor sentence in the PAR report.

What is important is PAR revelation that public tax money intended to help give Louisiana children segregated education where they want it is not being spent, in some instances, effectively for that purpose; that these children may not be getting, under the grants system, the education they should have; and that the whole grant system is being abused for individual financial gain of some private schools and some children in some private schools.

This is something that should have full investigation and full revelation. LFAC should have been looking into it a long, long time ago and not waiting for PAR to point out what is going on. Both Senator Gravolet and Rep. Womack should get busy checking on misuse or waste of the taxpayers' money instead of arguing around about whether PAR should have released its report at this particular moment.

As for the effort of Rep. Womack to tie the release of the report—the timing of the release—into the gubernatorial primary, obviously he is accusing PAR of trying to help gubernatorial candidate Chep Morrison. In one of those brief TV taped campaign statements all candidates use, Mr. Morrison said he would see that the state grants were administered properly and that he thought the state board should do the job. Also, Mr. Morrison is a Catholic and there are a lot of Catholic schools and the public could get all mixed up on all of this. Religion is not in any way involved in the state grant system or the PAR report.

The World certainly holds no brief for Mr. Morrison in this campaign. We are opposing him and supporting Robert F. Kennon, as every World reader knows. He is one of three of the upper bracket candidates for governor who have Kennedy brush marks on them — John McKeithen and Gillis Long being the other two — and with all three vehemently denouncing President Kennedy and his administration at the present time.

Mr. McKeithen took part in money raising for the Louisiana Fifth District Kennedy - Democratic campaign in 1960.

Mr. Long is now an assistant whip for the Kennedy - Democratic party in the House of Representatives at Washington; he voted also to retain packing of the House Rules Committee which was done originally to grease the tracks for Kennedy racial and socialistic legislation.

Mr. Morrison was the President's own ambassador to Latin America (to the Organization of American States) and he upheld the president's policies — including Cuba — right up to the time he announced for governor.

Mr. Kennon, on the other hand, fought Trumanism and Adlai Stevensonism as far back as 1952 and has been fighting the undesirable "isms" of the National Democratic Party ever since.

Nevertheless, the World looks on this effort to try to tie the timing of release of a PAR report on documented spending of public tax money in the administration of school grants into politics — Morrison politics or otherwise — as about the most ridiculous thing that has ever come forth from a Louisiana Legislator. And some Louisiana Legislators really have reached high peaks of ridiculousness in times past.

The Great $5.32 Oil Override

Sooner or later someone was certain to come forth with some supposedly "terrible scandal" about some candidate in the present Democratic gubernatorial primary.

Some one always does, in Louisiana primaries, so, on Friday, came "the great revelation."

Here it is:

Former Governor Robert F. Kennon owns an override on mineral rights of some state bottoms land of Caddo Lake (an area known as Ferry Lake).

Not one cent of state revenue is involved in Mr. Kennon's financial interest, which is a mere pittance but "oil leases", "state", "Kennon" are jumbled together in the hope someone will think something is wrong. Actually the attempts to discredit was aimed at Mr. Kennon because he is a front-runner in the present gubernatorial primary. Naturally, it had its inception, we understand, in the camp of a candidate predicted to run fourth or fifth.

"The great revelation" gives all of the supposedly "scandalous details." The land involved totals 6,500 acres. Thirty - six wells have been drilled on it.

Reading "the great revelation," the public mind might go back to the 1920 - 1930 era, when state officials and their friends gave leases on lush and virgin oil land to "dummy" corporations or "dummy" individuals. These, in turn, made legal sales of the mineral rights to oil companies at huge profits for the "dummies," the state itself, meaning the people of Louisiana, were the losers of what the dummies gained.

The Facts Listed

The public mind, on reading about a "Kennon override" on 6,500 acres and 36 oil wells, also might figure that, well, an oil well ought to be worth at least a million dollars and 36 of them—gee whiz, 36 million dollars.

But, what are the facts about this "terrible Kennon override?"

Mr. Kennon made public his profits and other details on the deal very quickly Friday. For example:

1. Over the half a dozen or more years that Mr. Kennon has held the override, the average yield has been $10 a month.

2. During the last two years, royalty payments to him from the override have averaged less than $4 a month.

3. Mr. Kennon's royalties for the past three months, plus the first ten days of the present month of November have been $5.32.

4. Not one cent of the state's revenue from the mineral rights ever was affected by the "Kennon override." Thus there could not possibly have been any "conflict on interest."

So, Mr. Kennon Friday offered his override for sale to anyone who will give him a hundred dollars and pay the cost of transfer fees. Up to now there have been no takers.

We don't believe there will be any . . . .

Who wants to pay a hundred dollars for an oil override that yields $5.32 in royalties in a period of more than three months?

No Revelation

Actually, "the great revelation" is no revelation at all. To the personal knowledge of the World at least six daily newspapers of the state have been made aware in the past few months that this particular Kennon override was on the official books in the Caddo parish courthouse and urged to "go into it" — meaning to try to make some political hay out of it.

Finally, the dull details were "integrated" into black printer's ink on white newsprint paper.

The records of the original lease by the Caddo Parish Levee Board to Gulf Oil have been available to anyone who wanted to see them since 1910 — when Mr. Kennon was eight years old. That lease was 45 years old when Mr. Kennon first got into an override. The Kennon override was on a sublease by Gulf to a private citizen in 1955 which, like the original lease, was fully inspected by the state minerals board to see that the state's royalty interests were protected. They were and are now, in the sublease as they were in the original lease. The override does not affect any state interest of any kind and the state has no interest in it.

The original lease in 1910 was between Gulf and the state. The sublease in 1955 was between Gulf as a private company and a private Caddo Parish citizen. The override was a private transaction between the Caddo citizen and Mr. Kennon. State revenue was never involved in the override in any way.

As a windup if anyone wants a minerals right sublease override yielding, as of now, $5.32 in three months, Mr. Kennon has one for sale for $100 and filing costs.

So, what has "the great revelation" revealed? Not even "much ado about nothing" as Mr. Kennon says; just very little ado about anything.

Ridiculous Charges

Deficit Spending

Monroe, La.

To the Editor

One column in this morning's World caught my attention beyond any other. The president is asking for a new and higher debt ceiling. I have mentioned more than once that if I ran my own business in as sloppy a manner as this country is mishandled, I would be bankrupt in no time. It seems odd that a majority of the Congress cannot see this. Possibly it is because they receive their raises in pay pretty often, in spite of the condition of the rest of the nation.

I do not object to anyone receiving a good salary for services rendered, but there is the question of service — I believe there are several in the "Gravy Train" who do not care much what happens, as long as they can keep their own, and their family's feet in the trough. This is not only in national government, it is the same here in this state.

Since I am a taxpayer every year, but a voter, (citizen) only once every four years, I really have room to say what I think of conditions. Now, with so many running for office in the Democratic Primary, it seems that politics, whether of the local or state or national plane, is getting to be one of the most lucrative places one can nest in.

Of all the candidates for governor, as well as other state posts, I have not heard much of what has been done in the present administration — although I believe the people as a whole should remember what has been done, and, so doing, vote to see that such blundering does not happen again. I am referring to what is termed the governor's mansion. Of all the dirty deals handed the people lately, this one caps them all. Two weeks ago there was an article from Baton Rouge, stating there would be an extra $150,000 added to the cost of this monstrosity making it amount to roughly a million, one hundred fifty thousand of the taxpayer's dollars.

I have spent almost all of my life in construction, and, I will make this statement — A home for any incumbent could be built, suitable and fit, for the $150,000, thus saving the people a million for better use — some of it could have been put to good use here for a better water supply. I wonder if there are rooms for the riding horse in this mansion!!!

As for this "Democratic primary", it is useless and costly. Quite a few cannot vote in primary balloting, and, even after the primary, sometimes there is a runoff, even after the election, making three times voting as well as the cost of each election. A general primary would help, but to my way of thinking, no primary is necessary. Let all the people vote, not just those who voted for Kennedy.

Thanks For Treats

To the Editor:

As chairman of the "Share the Treats" program for the North Monroe Kiwanis Club I would like to use your "Letters to the Editor" column as a media to thank you for your assistance in making the effort a success. We do sincerely appreciate the publicity you gave the program.

The very biggest word of thanks must go, however, to the teachers and students in the elementary schools in the city school system, plus Lakeshore and Good Shepherd schools. Without such a sharing spirit "Share the Treats" would never have gotten off the ground. Thanks again to you and the teachers and a really big thanks to the children of Monroe for Sharing.

Sincerely,

RALPH DE TOLEDANO

Soul-Searching In Vote Results

AROUND THE COUNTRY, at Democratic and Republican headquarters, the Wednesday morning quarterbacks are busily at work trying to find a design to Tuesday's elections. (The difference between a Monday morning quarterback and a Wednesday morning quarterback is that the latter usually played in the game).

This year, there will be a great deal of soul searching — more than usual — because of the changing nature of the nation's electoral patterns. Even when all the figures are in and tabulated (a tedious but necessary job) it may not be possible to be categorial about what happened across the country last Tuesday.

A case in point in the Philadelphia election. President Kennedy took a great risk in campaigning for the Democratic incumbent, Mayor James Tate. But Mr. Tate's margin of victory was an unimpressive 67,000 votes in a city which President Kennedy carried by some 331,500 votes in 1960. At the start of the campaign, it was freely predicted that Mayor Tate would romp in with a plurality of 150,000 to 200,000.

What the political analysts must now determine is this: Would Mayor Tate have lost without Mr. Kennedy's intervention? Or did the President's appearance before cool and meager crowds in Philadelphia hurt the Democratic candidate? The pundits must answer another question: Was the Philadelphia result in any way abnormal or is it part of a continuing trend in urban voting?

THIS IS THE BIG one. A careful study of 1962 election results showed that the power of the big cities in national elections was diminishing. The new election power centers are the suburbs. Therefore, a Democratic victory in a Philadelphia or Indianapolis election may loom large in the headlines, but it does not strengthen the national party. When a city like Philadelphia begins to whittle down its Democratic pluralities, it is a real matter for concern to the Administration.

The pundits will have themselves a time analyzing the New Jersey vote. The Republicans increased their majority in the State Senate and recaptured the Assembly. Democratic Governor Hughes suffered a series of defeats, such as the rejection of his $750 million bond issue — and Democratic candidates fell by the wayside in "safe" constituencies. Again the questions: Was this simply the return to Republicanism of a state once firmly in the GOP column? Was it a reproach to President Hughes? Did civil rights play a part?

Certainly the Negro issue entered the picture in Kentucky, but the political analysts will have a rough time coming to any conclusions about is potency there. A Goldwater Republican, Louis Nunn ran surprisingly strong, being edged out by a flimsy 16,000 votes and with talk of vote fraud in the air. Edward Breathit, the Democratic victor, represented the liberal wing of his party in a state which has leaned in that direction. The Kentucky race, therefore, would indicate that the Goldwater position on civil rights is acceptable to those who advocated racial militancy in the past. But to confuse the pundits, the Republican candidate got a large vote in some Negro wards — to the surprise of the professionals.

THE KENTUCKY results are already being read as an omen of Goldwater strength in Southern and border states — and with some reservations as an indication that the resentment to the President's civil rights program cuts deep outside of the conservative South. Those Negro wards, however, are puzzling.

Also in the Department of Bewilderment are the results in Indiana where a Democrat narrowly defeated a Republican for mayor of Indianapolis in the face of a statewide sweep in which the GOP grabbed control of 15 of the state's 25 city halls. Here, a liberal Democrat won where, in the past, conservative Democrats usually were elected with Republican help.

Throughout the nation, this helter-skelter of ideologies and candidates seemed to prevail. Did it prove anything? For those who got elected, certainly. As usual, they could point to their sterling qualities as the cause. In the Rockfeller-Goldwater stakes? In the Kennedy versus the GOP choice? At this point, the wise man will say, you pays your money . . . If it proves anything, it is that the nation is going through a political adjustment which will become increasingly apparent in 1964 and will be clearly delineated by 1968.

How Do You Stand, Sir?

By BARRY GOLDWATER

U.S. Senator From Arizona

NO AREA OF OUR economy has been treated with less respect or been more shockingly maligned and abused by political power enthusiasts than American agriculture.

Consider for a moment the impact of politics upon the American farmer.

The ridiculous imbalance of economic concepts has brought American agriculture to a potentially disastrous revamping of its institutional structure. Fundamentally, the farm problem which we are functioning under was developed during a period of economic stress.

Minor changes in this policy notwithstanding, government planners have managed to foist upon us an acceptance of the illusion that the federal government should either fix prices on certain commodities or exert a maximum influence upon them.

During the economic upswing that followed World War II and Korea, the farmers proved a significant and disturbing exception to the rule of general prosperity. The reason for this was that we followed too closely the policies of earlier years. We did not allow for readjustments in the agricultural economy as a result of generally-improved conditions.

CONSEQUENTLY, DESPITE the application of practically every conceivable government program for agriculture, the farmers have been more hurt than helped by Washington - inspired directives.

Added to this bureaucratic confusion, and perhaps aided and abetted by it, is the rapidly - decreasing farm population. How such a confused and deteriorating situation could occur at a time when technological revolution offers so much hope and inspiration is a challenge to us all.

There may be a host of answers to this problem. Not being blessed with an intricate knowledge of farming, I don't pretend to offer any series of formulae which would satisfy the total agricultural needs of our country.

This much I can say. A man farms his land in order to provide crops to sell at the marketplace and to reap a maximum of profit for himself. He is, therefore, no different from the shopkeeper, the barber, the restaurant owner or any of the myriad of other types of people who derive their living from the provision of goods and services to the consuming public.

THE FARMER AND his small business counterpart in the urban areas depend for their livelihood upon the laws of supply and demand. Logically, the government's role in their affairs must be a minor one. Subsidy crutches remove them from the competitive pattern of the economy and make of them nothing less than pawns of government.

On the other hand, a minimum of restrictions on farm production and marketing will permit the farmer a maximum of dependence on free markets as the best guide to production and consumption. The truth is that politics and agriculture don't mix. Politics means government, and whenever government starts doing things for people in any walk of life, it automatically and unavoidably takes from them certain rights.

At the present time, the government is attempting to control the law of supply and demand through the use of detrimental legislation. Agriculture suffers, and the resultant expense is ruinous to both farmers and consumers.

This is contrary to the bent of our farmers, just as it is contrary to the bent of all Americans. No one wants something for nothing. To be paid for not producing, to have opportunity and incentive destroyed, is not giving the farmer the right of free choice.

How do you stand, sir?

The Week In Focus

by Jack Gates

The Spirit Of Moscow

Many the world over wondered the past week what had happened to "The Spirit of Moscow," which was the name given to the signing of the test ban treaty between the U.S. and Russia earlier this year. And rightly so. There was everything but a peaceful spirit flowing from the Russian capitol.

On Thursday, as the Russians celebrated the 46th anniversary of the Communist revolution, the Soviets trundled their silvery ground-to-air rockets of a new design through Red Square and represented them as potent antimissile missiles. The Soviet news agency Tass said the weapons were guided interceptors "capable of hitting any up-to-date air space attack weapons." And Radio Moscow said they "can attain hits on all means of air and space attack." Premier Khrushchev boastfully went even further. The weapons, he charged gleefully are so accurate they can "hit a fly in the sky."

However, Western military experts expressed some reservations about the killing capacity of the 50-foot weapons.

Later at a reception, attended by a group of American businessmen, Khrushchev, who hasn't been talking too much the past few months, apparently caught up, probably aided by Russian vodka. He told the gathering that the Soviet Union will become the world's No. 1 nation in seven years, and warned that an American attack on Cuba would bring retaliation against U.S. allies closest to the Soviet Union.

This, in itself was a change, however. In the past an attack on Cuba would bring one on the U.S. He also said he is sure there eventually will be an agreement to heal the rift between the Soviet Union and Red China, although he ignored the Communist Chinese ambassador, who stood apart and spoke to no one.

At the height of his long talk, U.S. Ambassador Foy D. Kohler questioned Khrushchev about his gibes at the U.S.

"Where is the spirit of Moscow," Kohler asked calmly. "I don't hear any of it. I haven't heard any toasts I could drink to."

Khrushchev looked somewhat startled and then turned to Kohler and asked him to offer a toast. Kohler declined and said it was Khrushchev's party.

Replied Khrushchev, "The spirit of Moscow is the spirit of peace with all countries who want to live with us. I drink a toast to the spirit of Moscow, peace for all the world."

In closing, the Soviet premier said to the American businessmen that "we want to live, trade and have good relations. Things useful to us are useful to you too. I drink to the health of the businessmen of the U.S. who came to see us, and to those who didn't come. I hope for peaceful coexistence for a long time."

Earlier, Khrushchev indicated that the Soviet-American grain deal may go through after all. He told a U.S. group that he had received news that the grain dealers in the U.S. have made a reasonable approach and "perhaps we can reach agreement after all." The Soviets have been dickering for $250 million in U.S. wheat, but the rate for transportation in U.S. ships has been a stumbling block. The U.S. also said the wheat sale discussions were making progress. Later in the week the wheat sale deadlock was broken.

In Washington, Sen. Thomas J. Dodd charged that the sale of wheat to the Russians would "subsidize" the Soviet government to the tune of nearly $100 million and would increase the cost of flour to the American housewife.

New Berlin Crisis

Days before his outburst in Moscow, Khrushchev played a little "brinksmanship" on the Berlin highway. It came when Russian armored vehicles surrounded a U.S. convoy enroute to West Berlin and halted it. The Soviets demanded the Americans alight from their vehicles to be counted — a device they have used in previous harrassments. The Americans refused and were finally allowed to move after being halted for 48 hours.

In Moscow, Khrushchev shouted that if the American Army had tried to force its latest Berlin convoy through a Soviet blockade it would have had to roll "over our dead bodies" and possibly have triggered war. He went on to say the Russians agreed to lift the blockade after the Americans obeyed Soviet control procedures.

However, his version of the convoy's passage was at variance with that of the U.S. Army which reported that it did not obey Soviet instructions to lower tail gates and have the soldiers dismount from the trucks.

Meanwhile, despite their bitter protests, the Western Allies expect Russia to throw more roadblocks across the highway into Berlin, possibly over the weekend. This was the second halt in two months.

What is the meaning — only time will tell. All of this could have been Khrushchev's reminder to the West not to suppose he was getting soft-headed because he made a few agreements. But it could also be a foretaste of worse things to come.

Footnotes To JFK

THIS YEAR'S most talked-about portrait is more notorious for its absence than its exhibition. The main attraction of "Nudes in Ancient and Modern Art," a recent show at the New York City gallery, was a striking likeness of President Kennedy in his customary rocker — without his customary clothes. Visitors flocked to see the startling chef-d' oeure by artist Rex Clauson. A few days afterwards, a limousine pulled up and in walked two treasury agents and the head of Mrs. Kennedy's favorite botique. They paid for the painting with cash, took it to their limousine and left. Since then, Republican art connoisseurs have been searching feverishly for the pristine Presidential portrait, offering thousands of dollars to seek JFK in the flesh. What shocked the normally blase art world was not the cold hand of Washington, or the nude portrait, but the pittance for which the gallery relinquished it — $375 . . . .

DON'T TRY this one. A West German professor, who drank 10 quarts of water a day for 127 days in an experiment to find out why people get thirsty, found that when he wanted to end the experiment, he could not stop drinking. Only after several weeks of using all his will power was he able to cut down to normal water drinking . . .

THE AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION News report says that men who drink five or more cups of coffee a day are more likely to have heart attacks than those who don't. . .

WESTERN diplomats have noticed that Soviet officials traveling out of the country are almost invariably dressed these days in well-cut, and usually Italian-made suits. But, as good politicians or something, these same officials revert to the old rumpled, box-cut sacks as soon as they get back into the workers' paradise.

The Election Wash

Diagnosticians in the political ranks at weekend were running President Kennedy and the past week's election returns through their computers to find out what effect the voting might have on the 1964 presidential election. And they found at least superficial evidence of a backlash among white voters from the race issue.

In the three key elections, the Democratic candidates won the prizes, but the results, according to Republicans, weren't too good for the Democrats. In fact, the Kennedy group got only limited comfort from the returns.

The Democrats elected a mayor in Philadelphia in the nation's biggest municipal contest, but by a much reduced majority than expected. In that race, Incumbent James H. J. Tate, who was personally endorsed by the President obtained 384,639 votes to 319,757 for Republican James T. McDermott, in the bitter election which had racial overtones. This, however, was far below the 350,000 majority given Kennedy in 1960 which allowed him to take the state of Pennsylvania.

In Kentucky, Democrat Edward T. Breathitt won the governorship, but in the closest race in history there over Republican Louie B. Nunn. The margin was less than 10,000 and Nunn charged there were many irregularities.

In New Jersey, Republicans took control of the Assembly, bolstered their majority in the Senate. Voters there also rejected a $750 million bond issue, which Democratic Gov. Richard J. Hughes backed strongly. The GOP also made strong gains in Virginia and Indiana.

In Mississippi, Democrat Paul Johnson, described as an anti-Kennedy Democrat, won almost 2-1, but the Republican candidate, Rubel Phillips, rolled up a surprisingly large vote.

So as it stands now, Kennedy could be in a lot of trouble in the 1964 race.

The Washington Scene

THE U.S. DEBT continues to go up. Over strong Republican opposition on Thursday, a bill to raise the national debt limit from its present $309 billion to $315 billion was approved by the House. The measure, described as a temporary increase, was sent to the Senate after the House defeated a GOP move to send it back to the Ways and Means Committee for downward revision of several billion dollars. The Republicans charged that the bill would add to what they termed unnecessary spending by the Kennedy administration . . . .

THE SENATE continues to slash at President Kennedy's foreign aid bill. Thursday night, the upper house voted to prohibit any military or economic aid to Yugoslavia and to keep the lid on assistance to Indonesia. The vote would remove the discretionary power the President now has to give military or economic aid to Yugoslavia. Earlier, the Senate voted 57 to 29 to ban foreign aid to any nation that asserts jurisdiction for fishing purposes over the high seas off its coasts farther than the U.S. recognizes. This would hit mainly Chile, Peru and Ecuador who claim jurisdiction 200 miles seaward . . . Earlier in the week, the Senate had okayed a compromise $3.8-billion authorization. The Kennedy defeat was on an amendment by Sen. Wayne Morse . . .

MEANWHILE, the Federal Reserve Board moved to tighten the use of credit to purchase securities by raising the stock market margin — the minimum cash down payment for stocks from 50 to 70 percent. This means that a person who wants to purchase stocks on credit will have to put down at least 70 per cent in cash. The figure had been pegged at 50 per cent since July 9, 1962 . . .

ANOTHER STORM looms on capitol hill. Indications of this came after the State Department fired its chief security risk evaluator after ruling him guilty of giving confidential information to Senate investigators. The ousted employe was Otto F. Otepka, 48, who had been put on notice earlier. Rep. H. R. Gross of Iowa termed the firing "The most reprehensible thing I've heard." Two of the 13 specific charges against Otepka accused him of preparing a list of questions for J. G. Sourwine, Senate subcommittee counsel, to put to witnesses during an inquiry into the State Department Cuban policies . . .

THE WHIZZ KIDS in the Pentagon came up with another move the past week. No one knows whether it's good or bad. They streamlined control of the Pentagon's brush fire emergency forces by assigning to the Army-Air Force Strike Command all defense responsibility for the Middle East, Southern Asia and much of Africa. The main effect will be to strip from the Navy an important command jurisdiction it has long held in that vast area. Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara announced the shift with President Kennedy's approval. . .

SENATOR Barry Goldwater kept quiet and let New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller do all the talking the past week.

ROCKEFELLER

Goldwater, an undeclared Republican presidential candidate, was silent as the New York governor plunged formally into the race. He launched his campaign for the New Hampshire primary which is still four months away. Goldwater said he had no comment to make. Meanwhile, more than four-fifths of 1,403 Republican county chairmen and other leaders who participated in a nationwide Associated Press poll on presidential preferences for 1964 say Goldwater is the party's strongest candidate against President Kennedy . . .

DEVELOPMENT of the first experimental vaccine against one of the sizable brigade of viruses believed linked with the pesky runny-nose type of common cold was reported the past week. A government scientist said the achievement is encouraging in that it constitutes the first step in the quest to get a kind of shotgun vaccine — made up of a number of different viruses — which might be used to combat this form of cold. . .

On The Domestic Side

IN A STATEMENT the past week, Gov. Jimmie H. Davis defended his administration. Despite criticism of his administration, he said, "times are good in Louisiana." Taking an optimistic attitude about conditions in the state, he said "today is bright in Louisiana and tomorrow will be brighter. Overall, Davis claimed the people of Louisiana today have more spending money than ever before and unemployment has slipped to its lowest level since 1957 . . .

IN BOSTON, Alabama Governor George C. Wallace, who plans to enter several primaries as a candidate for the independent party, charged agitation in the South would subside if President Kennedy were defeated in 1964. Wallace told newsmen that his interest was to defeat Kennedy and not to put thimself in the White House . . .

LAST WEEK a mockingbird began hanging on the picture window of the Claude Varnell home near Pine Bluff. It became a daily thing. Then a newspaper printed a picture and people began telephoning offering theories about the bird. "Most of them called to tell me the bird was a sign that there would be a death in the family," said Mrs. Varnell. She discounted the superstition. Then one of her uncles died. . .

A MISSISSIPPI University professor — Dr. James W. Silver, 56 — charged at Asheville, N.C., that a totalitarian society has evolved in his state and that the search for truth "has become a casualty." A member of the historical association and a member of the history faculty at Ole Miss for 28 years, Silver said: "The Mississippian who prides himself on individuality in reality lives in a climate where nonconformity is forbidden, where the white man is not free, where he does not dare to express a deviation opinion without looking over his shoulder." . . .

THE CONSERVATIVE party in England didn't fare too well the past week. British Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home won a seat in the House of Commons by a 9,328-vote margin, but this was less than had been expected. Home had to win this election to retain the post of prime minister. However, in another election Laborite Will Howie, running in the English industrial city of Luton, turned the tables on the Tories and was elected by a big margin. This shook the Home government and indicated trouble ahead . . .

AT PARIS, Defense Minister Pierre Messmer reported that France will continue nuclear testing despite protests at home and abroad. Messmer said France would pay no attention to the criticism, the complaints, the protests, and the warnings from inside France — and above all, abroad . . .

The Party Chairmen

By LARRY C. OSIUS

WASHINGTON (AP)—About a year from now a small army of political analysts will unflinchingly set about explaining how and why the 1964 elections were won and lost.

And a great deal of it undoubtedly will concern how well John M. Bailey and William E. Miller are doing their jobs today. Bailey, 58, is chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and Miller, 49, is chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Both believe party organization is the key to victory.

Bailey — "Policy and issues are raised in the White House. Our job is organization—making sure that everyone is eligible to vote."

Miller—"We are not a policy-making committee; fundamentally we are a service organization. We have to build up a grass roots precinct organization so that the nomination is worth something to whoever gets it."

Bailey believes Democrats have to work extra hard because, he said, many prospective voters are in harder-to-to-reach low-income and minority groups.

MANY VOTES

"Also," he said, "many of our voters are in a fluid situation, moving from state to state. In California we have to register 400,000 to 500,000 every two years just to stay even."

Republican Miller says: "In 1960 we lost by 100,000 votes. There were 36 million people who didn't register and vote, and we feel that a majority of them were Republicans."

Miller has another reason for preaching organization.

"We made an in-depty study of the 1960 election and found that Nixon carried more states, more congressional districts and more counties than Kennedy," he said. "He lost the election in places like Philadelphia, New York, Baltimore, Chicago, St. Louis, Detroit and Boston.

"From Maryland to Maine there were some 50,000 precincts. We found that about 5,000 of them—all in the big cities—were not manned by a single Republican official.

"We found that we didn't get clobbered because of Republican ideology. It was more a lack of muscle. We are working now to see that every precinct is manned by a Republican leader, that in every ward there's a Republican committeeman."

Bailey, quite aware of Republican efforts to beef up their big city organizations, said it won't do the GOP much good.

"The Republicans can't expect to do any better in urban areas as long as Republican congressmen are here in Washington voting against the things that urban areas want, such as housing, manpower retraining and mass transit bills," he said.

The chairmen's techniques are somewhat different.

Miller, who also represents a western New York district in Congress, must spend more time in Washington. He leaves much of the work of strengthening party organization to committee staff members. And as both congressman and chairman of the party out of power he speaks out more frequently on what he believes will be the issues in 1964.

Bailey on the other hand is on the road frequently, but seldom makes major speeches. He doesn't limit himself to the state or regional Democratic conclaves.

WITH PRELIMINARIES for the 1964 Presidential campaign well under way, John M. Bailey, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, works with his secretary, Rosalie Bauer, at his office in Washington, D.C. Bailey's job is concerned with organization, not policy making — watching over state and city organizations all over the country, with the end result of getting out the vote. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

U.S. Still Keeping Check On Fallout Despite Test Treaty

By FRANK CAREY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite the treaty barring all but underground nuclear weapons tests, American government scientists still see a need for keeping tabs on radioactive fallout.

For one thing, they want to be alert in the event of a break in the treaty.

Neither do they foresee any letdown in the intensive research aimed at getting a better understanding of fallout and its possible — though still unproven — effects on the health of people now living or generations yet unborn.

Of primary interest is the fallout debris still lurking in the stratosphere, or long since fallen to earth, from past tests dating back nearly 20 years.

The fallout still aloft will continue to come down for about another decade, although the peak is believed to have passed just recently.

Vigilance is to be maintained for various reasons, including the possibilities that:

—Signers of the U.S.-British Soviet test-ban treaty might break it.

—France, a non-signer, might conduct enough tests to add significant quantities of fallout to the debris still aloft from past tests of all nations.

—Other nations, notably Red China, might develop nuclear weapons and start testing them.

—Unforeseen, but still conceivable, release of radioactive materials might occur from underground weapons tests still allowable under th etreaty.

—Experiments designed to explore the feasibility of using nuclear explosions for peaceful uses, such as building canals and harbors, might release unexpected quantities of fallout.

— Accidents might occur among the growing number of nuclear power plants, and in the course of experiments designed to use nuclear energy in space vehicles.

In addition, the scientists say, there is a need to keep tabs on the fallout still aloft or now on the ground — and to conduct other kinds of radiation research — for these reasons:

1. Despite some 20 years of research, and plenty of controversy among scientists, there still is no firm answer to the question: How great — or how little — is the hazard to health from fallout in the relatively small amounts resulting from bomb tests so far? In fact is there any hazard?

2. There's a constant need to recheck on estimates of the amount of fallout still aloft, and upon predictions about its rate of falling to the earth and its distribution there.

3. There is a constant need of rechecking the accuracy of predictions and theories concerning how much fallout will get into the food chain and how much is getting in, or will get in, the bodies of people.

4. There is a need to develop practical and economic countermeasures for fallout — preferably short of actual condemnation of food contaminated with it — in case authorities ever should deem it necessary to order such countermeasures.

5. There is a need to develop radiation protection guides specifically for fallout, as distinguished from guides available now only for workers in the atomic energy industry. The Federal Radiation Council at the urging of Congress, has promised such fallout guides by June 1964.

But the council scientists stress that even when such guides are at hand, they will not constitute a magic line between radiation that is safe and radiation that is dangerous — any more than do the guides that are now available for industry.

Rather, they would be designed as guidelines of exposure below which any risk to health might be deemed acceptable — and above which it would be deemed necessary to institute countermeasures even though those countermeasures might be very costly financially and possibly even pose health risks greater than those theoretically posed by fallout. That's why a lot of work is going on to develop safe and practical countermeasures.

The Week In Focus

by Jack Gates

The Spirit Of Moscow

Many the world over wondered the past week what had happened to "The Spirit of Moscow," which was the name given to the signing of the test ban treaty between the U.S. and Russia earlier this year. And rightly so. There was everything but a peaceful spirit flowing from the Russian capitol.

On Thursday, as the Russians celebrated the 46th anniversary of the Communist revolution, the Soviets trundled four silvery ground-to-air rockets of a new design through Red Square and represented them as potent antimissile missiles. The Soviet news agency Tass said the weapons were guided interceptors "capable of hitting any up-to-date air space attack weapons." And Radio Moscow said they "can attain hits on all means of air and space attack." Premier Khrushchev boastfully went even further. The weapons, he charged gleefully are so accurate they can "hit a fly in the sky."

However, Western military experts expressed some reservations about the killing capacity of the 50-foot weapons.

Later at a reception, attended by a group of American businessmen, Khrushchev, who hasn't been talking too much the past few months, apparently caught up, probably aided by Russian vodka. He told the gathering that the Soviet Union will become the world's No. 1 nation in seven years, and warned that an American attack on Cuba would bring retaliation against U.S. allies closest to the Soviet Union.

This, in itself was a change, however. In the past an attack on Cuba would bring one on the U.S. He also said he is sure there eventually will be an agreement to heal the rift between the Soviet Union and Red China, although he ignored the Communist Chinese ambassador, who stood apart and spoke to no one.

At the height of his long talk, U.S. Ambassador Foy D. Kohler questioned Khrushchev about his gibes at the U.S.

"Where is the spirit of Moscow," Kohler asked calmly. "I don't hear any of it. I haven't heard any toasts I could drink to."

Khrushchev looked somewhat startled and then turned to Kohler and asked him to offer a toast. Kohler declined and said it was Khrushchev's party.

Replied Khrushchev, "The spirit of Moscow is the spirit of peace with all countries who want to live with us. I drink a toast to the spirit of Moscow, peace for all the world."

In closing, the Soviet premier said to the American businessmen that "we want to live, trade and have good relations. Things useful to us are useful to you too. I drink to the health of the businessmen of the U.S. who came to see us, and to those who didn't come. I hope for peaceful coexistence for a long time."

Earlier, Khrushchev indicated that the Soviet-American grain deal may go through after all. He told a U.S. group that he had received news that the grain dealers in the U.S. have made a reasonable approach and "perhaps we can reach agreement after all." The Soviets have been dickering for $250 million in U.S. wheat, but the rate for transportation in U.S. ships has been a stumbling block. The U.S. also said the wheat sale discussions were making progress. Later in the week the wheat sale deadlock was broken.

In Washington, Sen. Thomas J. Dodd charged that the sale of wheat to the Russians would "subsidize" the Soviet government to the tune of nearly $100 million and would inflate the cost of flour to the American housewife.

New Berlin Crisis

Days before his outburst in Moscow, Khrushchev played a little "brinksmanship" on the Berlin highway. It came when Russian armored vehicles surrounded a U.S. convoy enroute to West Berlin and halted it. The Soviets demanded the Americans alight from their vehicles to be counted — a device they have used in previous harrassments. The Americans refused and were finally allowed to move after being halted for 48 hours.

In Moscow, Khrushchev shouted that if the American Army had tried to force its latest Berlin convoy through a Soviet blockade it would have had to roll "over our dead bodies" and possibly have triggered war. He went on to say the Russians agreed to lift the blockade after the Americans obeyed Soviet control procedures.

However, his version of the convoy's passage was at variance with that of the U.S. Army which reported that it did not obey Soviet instructions to lower tail gates and have the soldiers dismount from the trucks.

Meanwhile, despite their bitter protests, the Western Allies expect Russia to throw more roadblocks across the highway into Berlin, possibly over the weekend. This was the second halt in two months.

What is the meaning — only time will tell. All of this could have been Khrushchev's reminder to the West not to suppose he was getting soft-headed because he made a few agreements. But it could also be a foretaste of worse things to come.

Footnotes To JFK

"We found that we didn't get clobbered because of Republican ideology. It was more a lack of muscle. We are working now to see that every precinct is manned by a Republican leader, that in every ward there's a Republican committeeman."

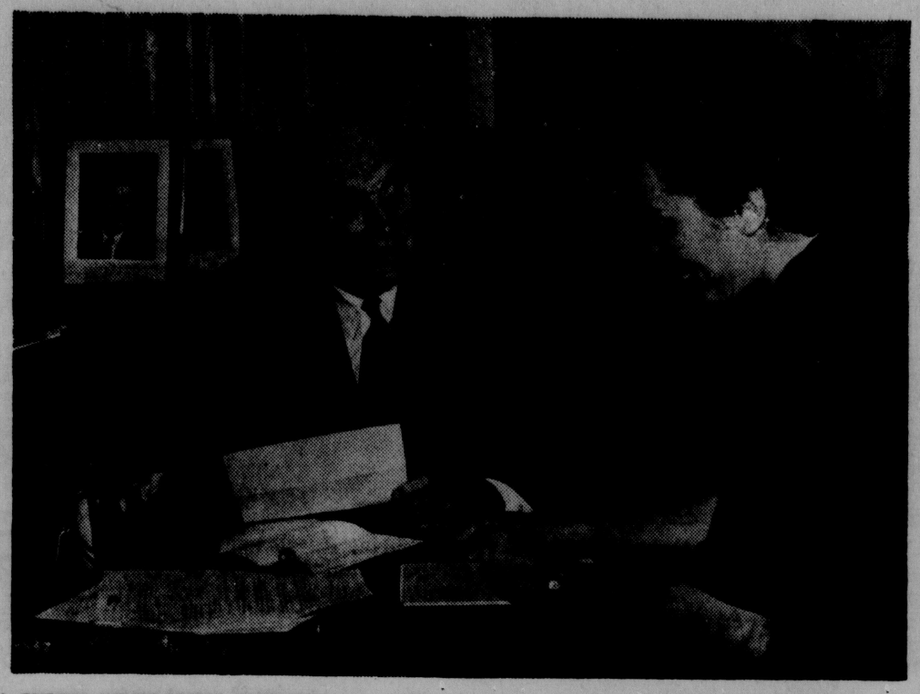
Bailey, quite aware of Republican efforts to beef up their big city organizations, said it won't do the GOP much good.

"The Republicans can't expect to do any better in urban areas as long as Republican congressmen are here in Washington voting against the things that urban areas want, such as housing, manpower retraining and mass transit bills," he said.

The chairmen's techniques are somewhat different.

Miller, who also represents a western New York district in Congress, must spend more time in Washington. He leaves much of the work of strengthening party organization to committee staff members. And as both congressman and chairman of the party out of power he speaks out more frequently on what he believes will be the issues in 1964.

Bailey on the other hand is on the road frequently, but seldom makes major speeches. He doesn't limit himself to the state or regional Democratic conclaves.



WITH PRELIMINARIES for the 1964 Presidential campaign well under way, John M. Bailey, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, works with his secretary, Rosalie Bauer, at his office in Washington, D.C. Bailey's job is concerned with organization, not policy making — watching over state and city organizations all over the country, with the end result of getting out the vote. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

U.S. Still Keeping Check On Fallout Despite Test Treaty

By FRANK CAREY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite the treaty barring all but underground nuclear weapons tests, American government scientists still see a need for keeping tabs on radioactive fallout.

For one thing, they want to be alert in the event of a break in the treaty.

Neither do they foresee any letdown in the intensive research aimed at getting a better understanding of fallout and its possible — though still unproven — effects on the health of people now living or generations yet unborn.

Of primary interest is the fallout debris still lurking in the stratosphere, or long since fallen to earth, from past tests dating back nearly 20 years.

The fallout still aloft will continue to come down for about another decade, although the peak is believed to have passed just recently.

Vigilance is to be maintained for various reasons, including the possibilities that:

—Signers of the U.S.-British Soviet test-ban treaty might break it.

—France, a non-signer, might conduct enough tests to add significant quantities of fallout to the debris still aloft from past tests of all nations.

—Other nations, notably Red China, might develop nuclear weapons and start testing them.

—Unforeseen, but still conceivable, release of radioactive materials might occur from underground weapons tests still allowable under th etreaty.

—Experiments designed to explore the feasibility of using nuclear explosions for peaceful uses, such as building canals and harbors, might release unexpected quantities of fallout.

— Accidents might occur among the growing number of nuclear power plants, and in the course of experiments designed to use nuclear energy in space vehicles.

In addition, the scientists say, there is a need to keep tabs on the fallout still aloft or now on the ground — and to conduct other kinds of radiation research — for these reasons:

1. Despite some 20 years of research, and plenty of controversy among scientists, there still is no firm answer to the question: How great — or how little — is the hazard to health from fallout in the relatively small amounts resulting from bomb tests so far? In fact is there any hazard?

2. There's a constant need to recheck on estimates of the amount of fallout still aloft, and upon predictions about its rate of falling to the earth and its distribution there.

3. There is a constant need of rechecking the accuracy of predictions and theories concerning how much fallout will get into the food chain and how much is getting in, or will get in, the bodies of people.

4. There is a need to develop practical and economic countermeasures for fallout — preferably short of actual condemnation of food contaminated with it — in case authorities ever should deem it necessary to order such countermeasures.

5. There is a need to develop radiation protection guides specifically for fallout, as distinguished from guides available now only for workers in the atomic energy industry. The Federal Radiation Council at the urging of Congress, has promised such fallout guides by June 1964.

But the council scientists stress that even when such guides are at hand, they will not constitute a magic line between radiation that is safe and radiation that is dangerous — anymore than do the guides that are now available for industry.

Rather, they would be designed as guidelines of exposure below which any risk to health might be deemed acceptable — and above which it would be deemed necessary to institute countermeasures even though those countermeasures might be very costly financially and possibly even pose health risks greater than those theoretically posed by fallout. That's why a lot of work is going on to develop safe and practical countermeasures.

THE BIG QUESTION

Recognition Of Soviets 30 Years Ago Recalled

EDITOR'S NOTE — In this article AP diplomatic correspondent John M. Hightower looks back over what has happened since the day 30 years ago that President Franklin D. Roosevelt recognized Soviet Russia. It was a world-shaking event at the time and the consequences have been tremendous. The questions of that hour are still alive today: will the Soviet Union join in enlightened world cooperation, or will it drive relentlessly for world conquest?

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States recognized the Communist government of the Soviet Union 30 years ago this month. In the deal it got a deceptive set of paper promises which the Russians junked almost before the ink was dry.

The deal put the Kremlin and White House "on speaking terms," as Franklin D. Roosevelt once said, for the first time. But it did a lot more than that.

It helped to set the stage for a coalition of the anti-Nazi powers in World War II. It clearly defined for the first time the two faces of United States policy toward the Soviet Union. It spotlighted many of the issues that trouble U.S.-Soviet relations to this day — trade, for example.

ALL THINGS

And it did all these things at a maximum cost in public misunderstanding.

One of the great lessons of the affair, in the opinion of professional diplomats, is that Roosevelt did the right thing in the wrong way.

The right thing, as the experts saw it at the time, was to establish diplomatic relations with Moscow. But many feel it was wrong to try to exact a price which the experts knew the Russians would never pay.

Officials of the Truman, Eisenhower and Kennedy administrations have all made the same basic decision in turn. This is that agreements based on trust are no good with the Soviet Union. The agreements must be, the late Secretary of State John Foster Dulles used to say, self-enforcing.

Roosevelt's basic mistake was to act as if he expected the Stalinist administration in Russia to (1) settle up the old czarist debts to the United States, (2) put an end to Communist agitation in this country for the overthrow of the U.S. government and (3) see that Americans working in the Soviet Union were protected against unreasonable spy charges and allowed to practice religious freedom.

It seems debatable whether Roosevelt actually thought that the Soviet government would fulfill the deal, which he made with Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinov on Nov. 16, 1933, the day of recognition.

Experts with first-hand knowledge suggest that Roosevelt was essentially cynical in his attitude toward the promises he extracted.

George F. Kennan in his 1960 book, "Russia and the West under Lenin and Stalin," asserts that Roosevelt "was interested only in their momentary psychological effect on the American public, not on their effectiveness in practice."

Kennan, a former ambassador to the Soviet Union and to Yugoslavia, is now associated with Princeton University.

Former Ambassador Loy W. Henderson, now a professor of international relations at American University, was working in the Eastern European office of the State Department in 1933. He helped draft some of the basic documents of the recognition deal and he, like Kennan, recalls the impression at the time that they were directed mainly toward domestic politics. But Henderson also recalls that Roosevelt thought the Russians might live up to the commitments.

IMPORTANT

"I think it's terribly important," Henderson said a few days ago, "not to act on a false basis in international affairs. If we establish relations with another country on a false basis it's going to cause trouble and more trouble in our relationship with that country."

William C. Bullitt was the first U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union following recognition. He had been an assistant to Secretary of State Cordell Hull in that first New Deal year and a close adviser of Roosevelt's on Soviet policy.

Bullitt recalled years later that Roosevelt knew the Soviets might very well break all their promises. However, he said the President also thought that if they did so the United States would have the option of breaking off relations—a step that actually was never seriously considered.

The recognition theory at the time outwardly displayed a hope for increasing cooperation between the United States and the Soviet Union.

This same hope underlay Roosevelt's grand design for postwar planning in the early 1940s.

It fed his enthusiasm for the United Nations. It was the failure of this persistent dream of U.S. - Soviet cooperation which split the U.N. and led to the Cold War.

Such developments could hardly have been foreseen in 1933. The beginnings of World War II were then half a decade away and the realignments of the postwar world were obscured in the darkness of a distant and stormy future.

The question of whether to recognize the Soviet Union naturally was controversial in the United States.

But the issue had been debated in the 1932 election campaign and Roosevelt had promised to work for opening of diplomatic relations.

The major pressure came from the Soviet government itself. Soviet dictator Josef Stalin was convinced that Japan was planning an attack on the Soviet Union's Far Eastern provinces. He believed that U.S. recognition would sharply discourage the ambitions of the war lords of Tokyo.

A second consideration was the need for trade, which the Russians were actually unable to finance. They aimed, therefore, to get the United States to finance the export of its own goods to the Soviet Union by advancing large-scale credits.

Significantly, exactly the same proposition appeared many years later in U.S.-Soviet exchanges when Premier Khrushchev told President Eisenhower that Moscow would like to buy U.S. products if the United States would finance the purchases through credits.

Kennan says that the Soviet leaders from shortly after the 1917 Russian revolution expected the developed and wealthy Western nations to finance the Soviet Union's development as a modern industrial power. Moscow's aim was a secure national base for an expanding Communist system that would take over the Western nations.

VISITED

When Litvinov visited Washington in early November 1933 at Roosevelt's invitation, he found a major obstacle blocking this path toward Soviet development. For whether or not Americans then understood Soviet behavior they certainly understood money. The fact they could not avoid was the $628-million pre-revolution debt to the United States which the Soviet government had refused to pay.

The United States was willing to settle the czarist debts for about 25 cents on the dollar, perhaps less. Litvinov was willing to work out some kind of a formula provided that the United States would first grant extensive credits—in other words, finance the Soviet payment of the debt.

Litvinov and Stalin were also worried about the fact that if they paid the United States they would get bills from many other nations with claims dating from before the 1917 revolution.

To this day Moscow and Washington have never resolved the debt problem.

On other issues involved in the negotiations on recognition the ultimate solution was in most cases simply to drop the matter or protest from time to time without any hope of remedy.

For example the Soviet Union had pledged in one of the Roosevelt-Litvinov documents not to interfere in United States internal affairs by plotting and working for the overthrow of the American government from inside this country. Two years later, in 1935, Moscow was host to the all-world congress of the Communist International. It was attended by American Communist party leaders who participated in discussion of plans for Communist activities in this country.

Hull protested that the activity in Moscow was a flagrant violation of the noninterference pledge. The Soviet government replied that it should have been obvious to everyone that Moscow could not be responsible for the activities of foreign political parties.

Thus the United States came up against the duality of Soviet practice—the government divorcing itself from any diplomatic responsibility for one of the most powerful arms of its own foreign policy.

United States motives in opening diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union apparently began with Roosevelt's feeling, expressed to Hull, that "two great nations like America and Russia should be on speaking terms."

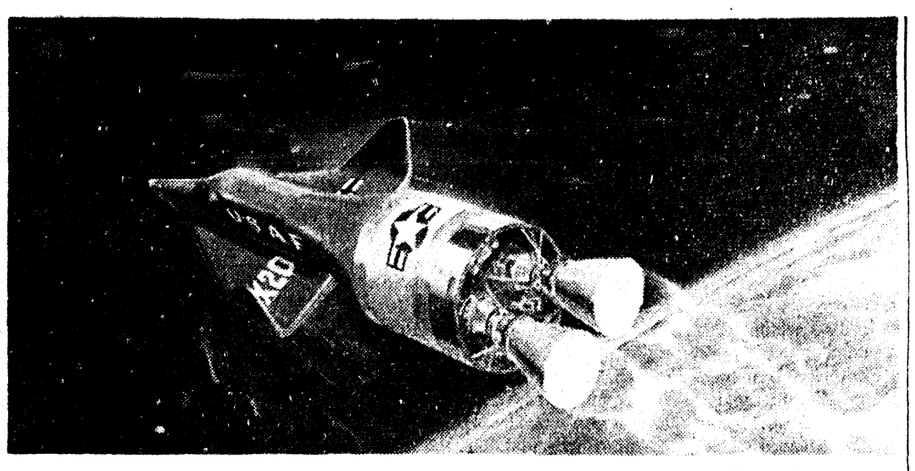
There were at least two immediate and practical motivations toward recognition. One was Roosevelt's and Hull's dim discernment of a combination of aggressive powers which would challenge the status quo in a few years and probably wreck the peace of the world.

The other major motivation was a quest for trade and the increase in jobs that would go with it.

KNOWLEDGE

One diplomat with a first-hand knowledge of events of those times said that Amtorg, the Russian trading organization with headquarters in New York, had spread word of a prospective $100-million worth of orders in the machine tool industry alone. This business never developed because the formula for settling the old czarist debts and financing Soviet purchases in the United States could never be solved.

Beyond these two down-to-earth pressures stood the central question of Soviet purposes in the world.



POWERED BY A small Transtage rocket engine, an Air Force X20 Dyna-Soar moves through space, in this artist's drawing of future flights. The Transtage, which has been described as "probably the simplest rocket engine ever built," is expected to give a maneuverability not now possible to military and non-military spacecraft. This includes shifting orbits and changing direction in space. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Key Rocket Engine Will Get First Flight Test In A Year

By RALPH DIGHTON
Associated Press Science Writer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—A rocket engine only four feet tall, but assigned a payload that includes U.S. hopes of military superiority in space, gets its first flight test in less than a year.

It's part of a rocket named Transtage, so called because it will transfer from orbit to orbit.

The new spacecraft is designed to:

1. Inspect and if necessary destroy strange and possibly hostile satellites.
2. Rescue stranded U. S. spacemen, or repair and refuel their vehicles.
3. Carry cameras—possibly even bombs—over enemy territory.
4. Rendezvous with manned orbital stations, shuttling men and supplies between earth and space.

Transtage is the first rocket in the United States, perhaps in the world, to provide the maneuverability necessary for long-dreamed-of military and scientific missions.

ON SUCCESS

On the success of its new concepts hangs the Apollo moon project. The same engine, only larger, will power the Saturn-boosted service model that carries U.S. astronauts into lunar orbit, dispatches and collects their moon-exploring bug, then shoves them toward home.

The Apollo project is promised for sometime in this decade. Long before the first Apollo flight, Transtage is scheduled to start pioneering the new technology of maneuvering in space with its first payload—a black, manta-winged vehicle called the X20 Dyna-Soar.

Plans call for a 2-million pound thrust Titan 3 to blast the first Transtage into space from Cape Canaveral, Fla., in August 1964.

Sixteen more Titan 3-Transtage tests will follow, and in 10 of them the Transtage is to be topped by an X20. The first X20 flight is set for July 1965. After two tests, the X20s will start carrying a pilot to orbital heights and back to land at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., home of the sub-orbital X15 rocket plane.

Unlike most rocket engines, which have hundreds or even thousands of working parts, the Transtage engine has but one—the valve which controls the flow of propellants into the burning chamber.

It needs no ignition system, no spark plug or starting cartridge, because the propellants are hypergolic—they catch fire when sprayed together into the burning chamber.

Burning stops when the flow of propellants is cut off by the radio-controlled valve, resumes when the valve is opened.

D.N. Lonon, Transtage program manager at Aerojet-General Corp., where the engine is made says: "This is probably the simplest rocket engine ever built. In mass production, we expect to retail it for about $35,000. It can be clustered in almost any combination for increased thrust and longer-duration missions, and it can be adapted to different fuels as they are developed."

"Coupled with Titan 3, Transtage can carry almost any kind of a payload into almost any orbit—I say almost only because I am just naturally cautious."

PAYLOAD

The X20 is the only payload announced so far for Transtage and Titan 3, although it is admitted that others are planned. Military security—and perhaps indecision—keeps the Air Force from being specific about other missions.

Lonon says Titan 3 and Transtage can boost a 25,000-pound spacecraft into a 100-mile-high orbit, or kick a 5,000-pound spacecraft as high as 22,000 miles.

This manned X20 will weigh about 20,000 pounds. Titan 3—a liquid-fuel Titan 2 missile with million-pound thrust solid-fuel boosters strapped on its sides—will be able to boost the X20 into 100-mile orbits with ease.

There Transtage, still attached to the X20 and with seven minutes of fuel, can maneuver the X20 through a great number of orbital missions and have enough power left to start the X20 on its glide back to earth.

Lonon says Transtage's 11 tons of fuel makes it possible for a satellite weighing as much as 5,000 pounds to achieve a stationary orbit at a height of 22,000 miles. This is the altitude desired for future communications satellites. At that height they would seem to hover over a selected spot, such as mid-Atlantic, where they could relay messages back and forth between America and Europe.

"Titan 3 would park the communications satellite and its Transtage in a 100-mile orbit," says Lonon. "There a 375-second burn would start them off on a six-hour coast out to 22,000 miles.

"If we did nothing further, gravity would pull them back toward the original 100-mile orbit on the first go around. But Transtage still has fuel left, and a 65-second burn will overcome gravity and inject the satellite into an orbit that will maintain 22,000 miles altitude for months or years."

Congressman Not Happy With CIA

By STANLEY MEISLER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The agents from the Central Intelligence Agency take their places outside the door in a lobby of Congress.

Their director slips in. A few of his aides follow. Then come a handful of congressmen, and a single committee staff man to help them.

But no one else goes by.

The director, John McCone, briefs the congressmen on recent CIA events. He and his aides then field questions for two, perhaps three hours. No one keeps a record.

The session ends, and the congressmen hurry back to their offices, their new knowledge locked to themselves.

This scene, repeated perhaps two dozen times a year, reveals the way Congress keeps its eye on the vast, varied and secret operations of the CIA.

Rep. John Lindsay, R-N.Y., who is not a participant in any of these sessions, is not satisfied with them.

"We are working in the dark," he says, "or at least in the semitwilight."

Lindsay and some colleagues have proposed that Congress create a joint Senate-House committee, with a full staff, to supervise closely the activities of the CIA.

But other congressmen, especially those who do attend the sessions, say the supervision is adequate. And they add that the CIA is far too secret and sensitive an operation to have congressmen constantly peering over its shoulder.

But what is the present supervision like? Does Congress look long and hard enough? How many hours? Who does the job?

Some aspects of government surveillance are almost as hush-hush as CIA operations, but here is the partial picture pieced together from congressional sources:

Three congressional subcommittees have jurisdiction over either the operations or appropriations of the CIA. The Senate has a sixman subcommittee made up of members of the Armed Services and Appropriations committees. The House has two subcommittees, one made up of 10 members of the Armed Services Committee, the other of an unknown number of members of the Appropriations Committee.

The House Armed Services subcommittee on the CIA is headed by Rep. Carl Vinson, D-Ga., and includes Reps. L. Mendel Rivers, D-S.C., F. Edward Hebert, D-La., Melvin Price, D-Ill., Charles E. Bennett, D-Fla., George Huddleston Jr., D-Ala., Leslie Arends, R-Ill., William G. Bray, R-Ind., Bob Wilson, R-Calif., and Frank C. Osmers Jr., R-N.J.

Rep. Walter Norblad, R-Ore., who was a member of this subcommittee several years ago, recently told the House, "We met annually—one time a year, for a period of two hours in which we accomplished virtually nothing."

But a present member of the subcommittee, who would not allow his name to be used, said that the group now meets at least once a month with McCone and has "frank, open, and wide discussions" lasting as much as three hours.

He said, however, that the group does not check on every detail of CIA operations but instead surveys the significant activities.

No stenographic record is kept at these sessions, which do not touch on specific appropriations for the CIA.

This is left in the hands of the Appropriations subcommittee, which hides the CIA appropriation, believed to be more than a half billion dollars a year, among the appropriations of various other agencies so neither the rest of Congress nor the public can know exactly what what Congress has appropriated for the agency.

The House Appropriations Committee refuses to reveal which of its members belong to the CIA subcommittee and how many times they meet a year.

But it is a safe guess that it meets with McCone about the same number of times as the subcommittee of the Armed Services Committee and that its membership includes at least Rep. Clarence Cannon, D-Mo., chairman of the full committee, Rep. George H. Mahon, D-Tex., and Rep. Gerald Ford, R-Mich.

The members of the Senate subcommittee on the CIA are Sens. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., John Stennis, D-Miss., Leverett Saltonstall, R-Mass., Carl Hayden, D-Ariz., and Milton R. Young, R-N.D.

The least number of times they have met with the CIA chief in a year has been two; the most, six.

BOOKS

Listen, Darling Daughter

NOT QUITE POSTHUMOUS LETTER TO MY DAUGHTER. By Caitlin Thomas. Atlantic - Little, Brown. $4.75.

Mrs. Thomas' 18-year-old daughter is the nominal audience for this highly flavored commentary on the follies of mankind, but of course the author has a greater audience in mind.

First Mrs. Thomas — widow of the poet Dylan Thomas—does a thoroughly hard-boiled job of lampooning the whole silly business of husband - catching. There are cynical pointers on dress, beauty aids, conversation and dancing, followed by dos and don'ts in the party-going business of making men think they're wonderful.

But then the nature of the book changes. Mrs. Thomas starts describing all the male types a young woman may run into. The gamut is wide - ranging. Men of all occupations and stations (or none), mixed with freaks and even criminals, are paraded before the reader.

None of these poor souls escapes the jabbing wit and corner - of - the - mouth sarcasm of the author, until she finally advises her daughter to catch a Rich Man.

This latter party of the book recalls certain essayists of the 17th Century, who satirized the social types of their own age, in sketches they called Characters. In those days all the writers were males. This book of Characters has a devastating feline quality because it was created by a woman.

Mrs. Thomas has some distressing mannerisms of style and punctuation, which flaw her colorful prose. But she also has a remarkable talent for the bon mot and the aphorism.

Faulkner's Personality Book Subject

MY BROTHER BILL. By John Faulkner. Trident. $4.95.

The personality of William Faulkner is the subject of this book, written as an "affectionate reminiscence" by his brother John, four years his junior.

But there is almost as much material about the Faulkner family's environment — Oxford, Miss., in the early years of this century — as there is about the Nobel Prize winner.

The brother assumes the reader is familiar with the contents of William's books, and with the salient facts of his biography. He has attempted no literary analyses.

John makes a leisurely climb through the family tree, examines in minute detail the school patterns, childhood games, pranks and social customs of their small town life, and recalls innumerable small anecdotes.

He tells you about the family's Negro servants; he recalls how the father kept changing businesses; he gives details about such events as William's broken nose (as a high school quarterback he tackled a stupid fellow player who was running the wrong way with an intercepted pass).

As for William's adult life, the brother cites specific instances of the stubborn insistence on privacy; recalls William's early interest in airplanes and his late interest in riding horses, his toying with farming; mentions his early conviction that shocking stories would sell, and his later, purely monetary, interest in Hollywood; and catalogs many a mild idiosyncracy.

John wrote short stories and novels, too, but never became a full-time author. He has left a highly personal account of his brother's life. Faulkner fans may find no great disclosures here, but there is a great deal of close observation.

New Novel On Changes In 'India'

THE PRINCES. By Manohar Malgonkar. Viking. $4.95.

Utilizing a story built around a Maharajah and his son, Malgonkar has created a study in depth of a great politico - social change in modern India.

The Maharajah is a figure from the mold of the past. As head of one of the many princely states (feudal domains) taken over by the British in Victorian days, he knows that the arrogant, profligate princes never can stem the strong current toward Indian independence unless the British remain in control. And it is inconceivable to him that the British will pull out.

But his son and heir, Abhay — the narrator of this story — grasps the inevitable truth; and though he bears a sad allegiance to the old ways, he watches the developments of the 1930s and 1940s and realizes that time cannot be reversed.

The author symbolizes the rise of the lower classes Kanakchand, who becomes an agitator. He underlines the social stresses of the old order by depicting an unfaithful Maharani and a rebellious illegitimate son of the ruler.

It is the old Maharajah who dominates the story. He is a curious mixture of pride, wisdom and folly, but you cannot help but admire the way in which he devotes himself to the inherited code. Particularly when his last two grand gestures are filled with a deep irony and a bravado in the face of fate.

The narrative develops in a leisurely and discursive way, filled with pageantry and tiger hunts, mixed with politics, but it has a three-dimensional, cumulative effect.

Malgonkar is the grandson of a one - time prime minister in one of the now vanished princely states, and for a time was a professional guide for tiger hunts, so he is close to his material. He is the author of several novels, this being the first to appear in America.

New British Spy Shocker

THE IPCRESS FILE. By Len Deighton. Simon & Schuster. $3.95.

We have now the American debut of another British writer specializing in the gripping adventures of a secret agent.

The hero narrates the story, and he doesn't give his name. But he is a randy character with a quippy tongue and a properly callous disregard for danger, a roving eye for the other sex and an engaging knowledge of esoteric subjects and faraway places.

Assigned to a small, specialized unit of the British spy network he first engages in an expedition beyond Beirut to rescue a kidnapped biochemist from the Reds, an operation which serves to introduce the villain.

There is a sortie at an American nuclear test site in the Pacific, and our hero is framed as a traitor. But instead of being hauled off to unfair justice he is whisked away by the wrong people, presumably to be tortured.

Deighton is good at the spy gambit of the double switch and the triple switch, so that you never can be sure which good guy is a bad guy, and which bad guy is really a good guy. He teases the reader by disclosing just enough of the hero's mental processes to create all sorts of enigmas.

This is crisply artful story. At times it seems to wink at you as though it is making an intentional burlesque of spy thrillers, and then it pulls a sharp bit of magic to throw the rightful touch of horror into the dark perspectives of the narrative. Deighton is a writer. His fresh, salty style graces a skilled performance.

He helped draft some of the basic documents of the recognition deal and he, like Kennan, recalls the impression at the time that they were directed mainly toward domestic politics. But Henderson also recalls that Roosevelt thought the Russians might live up to the commitments.

IMPORTANT

"I think it's terribly important," Henderson said a few days ago, "not to act on a false basis in international affairs. If we establish relations with another country on a false basis it's going to cause trouble and more trouble in our relationship with that country."

William C. Bullitt was the first U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union following recognition. He had been an assistant to Secretary of State Cordell Hull in that first New Deal year and a close adviser of Roosevelt's on Soviet policy.

Bullitt recalled years later that Roosevelt knew the Soviets might very well break all their promises. However, he said the President also thought that if they did so the United States would have the option of breaking off relations—a step that actually was never seriously considered.

The recognition theory at the time outwardly displayed a hope for increasing cooperation between the United States and the Soviet Union.

This same hope underlay Roosevelt's grand design for postwar planning in the early 1940s.

It fed his enthusiasm for the United Nations. It was the failure of this persistent dream of U.S. - Soviet cooperation which split the U.N. and led to the Cold War.

Such developments could hardly have been foreseen in 1933. The beginnings of World War II were then half a decade away and the realignments of the postwar world were obscured in the darkness of a distant and stormy future.

The question of whether to recognize the Soviet Union naturally was controversial in the United States.

But the issue had been debated in the 1932 election campaign and Roosevelt had promised to work for opening of diplomatic relations.

The major pressure came from the Soviet government itself. Soviet dictator Josef Stalin was convinced that Japan was planning an attack on the Soviet Union's Far Eastern provinces. He believed that U.S. recognition would sharply discourage the ambitions of the war lords of Tokyo.

A second consideration was the need for trade, which the Russians were actually unable to finance. They aimed, therefore, to get the United States to finance the export of its own goods to the Soviet Union by advancing large-scale credits.

Significantly, exactly the same proposition appeared many years later in U.S.-Soviet exchanges when Premier Khrushchev told President Eisenhower that Moscow would like to buy U.S. products if the United States would finance the purchases through credits.

Kennan says that the Soviet leaders from shortly after the 1917 Russian revolution expected the developed and wealthy Western nations to finance the Soviet Union's development as a modern industrial power. Moscow's aim was a secure national base for an expanding Communist system that would take over the Western nations.

VISITED

When Litvinov visited Washington in early November 1933 at Roosevelt's invitation, he found a major obstacle blocking this path toward Soviet development. For whether or not Americans then understood Soviet behavior they certainly understood money. The fact they could not avoid was the $628-million prerevolution debt to the United States which the Soviet government had refused to pay.

The United States was willing to settle the czarist debts for about 25 cents on the dollar, perhaps less. Litvinov was willing to work out some kind of a formula provided that the United States would first grant extensive credits—in other words, finance the Soviet payment of the debt.

Litvinov and Stalin were also worried about the fact that if they paid the United States they would get bills from many other nations with claims dating from before the 1917 revolution.

To this day Moscow and Washington have never resolved the debt problem.

On other issues involved in the negotiations on recognition the ultimate solution was in most cases simply to drop the matter or protest from time to time without any hope of remedy.

For example the Soviet Union had pledged in one of the Roosevelt-Litvinov documents not to interfere in United States internal affairs by plotting and working for the overthrow of the American government from inside this country. Two years later, in 1935, Moscow was host to the all-world congress of the Communist International. It was attended by American Communist party leaders who participated in discussion of plans for Communist activities in this country.

Hull protested that the activity in Moscow was a flagrant violation of the noninterference pledge. The Soviet government replied that it should have been obvious to everyone that Moscow could not be responsible for the activities of foreign political parties.

Thus the United States came up against the duality of Soviet practice—the government divorcing itself from any diplomatic responsibility for one of the most powerful arms of its own foreign policy.

United States motives in opening diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union apparently began with Roosevelt's feeling, expressed to Hull, that "two great nations like America and Russia should be on speaking terms."

There were at least two immediate and practical motivations toward recognition. One was Roosevelt's and Hull's dim discernment of a combination of aggressive powers which would challenge the status quo in a few years and probably wreck the peace of the world.

The other major motivation was a quest for trade and the increase in jobs that would go with it.

KNOWLEDGE

One diplomat with a first-hand knowledge of events of those times said that Amtorg, the Russian trading organization with headquarters in New York, had spread word of a prospective $100-million worth of orders in the machine tool industry alone. This business never developed because the formula for settling the old czarist debts and financing Soviet purchases in the United States could never be solved.

Beyond these two down-to-earth pressures stood the central question of Soviet purposes in the world.

POWERED BY A small Transtage rocket engine, an Air Force X20 Dyna-Soar moves through space, in this artist's drawing of future flights. The Transtage, which has been described as "probably the simplest rocket engine ever built," is expected to give a maneuverability not now possible to military and non-military spacecraft. This includes shifting orbits and changing direction in space. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Key Rocket Engine Will Get First Flight Test In A Year

By RALPH DIGHTON
Associated Press Science Writer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—A rocket engine only four feet tall, but assigned a payload that includes U.S. hopes of military superiority in space, gets its first flight test in less than a year.

It's part of a rocket named Transtage, so called because it will transfer from orbit to orbit.

The new spacecraft is designed to:

1. Inspect and if necessary destroy strange and possibly hostile satellites.

2. Rescue stranded U. S. spacemen, or repair and refuel their vehicles.

3. Carry cameras—possibly even bombs—over enemy territory.

4. Rendezvous with manned orbital stations, shuttling men and supplies between earth and space.

Transtage is the first rocket in the United States, perhaps in the world, to provide the maneuverability necessary for long-dreamed-of military and scientific missions.

ON SUCCESS

On the success of its new concepts hangs the Apollo moon project. The same engine, only larger, will power the Saturn-boosted service model that carries U.S. astronauts into lunar orbit, dispatches and collects their moon-exploring bug, then shoves them toward home.

The Apollo project is promised for sometime in this decade. Long before the first Apollo flight, Transtage is scheduled to start pioneering the new technology of maneuvering in space with its first payload—a black, manta-winged vehicle called the X20 Dyna-Soar.

Plans call for a 2-million pound thrust Titan 3 to blast the first Transtage into space from Cape Canaveral, Fla., in August 1964.

Sixteen more Titan 3-Transtage tests will follow, and in 10 of them the Transtage is to be topped by an X20. The first X20 flight is set for July 1965. After two tests, the X20s will start carrying a pilot to orbital heights and back to land at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., home of the sub-orbital X15 rocket plane.

Unlike most rocket engines, which have hundreds or even thousands of working parts, the Transtage engine has but one—the valve which controls the flow of propellants into the burning chamber.

It needs no ignition system, no spark plug or starting cartridge, because the propellants are hypergolic—they catch fire when sprayed together into the burning chamber.

Burning stops when the flow of propellants is cut off by the radio-controlled valve, resumes when the valve is opened.

D.N. Lonon, Transtage program manager at Aerojet-General Corp., where the engine is made says: "This is probably the simplest rocket engine ever built. In mass production, we expect to retail it for about $35,000. It can be clustered in almost any combination for increased thrust and longer-duration missions, and it can be adapted to different fuels as they are developed."

"Coupled with Titan 3, Transtage can carry almost any kind of a payload into almost any orbit—I say almost only because I am just naturally cautious."

PAYLOAD

The X20 is the only payload announced so far for Transtage and Titan 3, although it is admitted that others are planned. Military security—and perhaps indecision—keeps the Air Force from being specific about other missions.

Lonon says Titan 3 and Transtage can boost a 25,000-pound spacecraft into a 100-mile-high orbit, or kick a 5,000-pound spacecraft as high as 22,000 miles.

This manned X20 will weigh about 20,000 pounds. Titan 3—a liquid-fuel Titan 2 missile with million-pound thrust solid-fuel boosters strapped on its sides—will be able to boost the X20 into 100-mile orbits with ease.

There Transtage, still attached to the X20 and with seven minutes of fuel, can maneuver the X20 through a great number of orbital missions and have enough power left to start the X20 on its glide back to earth.

Lonon says Transtage's 11 tons of fuel makes it possible for a satellite weighing as much as 5,000 pounds to achieve a stationary orbit at a height of 22,000 miles. This is the altitude desired for future communications satellites. At that height they would seem to hover over a selected spot, such as mid-Atlantic, where they could relay messages back and forth between America and Europe.

"Titan 3 would park the communications satellite and its Transtage in a 100-mile orbit," says Lonon. "There a 375-second burn would start them off on a six-hour coast out to 22,000 miles.

"If we did nothing further, gravity would pull them back toward the original 100-mile orbit on the first go around. But Transtage still has fuel left, and a 65-second burn will overcome gravity and inject the satellite into an orbit that will maintain 22,000 miles altitude for months or years."

Congressman Not Happy With CIA

By STANLEY MEISLER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The agents from the Central Intelligence Agency take their places outside the door in a lobby of Congress.

Their director slips in. A few of his aides follow. Then come a handful of congressmen, and a single committee staff man to help them.

But no one else goes by.

The director, John McCone, briefs the congressmen on recent CIA events. He and his aides then field questions for two, perhaps three hours. No one keeps a record.

The session ends, and the congressmen hurry back to their offices, their new knowledge locked to themselves.

This scene, repeated perhaps two dozen times a year, reveals the way Congress keeps its eye on the vast, varied and secret operations of the CIA.

Rep. John Lindsay, R-N.Y., who is not a participant in any of these sessions, is not satisfied with them.

"We are working in the dark," he says, "or at least in the semitwilight."

Lindsay and some colleagues have proposed that Congress create a joint Senate-House committee, with a full staff, to supervise closely the activities of the CIA.

But other congressmen, especially those who do attend the sessions, say the supervision is adequate. And they add that the CIA is far too secret and sensitive an operation to have congressmen constantly peering over its shoulder.

But what is the present supervision like? Does Congress look long and hard enough? How many hours? Who does the job?

Some aspects of government surveillance are almost as hush-hush as CIA operations, but here is the partial picture pieced together from congressional sources:

Three congressional subcommittees have jurisdiction over either the operations or appropriations of the CIA. The Senate has a sixman subcommittee made up of members of the Armed Services and Appropriations committees. The House has two subcommittees, one made up of 10 members of the Armed Services Committee, the other of an unknown number of members of the Appropriations Committee.

The House Armed Services subcommittee on the CIA is headed by Rep. Carl Vinson, D-Ga., and includes Reps. L. Mendel Rivers, D-S.C., F. Edward Hebert, D-La., Melvin Price, D-Ill., Charles E. Bennett, D-Fla., George Huddleston Jr., D-Ala., Leslie Arends, R-Ill., William G. Bray, R-Ind., Bob Wilson, R-Calif., and Frank C. Osmers Jr., R-N.J.

Rep. Walter Norblad, R-Ore., who was a member of this subcommittee several years ago, recently told the House, "We met annually—one time a year, for a period of two hours in which we accomplished virtually nothing."

But a present member of the subcommittee, who would not allow his name to be used, said that the group now meets at least once a month with McCone and has "frank, open, and wide discussions" lasting as much as three hours.

He said, however, that the group does not check on every detail of CIA operations but instead surveys the significant activities.

No stenographic record is kept at these sessions, which do not touch on specific appropriations for the CIA.

This is left in the hands of the Appropriations subcommittee, which hides the CIA appropriation, believed to be more than a half billion dollars a year, among the appropriations of various other agencies so neither the rest of Congress nor the public can know exactly what what Congress has appropriated for the agency.

The House Appropriations Committee refuses to reveal which of its members belong to the CIA subcommittee and how many times they meet a year.

But it is a safe guess that it meets with McCone about the same number of times as the subcommittee of the Armed Services Committee and that its membership includes at least Rep. Clarence Cannon, D-Mo., chairman of the full committee, Rep. George H. Mahon, D-Tex., and Rep. Gerald Ford, R-Mich.

The members of the Senate subcommittee on the CIA are Sens. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., John Stennis, D-Miss., Leverett Saltonstall, R-Mass., Carl Hayden, D-Ariz., and Milton R. Young, R-N.D.

The least number of times they have met with the CIA chief in a year has been two; the most, six.

BOOKS

Listen, Darling Daughter

NOT QUITE POSTHUMOUS LETTER TO MY DAUGHTER. By Caitlin Thomas. Atlantic - Little, Brown. $4.75.

Mrs. Thomas' 18-year-old daughter is the nominal audience for this highly flavored commentary on the follies of mankind, but of course the author has a greater audience in mind.

First Mrs. Thomas — widow of the poet Dylan Thomas—does a thoroughly hard-boiled job of lampooning the whole silly business of husband - catching. There are cynical pointers on dress, beauty aids, conversation and dancing, followed by dos and don'ts in the party-going business of making men think they're wonderful.

But then the nature of the book changes. Mrs. Thomas starts describing all the male types a young woman may run into. The gamut is wide - ranging. Men of all occupations and stations (or none), mixed with freaks and even criminals, are paraded before the reader.

None of these poor souls escapes the jabbing wit and corner - of - the - mouth sarcasm of the author, until she finally advises her daughter to catch a Rich Man.

This latter party of the book recalls certain essayists of the 17th Century, who satirized the social types of their own age, in sketches they called Characters. In those days all the writers were males. This book of Characters has a devastating feline quality because it was created by a woman.

Mrs. Thomas has some distressing mannerisms of style and punctuation, which flaw her colorful prose. But she also has a remarkable talent for the bon mot and the aphorism.

Faulkner's Personality Book Subject

MY BROTHER BILL. By John Faulkner. Trident. $4.95.

The personality of William Faulkner is the subject of this book, written as an "affectionate reminiscence" by his brother John, four years his junior.

But there is almost as much material about the Faulkner family's environment — Oxford, Miss., in the early years of this century — as there is about the Nobel Prize winner.

The brother assumes the reader is familiar with the contents of William's books, and with the salient facts of his biography. He has attempted no literary analyses.

John makes a leisurely climb through the family tree, examines in minute detail the school patterns, childhood games, pranks and social customs of their small town life, and recalls innumerable small anecdotes.

He tells you about the family's Negro servants; he recalls how the father kept changing businesses; he gives details about such events as William's broken nose (as a high school quarterback he tackled a stupid fellow player who was running the wrong way with an intercepted pass).

As for William's adult life, the brother cites specific instances of the stubborn insistence on privacy; recalls William's early interest in airplanes and his late interest in riding horses, his toying with farming; mentions his early conviction that shocking stories would sell, and his later, purely monetary, interest in Hollywood; and catalogs many a mild idiosyncracy.

John wrote short stories and novels, too, but never became a full-time author. He has left a highly personal account of his brother's life. Faulkner fans may find no great disclosures here, but there is a great deal of close observation.

New Novel On Changes In 'India'

THE PRINCES. By Manohar Malgonkar. Viking. $4.95.

Utilizing a story built around a Maharajah and his son, Malgonkar has created a study in depth of a great politico - social change in modern India.

The Maharajah is a figure from the mold of the past. As head of one of the many princely states (feudal domains) taken over by the British in Victorian days, he knows that the arrogant, profligate princes never can stem the strong current toward Indian independence unless the British remain in control. And it is inconceivable to him that the British will pull out.

But his son and heir, Abhay — the narrator of this story — grasps the inevitable truth; and though he bears a sad allegiance to the old ways, he watches the developments of the 1930s and 1940s and realizes that time cannot be reversed.

The author symbolizes the rise of the lower classes Kanakchand, who becomes an agitator. He underlines the social stresses of the old order by depicting an unfaithful Maharani and a rebellious illegitimate son of the ruler.

It is the old Maharajah who dominates the story. He is a curious mixture of pride, wisdom and folly, but you cannot help but admire the way in which he devotes himself to the inherited code. Particularly when his last two grand gestures are filled with a deep irony and a bravado in the face of fate.

The narrative develops in a leisurely and discursive way, filled with pageantry and tiger hunts, mixed with politics, but it has a three-dimensional, cumulative effect.

Malgonkar is the grandson of a one - time prime minister in one of the now vanished princely states, and for a time was a professional guide for tiger hunts, so he is close to his material. He is the author of several novels, this being the first to appear in America.

New British Spy Shocker

THE IPCRESS FILE. By Len Deighton. Simon & Schuster. $3.95.

We have now the American debut of another British writer specializing in the gripping adventures of a secret agent.

The hero narrates the story, and he doesn't give his name. But he is a randy character with a quippy tongue and a properly callous disregard for danger, a roving eye for the other sex and an engaging knowledge of esoteric subjects and faraway places.

Assigned to a small, specialized unit of the British spy network he first engages in an expedition beyond Beirut to rescue a kidnapped biochemist from the Reds, an operation which serves to introduce the villain.

There is a sortie at an American nuclear test site in the Pacific, and our hero is framed as a traitor. But instead of being hauled off to unfair justice he is whisked away by the wrong people, presumably to be tortured.

Deighton is good at the spy gambit of the double switch and the triple switch, so that you never can be sure which good guy is a bad guy, and which bad guy is really a good guy. He teases the reader by disclosing just enough of the hero's mental processes to create all sorts of enigmas.

This is crisply artful story. At times it seems to wink at you as though it is making an intentional burlesque of spy thrillers, and then it pulls a sharp bit of magic to throw the rightful touch of horror into the dark perspectives of the narrative. Deighton is a writer. His fresh, salty style graces a skilled performance.

MORRISON-DUVAL PLATFORM – A PROGRAM FOR A BETTER, GREATER LOUISIANA

LEADERSHIP—STABILITY—RESPONSIBILITY

We dedicate ourselves to provide an honest, efficient, stable and respected state government.

We support a Code of Ethics for State Officials and employees.

The basis for day to day decision shall be: Is it honest? Is it right? Is it responsible? Is it in the best interest of the people of the state?

SEGREGATION—RACE RELATIONS

We support the maintenance of segregation. The people of Louisiana have achieved their greatest progress under the traditional background of segregation of the races.

We completely oppose the Civil Rights proposal pending before the Congress.

We support law and order. We oppose violence and disorder. We oppose unlawful demonstrations which disturb the peace.

We believe in the principle of State's Rights and oppose Federal or outside interference in domestic affairs.

We believe in fair, decent treatment of all citizens and facilities for them. We believe in respect for all men, in understanding — not misunderstanding, in kindness — not hatred. We support the rule of reason.

INDUSTRY—NEW PLANTS—MORE AND BETTER JOBS

With personal leadership and salesmanship, we will dedicate ourselves to bring industry — both large and small plants — into the entire state and to help the growth of those we already have.

The growth and development of industry means more and better jobs — the elimination of unemployment — better education — better homes — for all our people.

EDUCATION

The future of our state rests in the hands of our young people. We support a forward-looking educational program at all levels, with special emphasis on expanded vocational education to support our industrial future.

We endorse a merit system for increased pay for our teachers and improved salaries for bus drivers and other school employees.

We will institute an expanded and improved program of scholarships and student loans.

We will continue the grant-in-aid program and correct the abuses therein.

We will continue the program of free school lunches for all needy children.

We pledge additional capital funds for our colleges and universities.

SOUND MANAGEMENT IN GOVERNMENT

We support a sound budget; a central listing of state employees as a means of initiating personnel control; the investment of idle funds; central purchasing to eliminate duplication and waste and effect substantial savings to the state. We will institute a capital planning program.

HOSPITALS—INSTITUTIONS—MENTAL HEALTH—PENSIONS—WELFARE

The hospitals and institutions of Louisiana will be improved to provide a fuller and more adequate treatment and care for the sick, infirmed and mentally ill.

Old age pensions and welfare benefits will be maintained. We will initiate the program for homes for our elder citizens and recreation for our golden age groups.

We pledge a sound and adequate program to provide for our handicapped and retarded children and adults.

The operation of our Charity Hospitals and medical institutions will be removed from politics and operated on a professional basis.

We will continue a realistic welfare program, but eliminate abuses therefrom.

HOME RULE

Local government is the backbone of our democracy. We stand up for the principle of home rule for parishes and towns of Louisiana and we pledge to maintain their right to administer their own affairs.

TAXATION

There will be no new taxes and no tax increases.

We support a simplification of our tax structure, and the elimination of the horsepower tax which has been a hindrance to the establishment and growth of industry.

LEGISLATIVE COOPERATION

We will respect the independence, dignity and responsibility of the Legislature. We propose a 10 day post legislative session to pass upon bills vetoed by the Governor.

AGRICULTURE

We will work to improve the production and marketing of farm, dairy products, cattle and livestock for a better day for the farmer, to expand the Sell Louisiana Farm Products program, to further the F.F.A. and 4-H programs, to provide modern research facilities, and accelerate soil conservation drainage and water control programs.

OIL-GAS-MINERAL RESOURCES—TIDELANDS

With the economy of the State largely geared to the Oil and Gas Industry, we will work for the creation of a sound and fair governmental and business climate for the continued development and production of natural resources.

We will vigorously seek to secure for the State its rightful share of the offshore tidelands. The tidelands money will be used in the capital building program and in the retirement of State debt and should not be included in the general fund, since it is a non-recurring item.

HIGHWAYS—EXPRESSWAYS—ROADS—BRIDGES

We pledge to provide a first-class highway system throughout Louisiana. This will include expediting an interstate highway program, the construction of secondary roads, and black-topping of farm to market roads.

An effective and state-wide safety program will be maintained and we support an incentive program for our young safe drivers.

We will promote additional paved air strips to make flying safer in Louisiana.

FISHERIES—WILDLIFE

We will support the commission form of wildlife management and strengthen the conservation of fish, shrimp, game, fur and oyster production.

Special emphasis will be given to research to revitalize our oyster, shrimp and fur industry. We will work to protect our Louisiana fishermen from unfair foreign competition.

FORESTRY

Fuller use of research and development of Louisiana's timber and wood products resources is pledged as a vital part of our program to work for the improvement of the state's economy.

RECREATION—TOURISM

We pledge to work to provide more and better recreational facilities for young and old. This includes development of state parks, fishing and hunting grounds, building of public programming and other recreational facilities.

We support a professional tourist commission for Louisiana.

PREFERENTIAL PRIMARY

In order that Louisiana voters may express their preference for Presidential candidates prior to the national conventions, we propose to conduct a preferential primary. This will give the people the greatest freedom of choice and we will be bound by their mandate.

OUR PLEDGE TO YOU

The MORRISON-DUVAL platform is directed to you, the citizen and voter. We pledge to you active, honest, efficient and sincere administration of the affairs of government. We dedicate our minds and hearts, our time, talents and energy, to secure for you the benefits of this program and the blessings of a finer and fuller life for all our people.

OIL-GAS-MINERAL RESOURCES—TIDELANDS

With the economy of the State largely geared to the Oil and Gas Industry, we will work for the creation of a sound and fair governmental and business climate for the continued development and production of natural resources.

We will vigorously seek to secure for the State its rightful share of the offshore tidelands. The tidelands money will be used in the capital building program and in the retirement of State debt and should not be included in the general fund, since it is a non-recurring item.

HIGHWAYS—EXPRESSWAYS—ROADS—BRIDGES

We pledge to provide a first-class highway system throughout Louisiana. This will include expediting an interstate highway program, the construction of secondary roads, and black-topping of farm to market roads.

An effective and state-wide safety program will be maintained and we support an incentive program for our young safe drivers.

We will promote additional paved air strips to make flying safer in Louisiana.

FISHERIES—WILDLIFE

We will support the commission form of wildlife management and strengthen the conservation of fish, shrimp, game, fur and oyster production.

Special emphasis will be given to research to revitalize our oyster, shrimp and fur industry. We will work to protect our Louisiana fishermen from unfair foreign competition.

FORESTRY

Fuller use of research and development of Louisiana's timber and wood products resources is pledged as a vital part of our program to work for the improvement of the state's economy.

RECREATION—TOURISM

We pledge to work to provide more and better recreational facilities for young and old. This includes development of state parks, fishing and hunting grounds, building of public programming and other recreational facilities.

We support a professional tourist commission for Louisiana.

PREFERENTIAL PRIMARY

In order that Louisiana voters may express their preference for Presidential candidates prior to the national conventions, we propose to conduct a preferential primary. This will give the people the greatest freedom of choice and we will be bound by their mandate.

OUR PLEDGE TO YOU

The MORRISON-DUVAL platform is directed to you, the citizen and voter. We pledge to you active, honest, efficient and sincere administration of the affairs of government. We dedicate our minds and hearts, our time, talents and energy, to secure for you the benefits of this program and the blessings of a finer and fuller life for all our people.

ADVISES WAIT-AND-SEE

Nixon Seeing GOP Contacts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard M. Nixon is re-establishing contacts with Republicans in all sections of the country and urging them to withhold 1964 presidential nomination commitments.

The former vice president, who lost the presidency by a hairline in 1960, is described by associates as spreading the doctrine that it is too early to tell what is going to happen in the nomination scramble.

In his conversations with Republican leaders, Nixon has hewed to the line that he is not a candidate himself and does not foresee any likelihood that he will be injected into the contest.

But he has made it clear he is less than enthusiastic about either New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, who had formally entered his name, and Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., who is expected to do so later on.

His theme has been that time may bring forward a candidate more acceptable to middle-of-the-road Republicans and one with a better chance of being elected. Thus far he hasn't mentioned any names.

One party leader familiar with the situation said he credits Nixon with sincerity in his declaration of noncandidacy.

"I think he is trying to preserve his contacts with the party to be in a position where he can have some influence on the kind of platform we adopt and the kind of candidate we nominate," this leader said. "But, like anyone else, if the nomination were offered him he would take it."

Another party leader, who, unlike his colleague, opposes Goldwater, voiced the opinion that so long as Rockefeller stays in the contest it will be difficult to develop any strength for a third runner.

His conclusion is that those who don't want either Goldwater or Rockefeller can't really get moving until after the March 10 New Hampshire primary.

A poor showing by the governor in that primary, he feels, would be certain to spark an effort by GOP leaders in the big industrial states to pool their strength behind a candidate to stop Goldwater.

On the other hand, he thinks that if Rockefeller either wins the primary or makes it a close race, there will be little prospect of organizing any such movement.

LEADERS UNDER FIRE

Rise In Congress Attacks Possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — Open attacks on the leadership of Congress, such as rocked the Senate last week, may become more frequent as the 1963 session drags to a close.

When Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., sounded off against both the Democratic and Republican leaders of his chamber, he gave voice to grumblings that have been heard privately for months in congressional corridors.

Many members are unhappy because the session has lasted so long, threatens to run into 1964, and hasn't accomplished as much as might be expected for so long a meeting. They are unhappy because there has been no extended recess for family vacations and because the drawnout session has interfered otherwise with personal plans.

The feeling of gloom deepens when members look ahead to the 1964 session. There is an increasing prospect that the two biggest pieces of legislation that helped keep Congress here so long this year, will be shoved into the 1964 session. These are civil rights and tax revision.

Next year is election year for one-third of the Senate and the entire House. Members had hoped to clear up most of the politically "hot" issues this year and have time for campaigning after a comparatively short session next year. Now they have misgivings about winding up the 1964 session before the presidential nominating conventions.

Criticism of the elected leaders came into the open on the closing day of the 1962 session, when Chairman Clarence Cannon, D-Mo., of the House Appropriations Committee fired a broadside at the House command.

"I cannot endorse the quality of leadership," Cannon told a startled House. "I have sat under ten speakers, but I have never seen such biases and inept leadership."

Cannon probably put his finger on the cause of discontent.

There has been a tendency to compare the present leadership of Congress with the immediately preceding high command.

Sen. Mike Mansfield of Montana became majority leader of the Senate in 1961 when Lyndon B. Johnson took office as vice president. A year later, Rep. John W. McCormack of Massachusetts was elected to fill the House speakership vacated by the death of the veteran Sam Rayburn of Texas.

The team of Rayburn and Johnson had a way of getting things done. The two Texans could get tough when toughness was required. They would knock stubborn heads together if the occasion called for it. There was little, if any, open criticism of their leadership.

The milder Mansfield and McCormack don't operate that way. They don't "lay down the law" to their followers as sternly as did their predecessors.

Both McCormack and Mansfield contend Congress is doing a good job and will have as good a record as any when it adjourns. Some of their defenders argue that the real trouble is that Congress operates under archaic rules, and that the leaders aren't responsible for the slow pace.

Dissatisfaction with the leadership isn't confined to the Democrats. A sizable group of House Republicans met recently and displayed some unhappiness that their leader, Rep. Charles A. Halleck of Indiana, had publicly offered support of a compromise civil rights bill without consultation with the rank and file.

In 1959, House Republicans openly rebelled against the leadership of Joseph W. Martin of Massachusetts and elected Halleck as their boss.

SEX ONE MOTIVE

Insurance Murder Sparks Vivid Trial

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP)—The Thompson murder trial has the ingredients of sensation—a cold-blooded killing, a respected attorney accused of arranging it, and money and another woman as alleged motives.

But the state selected bits of paper—insurance policies totaling more than a million dollars—to begin building the case it hopes will convict T. Eugene Thompson of killing his wife through an assassin.

The first week of testimony in Thompson's trial ended last Friday as it began, with insurance men testifying how the slight, crew-cut St. Paul attorney took out $1,055,000 insurance on his wife in the year before she was beaten and stabbed to death last March 6, alone in their fashionable home.

The insurance testimony was designed to lay a base for one motive for the killing — the state contends sex was the other. But there were by-products.

The prosecutor, craggy-faced William Randall, sought to paint for the six-man, six-woman jury a picture of the defendant buying excessive amounts of insurance on his wife, and buying it in a hurry.

There was testimony that agents gave attractive, Carol Thompson, 34, the mother of four children, blank applications to sign. This, it was suggested, was at Thompson's request so she would not know how much insurance he had taken out on her life.

And there was testimony from one insurance man that Thompson had talked of troublesome premonitions of death of persons close to him.

"He told me he had a premonition that Carol would meet with some tragic accident," the witness said of a conversation he testified took place less than a year before Mrs. Thompson's murder.

She was beaten with a gun butt, stabbed with a knife, and left for dead, but managed to make her way to a neighbor's home for help. She died a few hours later in a hospital without being able to describe the killer.

The state contends the original plan was for the slayer to knock Mrs. Thompson out with a rubber hose, strip her, and place her in a filled bathtub and force water into her lungs, to make it appear an accidental drowning.

Thompson's chief defense counsel, Hyam Segell, did not let the insurance testimony go on record without making points of his own.

From one witness the jury heard that Thompson carried unusually heavy property and liability insurance, and was something of an impulsive insurance fanatic.

Segell also elicited from one agent an explanation that Thompson carried heavy insurance on his wife as a "hedge" against the possibility Mrs. Thompson would die before him, and that the fortune of Mrs. Thompson's wealthy parents would go to the children.

In anticipation of the upcoming "other woman" testimony, Segell drew from two agents the opinion that the Thompsons were a happily married couple.

And in trying to get his hands on a statement given to police by one prosecution witness soon after the murder, Segell touched off the most bizarre incident of the trial's slow - moving first week.

When Randall declined to produce it, presiding Judge Rolf Fosseen called a lengthy recess. During it, attorneys for both sides met behind closed doors with five judges of the State Supreme Court.

Officially, the court did nothing. But next morning Randall gave the judge the disputed statement with the stipulation the defense get it only if the judge felt it conflicted with the witness's testimony. Judge Fosseen looked it over, refused to let the defense have it.

The statement itself was regarded as relatively minor, but not the precedent it set. When major witnesses — the still unnamed "other woman," the alleged hired killer, who is reported to have confessed—take the stand, the defense will presumably be allowed to use any written statements they have given the state if the judge decides there are discrepancies.

Rocky Eases Campaign To 'Grass-Roots'

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's usually elaborate campaign operation on the road has been simplified for his grass-roots appeal to New Hampshire voters.

This development reflects apparent concern that the large corps of aides and advisers that normally accompanies the governor on the campaign trials would be no asset in New Hampshire.

The New York governor is counting on a folksy, handshaking approach in his effort to win support from the state's Republicans, who could decide his political future.

NEWS ANALYSIS

The elaborate campaign operation that Rockefeller brought to New Hampshire in a brief visit last month created an aura of affluence and high-level political organization alien to the small cities and rural areas of the Granite State.

The Rockefeller road operation also invited unfavorable comparisons with that of Sen. Barry Goldwater, who holds a long lead in this early stage of the contest for the New Hampshire presidential preference primary. The Arizona senator has not declared himself a candidate yet but is expected to do so.

The relative simplicity of Goldwater's political tours has been noted with increasing frequency in accounts of his activities.

Despite Goldwater's lead, Rockefeller's campaign leaders in New Hampshire insist that he is doing well and that his chances are improving in direct ratio to the number of voters he greets personally.

But others say it is too early for an appraisal. Rockefeller's efforts in New Hampshire so far have been concentrated on the southern part of the state, which contains its three largest cities —Manchester, Nashua and Concord.

Rockefeller's biggest challenge will come in the villages and rural areas of central and northern New Hampshire. In visiting them, Rockefeller is expected to keep his campaign along the informal lines of his visit last week.

He went to New Hampshire Thursday immediately after announcing his formal candidacy for the GOP presidential nomination and his intention to compete in that state's primary next March 10.

Ellender Sees Senate Change In Rights Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., predicted Saturday the Senate will change the civil rights bill approved by the House Judiciary Committee if the House doesn't.

In a radio address recorded for delivery over station WWL, New Orleans, he said:

"No matter what form it (the bill) takes I am confident that it will be changed substantially before it passes the Senate, if, indeed it ever does."

Ellender noted he had said earlier he would celebrate Christmas by speaking against the bill, if necessary.

"Now it looks as though I must amend that by saying, if necessary, I will celebrate the Fourth of July by doing the same thing," he said.

BRANDT TO KENYA

CAIRO, U.A.R. (UPI)— West Berlin Mayor Willy Brandt left Saturday by plane for Kenya after a five-day visit to the United Arab Republic. During his stay, Brandt met with U.A.R. officials, including President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

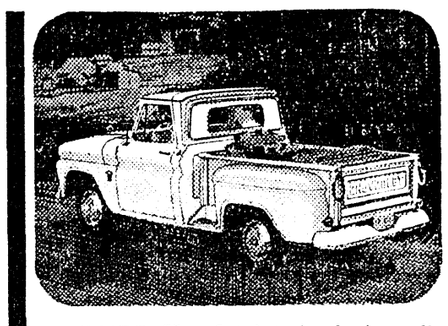
CHEVROLET
Which type Chevrolet pickup do you need?
Chevrolet now makes four different types, each with its own distinct advantages. Whichever one you buy will be a lot more truck than your money bought the last time!

FLEETSIDE. Based on sales, the best liked pickup in the world. Outstanding feature is its large body extending clear out over the wheels. Two body sizes. Two wheelbases. Best riding truck, by far, with coil springs all around and independent front suspension. Cab and body have double-wall construction. Chevrolet Fleetside—best for all-around use.



STEPSIDE. Has flat interior body walls and convenient side steps between cab and rear fenders. Comes in same two sizes as the Fleetside plus one bigger size. Big model has heavier frame, 4-speed transmission and leaf-spring rear suspension for maximum payloads. Standard engine is 230-cu.-in. Six. A 292 Six or 283 V8 is available at extra cost.

RAMPSIDE. Nobody else makes a pickup exactly like this one with a ramp at the side. The ramp makes loading easy because of its 16-inch rise. Truck also has a conventional tailgate. Body and frame-floor assembly are very rigid because they are welded together. Has larger 95-hp air-cooled engine this year. Independent coil spring suspension all around.

EL CAMINO. If you want a pickup as good looking as any car on the road, this is the one! It can work hard, and look like a million dollars doing it—the only pickup in the world with Body by Fisher! You can order an El Camino as plain or as fancy as you wish: bucket seats, air conditioning, 4-speed transmission, power brakes are some of its extra-cost options.

ADVISES WAIT-AND-SEE

Nixon Seeing GOP Contacts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard M. Nixon is re-establishing contacts with Republicans in all sections of the country and urging them to withhold 1964 presidential nomination commitments.

The former vice president, who lost the presidency by a hairline in 1960, is described by associates as spreading the doctrine that it is too early to tell what is going to happen in the nomination scramble.

In his conversations with Republican leaders, Nixon has hewed to the line that he is not a candidate himself and does not foresee any likelihood that he will be injected into the contest.

But he has made it clear he is less than enthusiastic about either New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, who had formally entered his name, and Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., who is expected to do so later on.

His theme has been that time may bring forward a candidate more acceptable to middle-of-the-road Republicans and one with a better chance of being elected. Thus far he hasn't mentioned any names.

One party leader familiar with the situation said he credits Nixon with sincerity in his declaration of noncandidacy.

"I think he is trying to preserve his contacts with the party to be in a position where he can have some influence on the kind of platform we adopt and the kind of candidate we nominate," this leader said. "But, like anyone else, if the nomination were offered him he would take it."

Another party leader, who, unlike his colleague, opposes Goldwater, voiced the opinion that so long as Rockefeller stays in the contest it will be difficult to develop any strength for a third runner.

His conclusion is that those who don't want either Goldwater or Rockefeller can't really get moving until after the March 10 New Hampshire primary.

A poor showing by the governor in that primary, he feels, would be certain to spark an effort by GOP leaders in the big industrial states to pool their strength behind a candidate to stop Goldwater.

On the other hand, he thinks that if Rockefeller either wins the primary or makes it a close race, there will be little prospect of organizing any such movement.

LEADERS UNDER FIRE

Rise In Congress Attacks Possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — Open attacks on the leadership of Congress, such as rocked the Senate last week, may become more frequent as the 1963 session drags to a close.

When Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., sounded off against both the Democratic and Republican leaders of his chamber, he gave voice to grumblings that have been heard privately for months in congressional corridors.

Many members are unhappy because the session has lasted so long, threatens to run into 1964, and hasn't accomplished as much as might be expected for so long a meeting. They are unhappy because there has been no extended recess for family vacations and because the drawnout session has interfered otherwise with personal plans.

The feeling of gloom deepens when members look ahead to the 1964 session. There is an increasing prospect that the two biggest pieces of legislation that helped keep Congress here so long this year, will be shoved into the 1964 session. These are civil rights and tax revision.

Next year is election year for one-third of the Senate and the entire House. Members had hoped to clear up most of the politically "hot" issues this year and have time for campaigning after a comparatively short session next year. Now they have misgivings about winding up the 1964 session before the presidential nominating conventions.

Criticism of the elected leaders came into the open on the closing day of the 1962 session, when Chairman Clarance Cannon, D-Mo., of the House Appropriations Committee fired a broadside at the House command.

"I cannot endorse the quality of leadership," Cannon told a startled House. "I have sat under ten speakers, but I have never seen such biases and inept leadership."

Cannon probably put his finger on the cause of discontent.

There has been a tendency to compare the present leadership of Congress with the immediately preceding high command.

Sen. Mike Mansfield of Montana became majority leader of the Senate in 1961 when Lyndon B. Johnson took office as vice president. A year later, Rep. John W. McCormack of Massachusetts was elected to fill the House speakership vacated by the death of the veteran Sam Rayburn of Texas.

The team of Rayburn and Johnson had a way of getting things done. The two Texans could get tough when toughness was required. They would knock stubborn heads together if the occasion called for it. There was little, if any, open criticism of their leadership.

The milder Mansfield and McCormack don't operate that way. They don't "lay down the law" to their followers as sternly as did their predecessors.

Both McCormack and Mansfield contend Congress is doing a good job and will have as good a record as any when it adjourns. Some of their defenders argue that the real trouble is that Congress operates under archaic rules, and that the leaders aren't responsible for the slow pace.

Dissatisfaction with the leadership isn't confined to the Democrats. A sizable group of House Republicans met recently and displayed some unhappiness that their leader, Rep. Charles A. Halleck of Indiana, had publicly offered support of a compromise civil rights bill without consultation with the rank and file.

In 1959, House Republicans openly rebelled against the leadership of Joseph W. Martin of Massachusetts and elected Halleck as their boss.

SEX ONE MOTIVE

Insurance Murder Sparks Vivid Trial

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP)—The Thompson murder trial has the ingredients of sensation—a cold-blooded killing, a respected attorney accused of arranging it, and money and another woman as alleged motives.

But the state selected bits of paper—insurance policies totaling more than a million dollars—to begin building the case it hopes will convict T. Eugene Thompson of killing his wife through an assassin.

The first week of testimony in Thompson's trial ended last Friday as it began, with insurance men testifying how the slight, crew-cut St. Paul attorney took out $1,055,000 insurance on his wife in the year before she was beaten and stabbed to death last March 6, alone in their fashionable home.

The insurance testimony was designed to lay a base for one motive for the killing — the state contends sex was the other. But there were by-products.

The prosecutor, craggy-faced William Randall, sought to paint for the six-man, six-woman jury a picture of the defendant buying excessive amounts of insurance on his wife, and buying it in a hurry.

There was testimony that agents gave attractive, Carol Thompson, 34, the mother of four children, blank applications to sign. This, it was suggested, was at Thompson's request so she would not know how much insurance he had taken out on her life.

And there was testimony from one insurance man that Thompson had talked of troublesome premonitions of death of persons close to him.

"He told me he had a premonition that Carol would meet with some tragic accident," the witness said of a conversation he testified took place less than a year before Mrs. Thompson's murder.

She was beaten with a gun butt, stabbed with a knife, and left for dead, but managed to make her way to a neighbor's home for help. She died a few hours later in a hospital without being able to describe the killer.

The state contends the original plan was for the slayer to knock Mrs. Thompson out with a rubber hose, strip her, and place her in a filled bathtub and force water into her lungs, to make it appear an accidental drowning.

Thompson's chief defense counsel, Hyam Segell, did not let the insurance testimony go on record without making points of his own.

From one witness the jury heard that Thompson carried unusually heavy property and liability insurance, and was something of an impulsive insurance fanatic.

Segell also elicited from one agent an explanation that Thompson carried heavy insurance on his wife as a "hedge" against the possibility Mrs. Thompson would die before him, and that the fortune of Mrs. Thompson's wealthy parents would go to the children.

In anticipation of the upcoming "other woman" testimony, Segell drew from two agents the opinion that the Thompsons were a happily married couple.

And in trying to get his hands on a statement given to police by one prosecution witness soon after the murder, Segell touched off the most bizarre incident of the trial's slow - moving first week.

When Randall declined to produce it, presiding Judge Rolf Fosseen called a lengthy recess. During it, attorneys for both sides met behind closed doors with five judges of the State Supreme Court.

Officially, the court did nothing. But next morning Randall gave the judge the disputed statement with the stipulation the defense get it only if the judge felt it conflicted with the witness's testimony. Judge Fosseen looked it over, refused to let the defense have it.

The statement itself was regarded as relatively minor, but not the precedent it set. When major witnesses — the still unnamed "other woman," the alleged hired killer, who is reported to have confessed—take the stand, the defense will presumably be allowed to use any written statements they have given the state if the judge decides there are discrepancies.

Ellender Sees Senate Change In Rights Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., predicted Saturday the Senate will change the civil rights bill approved by the House Judiciary Committee if the House doesn't.

In a radio address recorded for delivery over station WWL, New Orleans, he said:

"No matter what form it (the bill) takes I am confident that it will be changed substantially before it passes the Senate, if, indeed it ever does."

Ellender noted he had said earlier he would celebrate Christmas by speaking against the bill, if necessary.

"Now it looks as though I must amend that by saying, if necessary, I will celebrate the Fourth of July by doing the same thing," he said.

Rocky Eases Campaign To 'Grass-Roots'

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's usually elaborate campaign operation on the road has been simplified for his grass-roots appeal to New Hampshire voters.

This development reflects apparent concern that the large corps of aides and advisers that normally accompanies the governor on the campaign trials would be no asset in New Hampshire.

The New York governor is counting on a folksy, handshaking approach in his effort to win support from the state's Republicans, who could decide his political future.

NEWS ANALYSIS

The elaborate campaign operation that Rockefeller brought to New Hampshire in a brief visit last month created an aura of affluence and high-level political organization alien to the small cities and rural areas of the Granite State.

The Rockefeller road operation also invited unfavorable comparisons with that of Sen. Barry Goldwater, who holds a long lead in this early stage of the contest for the New Hampshire presidential preference primary. The Arizona senator has not declared himself a candidate yet but is expected to do so.

The relative simplicity of Goldwater's political tours has been noted with increasing frequency in accounts of his activities.

Despite Goldwater's lead, Rockefeller's campaign leaders in New Hampshire insist that he is doing well and that his chances are improving in direct ratio to the number of voters he greets personally.

But others say it is too early for an appraisal. Rockefeller's efforts in New Hampshire so far have been concentrated on the southern part of the state, which contains its three largest cities —Manchester, Nashua and Concord.

Rockefeller's biggest challenge will come in the villages and rural areas of central and northern New Hampshire. In visiting them, Rockefeller is expected to keep his campaign along the informal lines of his visit last week.

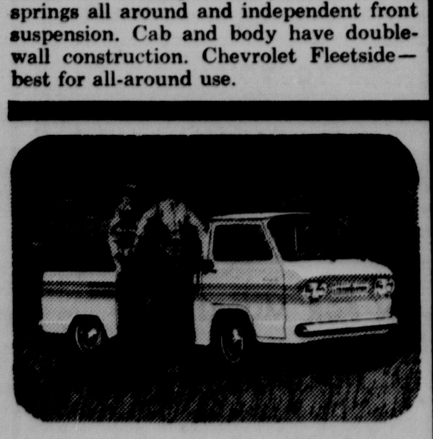
He went to New Hampshire Thursday immediately after announcing his formal candidacy for the GOP presidential nomination and his intention to compete in that state's primary next March 10.

Which type Chevrolet pickup do you need?

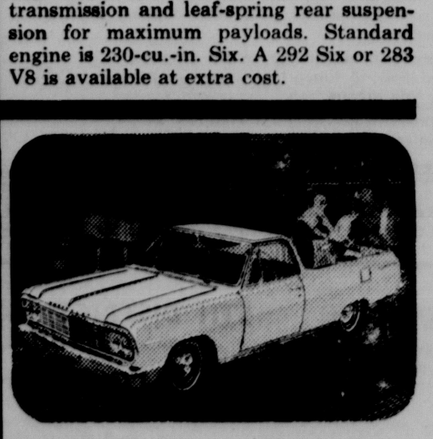
Chevrolet now makes four different types, each with its own distinct advantages. Whichever one you buy will be a lot more truck than your money bought the last time!

FLEETSIDE. Based on sales, the best liked pickup in the world. Outstanding feature is its large body extending clear out over the wheels. Two body sizes. Two wheelbases. Best riding truck, by far, with coil springs all around and independent front suspension. Cab and body have double-wall construction. Chevrolet Fleetside—best for all-around use.

STEPSIDE. Has flat interior body walls and convenient side steps between cab and rear fenders. Comes in same two sizes as the Fleetside plus one bigger size. Big model has heavier frame, 4-speed transmission and leaf-spring rear suspension for maximum payloads. Standard engine is 230-cu.-in. Six. A 292 Six or 283 V8 is available at extra cost.



RAMPSIDE. Nobody else makes a pickup exactly like this one with a ramp at the side. The ramp makes loading easy because of its 16-inch rise. Truck also has a conventional tailgate. Body and frame-floor assembly are very rigid because they are welded together. Has larger 95-hp air-cooled engine this year. Independent coil spring suspension all around.



EL CAMINO. If you want a pickup as good looking as any car on the road, this is the one! It can work hard, and look like a million dollars doing it—the only pickup in the world with Body by Fisher! You can order an El Camino as plain or as fancy as you wish: bucket seats, air conditioning, 4-speed transmission, power brakes are some of its extra-cost options.

Tigers Too Much In Final Stanza

By JACK GATES
Executive Editor
News-Star—World

BATON ROUGE — Joe LaBruzzo, a will-o-the-wisp scatback, who can cut on a dime and return a nickle in change, scored three thrilling touchdowns Saturday night in helping to spark Louisiana State University to a 28-14 victory over Texas Christian University.

The speedy Cutoff, La., sophomore scatted 10 yards for his first one to tie to the score at 14-14 early in the third period. He then swung wide for three yards a few minutes later for another to put the Tigers ahead to stay, 21-14. Then in the final period, he cut to his right, swung back and rambled 45 yards for the final one.

As he crossed the 20 yard line he was alone. End Doug Moreau booted all extra points. So far this year he has kicked 14 for 14.

In all Labruzzo, who used the TCU line for his private speedway, picked up 109 yards in 12 carries.

Although Labruzzo, back at full strength after suffering an injury in the Kentucky game, was the sparkplug, he was ably assisted by sophomore fullback Donald Schwab, who scored the first LSU touchdown on a beautifully-executed 36 yard dash, and Danny LeBlanc, who picked up 59 yards and key yardage when it was needed most.

Billy Ezell quarterbacked the Tigers all the game and attempted eight passes, the most he's thrown, but completed only one for seven yards.

At one point in the game when TCU was leading 14 to 7, the sellout crowd of 67,500 started chanting 'We want Greer, we want Greer," meaning quarterback Ed Greer of Minden who is considered a top passer.

Both TCU touchdowns came in the first half, and it looked for a while they might take the contest. Halfback Larry Bulach scored from three yards out for the first one midway of the first period after teammate Jim Fauver had set it up with a tingling 72 yard kickoff return.

The final TCU score came early in the second period on a bouncy pass play from the Tiger 26. Second string quarterback Randy Howard, back to pass, threw down the middle to Fauver.

The ball bounced off an LSU defender, Fauver grabbed it at the 15 and went over for the score. Then Howard casually tossed to end Bill Bowers for a two-point conversion.

The Tigers, who have been hampered with injuries all season, lost another before the half ended when Ruffin Rodrigue, a top center and a defensive player, suffered a leg injury.

However, by the halftime, the Tigers appeared to have come to play ball. The line play was fierce with a tremendous charge. On the opening series of plays, halfback Larry Thomas fumbled for TCU and bandit center Bill Bass pounced on it at the TCU 16. Three plays later, Labruzzo galloped the 10 yards for the score.

On the initial kickoff drive, TCU drove to the Tiger 23 but were unable to do more.

From there on it was the Tigers ball game. Taking the ball at their own 19, they moved 18 yards in eight plays to score.

Leblanc highlighted the start of the drive with a 28-yard dash, then Labruzzo went for 27, moving to the TCU five. Three plays later he packed it over from the three.

The final Tiger talley was an 89-yard drive. After the ball had been moved to the TCU 45, Labruzzo spun his dazzling 45-yard run. He cut back on the last TCU player at the 22 and then casually trotted into the end zone.

TCU battled back and with the clock running out, moved to the LSU 35. Then on a pass play, Bass, who played magnificent defense throughout the game, intercepted a pass by quarterback Garry Mills to end the threat and the Tigers ran out the cock.

The first LSU score came on the opening kickoff and on a 70-yard drive, with Schwab, a 195-pounder from Thibodeaux, dashing the last 46.

Outside of the scoring thrusts, TCU mounted only two other drives, but neither were good for scores.

However, the Horned Frogs were a threat until the fourth LSU touchdown. They were big and tall and hit with authority in the line, particularly in the first half when they were outcharging the Tiger linemen.

End Danny Neumann of Tallulah, the LSU punter, who has not had a good night in that department for sometime, didn't do too good in the game with his punts, although he played good defensive ball. On five punts, Neumann ended up with 28.8 average to 35.8 for Garry Thomas of TCU. However, two of Thomas' punts were more than 50 yards.

Overall, the Tigers won the statistical battle, except in the passing department.

On the ground, the fleet LSU runners picked up 334 yards rushing to 40 for TCU. The Texans, however, completed 10 of 18 passes for 149 yards. In the first down department, LSU had 16 to 13 for TCU.

Indians Take 1st GSC Win In 4th Period

By RICK BRYAN
World Sports Editor

Northeast State's clutch-playing Indians uncorked a chips down touchdown march in the fourth quarter, then kicked the crucial extra point to take a slim 7-6 victory over the University of Southwestern Louisiana and climb out of the Gulf States Conference cellar here Saturday night.

Indian quarterback Bookie Shillcut slipped over from about the one foot mark on a fourth down sneaker for the touchdown and senior fullback Willie Ragan added the PAT.

Earlier in the drive which carried 42 yards, Shillcut fired a nine-yard third down pass to end Steve Regan for a first at the Bulldog 17. It was the only Northeast completeion of the night, but couldn't have come a ta better time for the majority of the 4,500 who witnessed the game.

USL opened the scoring in the second period, marching 34 yards after a short Northeast kick from the end zone.

Freshman fullback Chester Gosnell got the touchdown on a 12 yard scamper through the Indian line.

Then Northeast tackle Joe Alewine slammed into the Bulldog backfield to block Gerald Landry's extra point kick attempt in what turned out to be one of the key plays in the game.

The victory gives Northeast a 3-5 season record and leaves the Indians 1-3 in GSC play. Southwestern is now 3-4 for the year and 0-3 in the conference.

As in a numberof the Indians' other games, Northeast completely dominated the statistics, annexing 15 first downs to seven and 235 yards rushing to 114.

Quarterback Mike Cooper paced Northeast's rushing with 42 yards on 11 attempts. Fullback Ronnie Graham was close behind with 40 on 11 and halfback Ronnie Myrick had 35 for nine.

USL quarterback Lindsey Landry paced the Canines with 35 on 11. Gosnell had 27 for seven and freshman wingback Craig Boudreaux gained 17 on three.

Northeast got a good drive the first time the Indianas has the ball, marching from their own 33 to the Bulldogs 32 after stopping USL after the opening kickoff. At this point, however, Cooper's pass was picked off by Boudreaux.

Later in the period the Tribe marched from its 41 to the Canine 28, before losing the ball on downs.

But in the second quarter Northeast lost its good field position and Steve Regan's hurried punt from his end zone wetn only to the Indian 34.

It took the Raging Cajuns only five plays to score. Landry picked up 18 on a crucial third down play, rolling out to his right, then turning on the speed and racing to the Indian 14. Two plays later Gosnell picked his way through the Northeast line, cut back, then powered over a tackler at the goal line to score on a 12-yarder. Alewine broke through to block Gerald Landry's extra point kick and leave it 6-0 with 7:15 to go in the half.

Returning the kickoff to its own 21 the Tribe set out on a late march which went all the wat to the Bulldogs 29 before running out of steam. An 11-yard keeper by Cooperand Myrick's 15 yard romp on a pitchout were big gainers in the drive.

The Indians tok the second half kickoff and stormed down to the Southwestern 38 where they relinquished the ball when quarterback Dee Faircloth was stopped short on a fourth and seven situation.

Southwestern got the ball at its 33 after an exchange of punts but Indian halfback R. F. Wilson grabbed Landry's fumble at the USL 42 to set up the winning touchdown march.

After Shillcut's pressurized third down pass to Regan at the Canine 17, Graham took over and carried four straight times, bulling the ball to the one. Halfback Morris Douglas dove for a half yard and Shillcut sneaked over on fourth down with 12:50 left in the final perio Ragan's kick was good and the Indians had their 7-6 margin.

Southwestern couldn't move after the kickoff and the Tribe marched form its 44 to the Bulldogs 30 before Regan was forced to punt.

Rebels Smother Inferior Tampa

OXFORD, Miss. (AP)—Mississippi smashed Tampa 41-0 Saturday, giving everybody down to the third team a chance to see action.

The lopsided victory put the Rebels through their seventh game without a defeat and another step toward their second straight undefeated season.

Auburn's 13-10 defeat by Mississippi State left Mississippi alone atop the Southeastern Conference standings.

All but one of the Rebels' six touchdowns came on passes—two by Perry Lee Dunn, two by Metz and Weatherly's seven-yard pass to Wells.

Jim Weatherly and one by Jimmy Heidel. Weatherly got the other touchdown on a one-yard run.

The closest Tampa could get to Mississippi's goal was a drive to the Rebels' 36 in the fourth quarter.

Statistics told the story. The Rebels got 194 yards rushing to Tampa's 48. A single Ole Miss ball carrier, Frank Kinard topped the Tampa total with 64 yards in 11 carries.

In passing, Mississippi got 205 yards, completing 18 of 31. Tampa completed 5 of 10 for 33 yards. Dunn alone accounted for 124 yards in the air, hitting on 10 of 17. Weatherly connected on 8 of 9 for 73 yards and Heidel got 1 of 4 for 8 yards.

Mike Buss gained 30 of Tampa's 48 yards rushing. He got the yardage on 11 carries.

After a scoreless first quarter Weatherly hit Dave Wells for two yards and the first Rebel touchdown. The Rebels piled on another before the half, this time on Dunn's four-yard throw to Mike Dennis.

Mississippi added one in the third quarter on Dunn's 11-yard pass to Bill Sumrall and got three in the final quarter—Weatherly's one-yard sneak, Heidel's nine-yard pass to John

Nebraska Wins

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska retaliated with two quick touchdowns, after Gale Sayers sped 99 yards for a Kansas touchdown, and rolled to a 23-9 Big Eight football triumph over the Jayhawks Saturday.

Sayers' record run came as Nebraska clung to a 10-3 lead gained in the first half. Gary Duff's conversion kick missed and Kansas trailed 10-9.

Harvard Tops Unbeaten Tide

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Harvard quarterback Mike Bassett directed a methodical ball control offense with which the Crimson spoilers upset the previously unbeaten, united Princeton powerhouse 21-7 Saturday.

A swarming Harvard defense kept the vaunted Tiger attack bottled up for the first three periods as the Crimson prevented Princeton from clinching a tie for the Ivy League football championship.

MISCUES HURT BULLDOGS

Southeastern Grabs Homecoming Victory

HAMMOND (Special) — Louisiana Tech developed an acute case of fumbilitis here Saturday afternoon and Southeastern Louisiana College's homecoming Lions pounced on two of the opportunities for easy touchdowns and a surprising 15-7 victory over the Bulldogs.

The Techmen fumbled five times and the thankful Lions, playing before 7,000 old grads, grabbed off four of them.

Prior to this game, which was played on a muddy field after heavy rain Friday night, the Canines had lost only three fumbles all season.

Tech had a wide edge in statistics.

The Bulldogs made 13 first downs to nine for the Lions and had a 137-106 margin in rushing and 72-33 edge in passing yards.

Billy Laird completed nine of 19 passes for 72 yeards.

Alden Reeves picked up 42 yards in 11 carries, Odom 42 in 10 and McDowell 36 in nine trips. Punting was an important factor for the Lions on the muddy field, with Brent Rousell averaging 40.6 yards on seven kicks.

Tech's record dropped to 4-3 for the season and the Bulldogs' 2-2 GSC mark about eliminates them from the race.

Southeastern upped its overall record to 4-2-1 and three wins without a loss in the league. McNeese and SLC tangle in a showdown battle in Lake Charles next Saturday.

With the air attack grounded somewhat by the weather, the Techmen consistently gained yardage on the ground, but each drive was halted by some miscue.

Twice Tech punter David Lee was rushed to such an extent he could not get his kicks away. The Lions scored as a result of the first one after taking over at the Bulldog six-yard line. The other TD was also a cheap one and it all but killed Tech's chances in the fourth period. Odom gained seven yards around end, had the ball jump into the air when tackled and SLC's Ellis Johnson was there to pluck it out of the air and race 40 yards down the sidelines for the clincher.

Tech started out like it would turn the game into a rout, and that began with the recovery of a Lion bobble by tackle Robert Malone at the SLC 29. Laird carried for three, Odom got three and then eight for first down at the 15.

McDowell got seven and then four before Odom took it over from the three. Speedy Campbell's kick was perfect and Tech had a 7-0 margin with 6:23 left in the first period.

Things went sour early in the second quarter when Tech was unable to move deep in its own territory and Lee went back to kick. He bobbled the ball momentarily and Lions swarmed him back on the seven.

SLC made only one yard in two tries and then quarterback Dick Cothern found end Earl Dieterich all alone in the end zone with an aerial. When the Canines drew a penalty on the placement try the Lions went for two and Johnson lugged it over.

Following the kickoff which Corky Corkern returned from the 12 to the 29 the Techsters got a sustained drive going. Billy Laird passed eight yards to Corkern, then 10 to Alden Reeves. Reeves ran five and six yards and then ripped off 15 yards to the 16 after Tech drew a five yard penalty. The Jonesboro Freshman went three to the 13 but fumbled and Jerry Dunaway of SLC was there to grab it.

After holding SLC and forcing a punt, the Bulldogs got another march underway.

Laird hit John Wurzburger for 11 to the Lion 43. The same combination worked for 13 more yards but Wruzburger fumbeld when hit and Billy Andrews snatched it for the home team.

Neither team could move early in the third period before the Bulldogs got another drive going. Reeves and McDowell alternated in moving the ball from the SLC 41 to the 16. On a third down pass attempt, Laird was caught back at the 21. Campbell attempted a 38-yard field goal but it was way short.

In the fourth period Tech's Jimmy Jones returned a punt seven yards to the Bulldog 33. Odom got seven yeards around end but fumbled the ball in the air when hit and Johnson grabbed it and ran the 40 yards with no Canines in the vicinity. Rousell's kick made it 15-7 with 13:20 remaining.

The Techsters had good field position again near midfield but Lee was swarmed again while trying to punt and SLC took over.

SLC spent the remainder of the time picking up most of the yardage they gained all day.

Isaacson Leads Air Force Win Over UCLANS

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — Air Force glided on Terry Isaacson's passing and running to a 48-21 football victory Saturday over UCLA, beaten for the seventh time in eight games.

The UCLANS knotted the score at 7-7 after a minute of the second quarter to spur Isaacson into a flawless performance that sent the Air Force out of reach 28-7 by halftime.

Tom Bennett's 40-yard punt that rolled dead on Air Force's four led to the UCLANs' tieing touchdown. On the first play John Lorber fumbled on a line plunge and UCLA's Dave Gibbs recovered on the seven. Two plays later Mike Haffner flipped a nifty pass to Gale Hickman in the end zone.

Yale Rips Penn

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Led by the running of junior backs Chuck Mercein and Pete Cummings, Yale defeated Penn 28-7 in an Ivy League football game.

A homecoming day crowd of 14,205 watched the Elis completely dominate the game.

FIRST SINCE 1958

Walter McReynolds Leads Owl Victory Over Porkers

HOUSTON (AP)—Rice's Owls struck quickly on the passing of Walter McReynolds and running of Russell Wayt for a 58-yard scoring drive early in the final period Saturday to defeat Arkansas 7-0, their first victory over the Razorbacks since 1958.

Rice, a team that had averaged 150 yards through the air in six previous games, had not completed a pass until the Owls cut loose with the victory surge that McReynolds ended by ramming over from the 1.

There had been 19 punts as the teams battled to a rather dull scoreless tie the first three quarters.

Arkansas followed the Rice touchdown with its longest drive of the day but Gene Fleming ended the 54-yard threat by intercepting a Porker pass thrown from the Rice 19.

A 15-yard penalty and a fumble play that netted 14 yards figured in the drive that gave Rice its third Southwest Conference victory in four starts and dropped Arkansas to a 2-3 record.

After the Owls took a punt at their 42, McReynolds hit Fleming with a four-yard pass — Rice's first completion of the day — but a personal foul after the ball was dead gave Rice a first down at the Arkansas 37.

McReynolds then picked up another first at the 26 with an 11-yarder to Dale Callihan.

Wayt powered for seven yards but fumbled, and Fleming grabbed the ball and went another seven before being overhauled at the 12. Wayt powered through the middle for nine and a first down at the 1, from where McReynolds scored.

A 24-yard pass from Fred Marshall to Bill Gray at the Rice 21 was the key play in the late Arkansas threat, but Fleming moved in three plays later to intercept a toss thrown by Gray from the 19.

Tigers Too Much In Final Stanza

By JACK GATES
Executive Editor
News-Star—World

BATON ROUGE — Joe LaBruzzo, a will-o-the-wisp scatback, who can cut on a dime and return a nickle in change, scored three thrilling touchdowns Saturday night in helping to spark Louisiana State University to a 28-14 victory over Texas Christian University.

The speedy Cutoff, La., sophomore scatted 10 yards for his first one to tie to the score at 14-14 early in the third period. He then swung wide for three yards a few minutes later for another to put the Tigers ahead to stay, 21-14. Then in the final period, he cut to his right, swung back and rambled 45 yards for the final one.

As he crossed the 20 yard line he was alone. End Doug Moreau booted all extra points. So far this year he has kicked 14 for 14.

In all Labruzzo, who used the TCU line for his private speedway, picked up 109 yards in 12 carries.

Although Labruzzo, back at full strength after suffering an injury in the Kentucky game, was the sparkplug, he was ably assisted by sophomore fullback Donald Schwab, who scored the first LSU touchdown on a beautifully-executed 36 yard dash, and Danny LeBlanc, who picked up 59 yards and key yardage when it was needed most.

Billy Ezell quarterbacked the Tigers all the game and attempted eight passes, the most he's thrown, but completed only one for seven yards.

At one point in the game when TCU was leading 14 to 7, the sellout crowd of 67,500 started chanting 'We want Greer, we want Greer," meaning quarterback Ed Greer of Minden who is considered a top passer.

Both TCU touchdowns came in the first half, and it looked for a while they might take the contest. Halfback Larry Bulach scored from three yards out for the first one midway of the first period after teammate Jim Fauver had set it up with a tingling 72 yard kickoff return.

The final TCU score came early in the second period on a bouncy pass play from the Tiger 26. Second string quarterback Randy Howard, back to pass, threw down the middle to Fauver.

The ball bounced off an LSU defender, Fauver grabbed it at the 15 and went over for the score. Then Howard casually tossed to end Bill Bowers for a two-point conversion.

The Tigers, who have been hampered with injuries all season, lost another before the half ended when Ruffin Rodrigue, a top center and a defensive player, suffered a leg injury.

However, by the halftime, the Tigers appeared to have come to play ball. The line play was fierce with a tremendous charge. On the opening series of plays, halfback Larry Thomas fumbled for TCU and bandit center Bill Bass pounced on it at the TCU 16. Three plays later, Labruzzo galloped the 10 yards for the score.

On the initial kickoff drive, TCU drove to the Tiger 23 but were unable to do more.

From there on it was the Tigers ball game. Taking the ball at their own 19, they moved 18 yards in eight plays to score.

Leblanc highlighted the start of the drive with a 28-yard dash, then Labruzzo went for 27, moving to the TCU five. Three plays later he packed it over from the three.

The final Tiger talley was an 89-yard drive. After the ball had been moved to the TCU 45, Labruzzo spun his dazzling 45-yard run. He cut back on the last TCU player at the 22 and then casually trotted into the end zone.

TCU battled back and with the clock running out, moved to the LSU 35. Then on a pass play, Bass, who played magnificent defense throughout the game, intercepted a pass by quarterback Garry Mills to end the threat and the Tigers ran out the cock.

The first LSU score came on the opening kickoff and on a 70-yard drive, with Schwab, a 195-pounder from Thibodeaux, dashing the last 46.

Outside of the scoring thrusts, TCU mounted only two other drives, but neither were good for scores.

However, the Horned Frogs were a threat until the fourth LSU touchdown. They were big and tall and hit with authority in the line, particularly in the first half when they were outcharging the Tiger linemen.

End Danny Neumann of Tallulah, the LSU punter, who has not had a good night in that department for sometime, didn't do too good in the game with his punts, although he played good defensive ball. On five punts, Neumann ended up with 28.8 average to 35.8 for Garry Thomas of TCU. However, two of Thomas' punts were more than 50 yards.

Overall, the Tigers won the statistical battle, except in the passing department.

On the ground, the fleet LSU runners picked up 334 yards rushing to 40 for TCU. The Texans, however, completed 10 of 18 passes for 149 yards. In the first down department, LSU had 16 to 13 for TCU.

Indians Take 1st GSC Win In 4th Period

By RICK BRYAN
World Sports Editor

Northeast State's clutch-playing Indians uncorked a chips down touchdown march in the fourth quarter, then kicked the crucial extra point to take a slim 7-6 victory over the University of Southwestern Louisiana and climb out of the Gulf States Conference cellar here Saturday night.

Indian quarterback Bookie Shillcut slipped over from about the one foot mark on a fourth down sneaker for the touchdown and senior fullback Willie Ragan added the PAT.

Earlier in the drive which carried 42 yards, Shillcut fired a nine-yard third down pass to end Steve Regan for a first at the Bulldog 17. It was the only Northeast completeion of the night, but couldn't have come a ta better time for the majority of the 4,500 who witnessed the game.

USL opened the scoring in the second period, marching 34 yards after a short Northeast kick from the end zone.

Freshman fullback Chester Gosnell got the touchdown on a 12 yard scamper through the Indian line.

Then Northeast tackle Joe Alewine slammed into the Bulldog backfield to block Gerald Landry's extra point kick attempt in what turned out to be one of the key plays in the game.

The victory gives Northeast a 3-5 season record and leaves the Indians 1-3 in GSC play. Southwestern is now 3-4 for the year and 0-3 in the conference.

As in a numberof the Indians' other games, Northeast completely dominated the statistics, annexing 15 first downs to seven and 235 yards rushing to 114.

Quarterback Mike Cooper paced Northeast's rushing with 42 yards on 11 attempts. Fullback Ronnie Graham was close behind with 40 on 11 and halfback Ronnie Myrick had 35 for nine.

USL quarterback Lindsey Landry paced the Canines with 35 on 11. Gosnell had 27 for seven and freshman wingback Craig Boudreaux gained 17 on three.

Northeast got a good drive the first time the Indianas has the ball, marching from their own 33 to the Bulldogs 32 after stopping USL after the opening kickoff. At this point, however, Cooper's pass was picked off by Boudreaux.

Later in the period the Tribe marched from its 41 to the Canine 28, before losing the ball on downs.

But in the second quarter Northeast lost its good field position and Steve Regan's hurried punt from his end zone wetn only to the Indian 34.

It took the Raging Cajuns only five plays to score. Landry picked up 18 on a crucial third down play, rolling out to his right, then turning on the speed and racing to the Indian 14. Two plays later Gosnell picked his way through the Northeast line, cut back, then powered over a tackler at the goal line to score on a 12-yarder. Alewine broke through to block Gerald Landry's extra point kick and leave it 6-0 with 7:15 to go in the half.

Returning the kickoff to its own 21 the Tribe set out on a late march which went all the wat to the Bulldogs 29 before running out of steam. An 11-yard keeper by Cooperand Myrick's 15 yard romp on a pitchout were big gainers in the drive.

The Indians tok the second half kickoff and stormed down to the Southwestern 38 where they relinquished the ball when quarterback Dee Faircloth was stopped short on a fourth and seven situation.

Southwestern got the ball at its 33 after an exchange of punts but Indian halfback R. F. Wilson grabbed Landry's fumble at the USL 42 to set up the winning touchdown march.

After Shillcut's pressurized third down pass to Regan at the Canine 17, Graham took over and carried four straight times, bulling the ball to the one. Halfback Morris Douglas dove for a half yard and Shillcut sneaked over on fourth down with 12:50 left in the final perio Ragan's kick was good and the Indians had their 7-6 margin.

Southwestern couldn't move after the kickoff and the Tribe marched form its 44 to the Bulldogs 30 before Regan was forced to punt.

Rebels Smother Inferior Tampa

OXFORD, Miss. (AP)—Mississippi smashed Tampa 41-0 Saturday, giving everybody down to the third team a chance to see action.

The lopsided victory put the Rebels through their seventh game without a defeat and another step toward their second straight undefeated season.

Auburn's 13-10 defeat by Mississippi State left Mississippi alone atop the Southeastern Conference standings.

All but one of the Rebels' six touchdowns came on passes—two by Perry Lee Dunn, two by Jim Weatherly and one by Jimmy Heidel. Weatherly got the other touchdown on a one-yard run.

The closest Tampa could get to Mississippi's goal was a drive to the Rebels' 36 in the fourth quarter.

Statistics told the story. The Rebels got 194 yards rushing to Tampa's 48. A single Ole Miss ball carrier, Frank Kinard topped the Tampa total with 64 yards in 11 carries.

In passing, Mississippi got 205 yards, completing 18 of 31. Tampa completed 5 of 10 for 33 yards. Dunn alone accounted for 124 yards in the air, hitting on 10 of 17. Weatherly connected on 8 of 9 for 73 yards and Heidel got 1 of 4 for 8 yards.

Mike Buss gained 30 of Tampa's 48 yards rushing. He got the yardage on 11 carries.

After a scoreless first quarter Weatherly hit Dave Wells for two yards and the first Rebel touchdown. The Rebels piled on another before the half, this time on Dunn's four-yard throw to Mike Dennis.

Mississippi added one in the third quarter on Dunn's 11-yard pass to Bill Sumrall and got three in the final quarter—Weatherly's one-yard sneak, Heidel's nine-yard pass to John Metz and Weatherly's seven-yard pass to Wells.

Nebraska Wins

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska retaliated with two quick touchdowns, after Gale Sayers sped 99 yards for a Kansas touchdown, and rolled to a 23-9 Big Eight football triumph over the Jayhawks Saturday.

Sayers' record run came as Nebraska clung to a 10-3 lead gained in the first half. Gary Duff's conversion kick missed and Kansas trailed 10-9.

Harvard Tops Unbeaten Tide

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Harvard quarterback Mike Bassett directed a methodical ball control offense with which the Crimson spoilers upset the previously unbeaten, united Princeton powerhouse 21-7 Saturday.

A swarming Harvard defense kept the vaunted Tiger attack bottled up for the first three periods as the Crimson prevented Princeton from clinching a tie for the Ivy League football championship.

MISCUES HURT BULLDOGS

Southeastern Grabs Homecoming Victory

HAMMOND (Special) — Louisiana Tech developed an acute case of fumbilitis here Saturday afternoon and Southeastern Louisiana College's homecoming Lions pounced on two of the opportunities for easy touchdowns and a surprising 15-7 victory over the Bulldogs.

The Techmen fumbled five times and the thankful Lions, playing before 7,000 old grads, grabbed off four of them.

Prior to this game, which was played on a muddy field after heavy rain Friday night, the Canines had lost only three fumbles all season.

Tech had a wide edge in statistics.

The Bulldogs made 13 first downs to nine for the Lions and had a 137-106 margin in rushing and 72-33 edge in passing yards.

Billy Laird completed nine of 19 passes for 72 yeards.

Alden Reeves picked up 42 yards in 11 carries, Odom 42 in 10 and McDowell 36 in nine trips. Punting was an important factor for the Lions on the muddy field, with Brent Rousell averaging 40.6 yards on seven kicks.

Tech's record dropped to 4-3 for the season and the Bulldogs' 2-2 GSC mark about eliminates them from the race.

Southeastern upped its overall record to 4-2-1 and three wins without a loss in the league. McNeese and SLC tangle in a showdown battle in Lake Charles next Saturday.

With the air attack grounded somewhat by the weather, the Techmen consistently gained yardage on the ground, but each drive was halted by some miscue.

Twice Tech punter David Lee was rushed to such an extent he could not get his kicks away. The Lions scored as a result of the first one after taking over at the Bulldog six-yard line. The other TD was also a cheap one and it all but killed Tech's chances in the fourth period. Odom gained seven yards around end, had the ball jump into the air when tackled and SLC's Ellis Johnson was there to pluck it out of the air and race 40 yards down the sidelines for the clincher.

Tech started out like it would turn the game into a rout, and that began with the recovery of a Lion bobble by tackle Robert Malone at the SLC 29. Laird carried for three, Odom got three and then eight for first down at the 15.

McDowell got seven and then four before Odom took it over from the three. Speedy Campbell's kick was perfect and Tech had a 7-0 margin with 6:23 left in the first period.

Things went sour early in the second quarter when Tech was unable to move deep in its own territory and Lee went back to kick. He bobbled the ball momentarily and Lions swarmed him back on the seven.

SLC made only one yard in two tries and then quarterback Dick Cothern found end Earl Dieterich all alone in the end zone with an aerial. When the Canines drew a penalty on the placement try the Lions went for two and Johnson lugged it over.

Following the kickoff which Corky Corkern returned from the 12 to the 29 the Techsters got a sustained drive going. Billy Laird passed eight yards to Corkern, then 10 to Alden Reeves. Reeves ran five and six yards and then ripped off 15 yards to the 16 after Tech drew a five yard penalty. The Jonesboro Freshman went three to the 13 but fumbled and Jerry Dunaway of SLC was there to grab it.

After holding SLC and forcing a punt, the Bulldogs got another march underway.

Laird hit John Wurzburger for 11 to the Lion 43. The same combination worked for 13 more yards but Wruzburger fumbeld when hit and Billy Andrews snatched it for the home team.

Neither team could move early in the third period before the Bulldogs got another drive going. Reeves and McDowell alternated in moving the ball from the SLC 41 to the 16. On a third down pass attempt, Laird was caught back at the 21. Campbell attempted a 38-yard field goal but it was way short.

In the fourth period Tech's Jimmy Jones returned a punt seven yards to the Bulldog 33. Odom got seven yeards around end but fumbled the ball in the air when hit and Johnson grabbed it and ran the 40 yards with no Canines in the vicinity. Rousell's kick made it 15-7 with 13:20 remaining.

The Techsters had good field position again near midfield but Lee was swarmed again while trying to punt and SLC took over.

SLC spent the remainder of the time picking up most of the yardage they gained all day.

Isaacson Leads Air Force Win Over UCLANS

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — Air Force glided on Terry Isaacson's passing and running to a 48-21 football victory Saturday over UCLA, beaten for the seventh time in eight games.

The UCLANS knotted the score at 7-7 after a minute of the second quarter to spur Isaacson into a flawless performance that sent the Air Force out of reach 28-7 by halftime.

Tom Bennett's 40-yard punt that rolled dead on Air Force's four led to the UCLANs' tieing touchdown. On the first play John Lorber fumbled on a line plunge and UCLA's Dave Gibbs recovered on the seven. Two plays later Mike Haffner flipped a nifty pass to Gale Hickman in the end zone.

Walter McReynolds Leads Owl Victory Over Porkers

HOUSTON (AP)—Rice's Owls struck quickly on the passing of Walter McReynolds and running of Russell Wayt for a 58-yard scoring drive early in the final period Saturday to defeat Arkansas 7-0, their first victory over the Razorbacks since 1958.

Rice, a team that had avered 150 yards through the air in six previous games, had not completed a pass until the Owls cut loose with the victory surge that McReynolds ended by ramming over from the 1.

There had been 19 punts as the teams battled to a rather dull scoreless tie the first three quarters.

Arkansas followed the Rice touchdown with its longest drive of the day but Gene Fleming ended the 54-yard threat by intercepting a Porker pass thrown from the Rice 19.

A 15-yard penalty and a fumble play that netted 14 yards figured in the drive that gave Rice its third Southwest Conference victory in four starts and dropped Arkansas to a 2-3 record.

After the Owls took a punt at their 42, McReynolds hit Fleming with a four-yard pass — Rice's first completion of the day — but a personal foul after the ball was dead gave Rice a first down at the Arkansas 37.

McReynolds then picked up another first at the 26 with an 11-yarder to Dale Callihan.

Wayt powered for seven yards but fumbled, and Fleming grabbed the ball and went another seven before being overhauled at the 12. Wayt powered through the middle for nine and a first down at the 1, from where McReynolds scored.

A 24-yard pass from Fred Marshall to Bill Gray at the Rice 21 was the key play in the late Arkansas threat, but Fleming moved in three plays later to intercept a toss thrown by Gray from the 19.

Bears Tumble As Carlisle Paces Steers

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Crafty Duke Carlisle carried Texas on a blistering 45-yard touchdown drive in the third period Saturday and the nation's No. 1 team won its eighth straight game and took over the undisputed lead in the Southwest Conference with a 7-0 victory over Baylor.

With only two games ahead—Texas Christian and Texas A&M—Texas became an overwhelming favorite to return to the Cotton Bowl for the third consecutive year.

Baylor's great Don Trull and Larry Elkins set Southwest Conference passing records and probably continued on as the nation's leaders in passing and pass-receiving, but they could do nothing when the chips were down against the vicious Texas pass rush and glittering defense.

A crowd of 64,530 that jammed Memorial Stadium to the rafters, sat in a drizzling rain to watch the big game of the Southwest Conference as the two undefeated teams in conference play met.

Texas, playing its usual style game, held the ball most of the time, keeping Baylor from even a first down in the second and third periods.

Texas threatened repeatedly to score with its grinding ground game but met a gritty Baylor defense that didn't crack until that brief period in the third quarter.

Quarterback Carlisle passed for 16 yards and ran for 16, using the option cleverly, in sending Texas to its winning touchdown.

After Tommy Ford, the games' leading rusher with 101 yards in 27 tries, had battered to the one-yard line with a three-yard burst, Tom Stockton crashed across. Tony Crosby, the Texas barefoot kicker, put his 22nd straight extra point through the goal posts.

Crosby, however, missed two field goals during the game. It was the first time in four games that Crosby didn't prove to be the difference.

Trull completed 19 of 39 passes for 204 yards and had Texas backers in a state of nervous prostration, especially in the last minutes when he passed the Bears down to the Texas 19. But Carlisle took a pass in the end zone intended for Elkins and that was all for Baylor.

STRUGGLE WITH AGGIES

Richey's Kick Saves Mustangs From Loss

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP)—John Richey kicked a 17-yard field goal with 43 seconds left Saturday to pull Southern Methodist from behind and give the Ponies a 9-7 victory over Texas A&M.

The Mustangs had trailed from the opening minutes and gambled on a two-point conversion that failed after a second quarter touchdown.

Sophomore quarterback Mac White set up the field goal by steering the Mustangs from their own 46 in five plays. He passed once to Larry Jernigan for 23 yards, again for six yards and then to John Roderick for 20 yards that put the ball on the Aggie 5.

Three runs by White put the ball less than a foot from the goal but the last sneak injured White. So Richey came into the game and put his toe to work.

The win gave the Aggies undisputed possession of the Southwest Conference cellar. It was SMU's first conference victory. The Aggies have tied one conference battle.

A&M jumped off to an early lead the first time the Aggies got their hands on the ball when they drove 78 yards for a touchdown. They did it by riding the arm of quarterback Charles LaGrange as three of his passes moved the ball to the Pony 17.

Three runs by halfback Budgie Ford moved the ball to the 1, with fullback Jerry Rogers going over. Bobby Lee's kick made it 7-0.

SMU's touchdown came on two quick plays—one of them an accident. Danny Thomas passed in the general direction of Rickey but the ball was short. An Aggie defender leaped into the air and deflected it into Richey's arms for a 15-yard gain.

Fullback Tom Sherwin on the next play went 58 yards for a touchdown. The Ponies gambled here but Thomas was stopped short on his conversion run.

From this point until the final Mustang spurt the teams engaged in one of the most beautiful punting battles of the season. They repeatedly put each other in holes that only another punt could close.

Unbeaten Auburn Falls 13-10

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Guard Justin Canale booted a 36-yard field goal with 22 seconds left Saturday to give Mississippi State a 13-10 victory over previously unbeaten Auburn, the nation's No. 5 college football team.

Little quarterback Sonny Fisher picked off a pass by ace Auburn quarterback Jimmy Sidle and raced 25 yards to the Auburn 22 to set up Canale's second field goal of the brutal Southeastern Conference game.

The defeat dealt a severe blow to Auburn's hope for the SEC championship and left Mississippi the only team with a perfect conference record.

State played Auburn on at least equal terms from the outset and dominated the contest after halftime, containing the vaunted Sidle's dangerous runs and covering his receivers downfield.

The quick-hitting Sidle was Auburn's only effective offensive weapon. He ran 47 yards for a touchdown that put Auburn ahead 7-3 and set up a field goal by Woody Woodall with a 47-yard pass to end Howard Simpson.

Woodall, who converted after the touchdown, split the uprights from 30 yards out for his 18th career field goal.

Billy Lothridge holds the NCAA record with 20 field goals.

Mississippi State moved ahead in the second quarter on a 25-yard field goal by Canale following a fumble recovery at the Auburn 28 by end Jimbo Lane, but the score seemed to needle Auburn into its best offensive flurry of the game.

Sidle hit end Jim Ingle with a 19-yard pass on the first play after the kickoff, then faked a pass, pulled State defenders far out of position, and sprinted 47 yards for a touchdown.

Fullback Larry Rawson intercepted a pass by State quarterback Jim McBride at the Auburn 33 to set up Woodall's 30-yard field goal that put Auburn ahead 10-7 at intermission.

State dominated the second half, nipping each Auburn thrust in the bud.

State drove 66 yards for its only touchdown with halfback Price Hodges' running and a 15-yard personal foul penalty against Auburn carrying to the Auburn 28.

From the 22 the fleet Fisher feinted toward right end, then whizzed a pass to halfback Ode Burrell on the other side of the field. Burrell pulled it in without breaking stride and raced into the end zone.

Canale's conversion deadlocked the score to set the stage for the major upset.

State threatened twice before the winning Canale field goal.

State drove from its 30 to the Auburn 37 before quarterback Don Edwards fumbled as the third quarter ended.

State drove from its 20 to the Auburn 28 in the fourth period, losing the ball on downs.

On Auburn's third play Fisher intercepted a Sidle pass to pave the way for Canale's field goal that toppled Auburn from the ranks of the unbeaten.

Auburn missed a golden opportunity to win the game midway through the final period.

Burrell fumbled and guard Bill Van Dyke recovered at the State 29. The Maroon defense rose to the occasion, however, and bottled Sidle and company effectively.

With the ball at the 13, Woodall dropped back for a field goal attempt that was short and State took over.

OVER FLORIDA STATE

Lothridge Leads Tech To Victory

ATLANTA (AP) — Bowl-minded Georgia Tech rallied behind the passing and running of quarterback Billy Lothridge for a 15-7 football victory over Florida State Saturday.

Trailing 7-3 at the half, Georgia Tech stormed back in the third period as Lothridge tossed a 23-yard touchdown pass to Billy Martin.

Lothridge broke loose on a 12-yard run in the fourth quarter to the FSU 19 to set up the Yellow Jackets' clinching touchdown. Fullback Ray Mendheim went over and Tech led 15-7.

Lothridge passed a total of 246 yards, a school record. He also boosted his NCAA field goal record to 20 with a 22-yarder in the second quarter.

Florida State took the opening kickoff and drove 68 yards in nine plays for a touchdown. Quarterback Steve Tensi passed to Bill Dawson in the end zone and Doug Messer converted to give FSU a 7-0 lead with 9:46 remaining in the first period.

Tech got its offense going near the end of the first quarter.

The Yellow Jackets started on their 28 and drove to the FSU 5 behind Lothridge's passing and the running of Mendheim and halfback Gerry Bussell. Lothridge booted his 11th field goal of the year with 11:23 remaining.

Lothridge also broke his own total offense record with 274 yards. He broke his own record against Duke last week with 211-yard total.

Halfback Dave Snyder led Florida State's offense with 82 yards in 14 carries.

It was a reversal of last year's game when Tech had to come from behind to gain a 14-14 tie.

Arkansas Team Ties Grambling In SWC Tussel

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (Special) — An ebullent Arkansas AM&N club battled inconsistent Grambling to a 7-7 tie Saturday in a clash of Southwestern Conference have-nots.

It was a dismal day for Glum Eddie Robinson and Coach Van Johnson who watched their charges claw each other in a 20-20 stalemate last fall.

Each team was slowed by a tenacious defense, fumbles and costly interceptions.

Dogged Gramlbing disciples suffered through their second frustrating week - end. Texas Southern axed the Tigers, 27-14, in their last appearance and Grambling was enabled to surmount a second period touchdown today.

The sputtering Tigers drove 85 yards for their only score in the initial stanza. Grambling used its full routine of power to cover the distance with fullback Henry Dyer crashing over from the one. J. D. Garrett converted.

Stung to life, the resurging Lions moved 45 yards for a touchdown.

Jerome Henderson bulled over a one-yard smash. Willie Goldsmith split the upright with the PAT.

That ended the scoring as the situation fluctuated after intermission with threatening gestures.

Both teams had a number of scoring opportunities but were unable to move into the rarefied territory beyond the last double stripe.

Grambling stalled at the one and Arkansas was repulsed on the two in the most menancing gestures.

The Tigers left the contest with a 4-3-1 record. Arkansas has a 5-2-1 mark.

Recovered Ball Gives Wolfpack Close Triumph

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Halfback Tony Koszarsky recovered a Virginia Tech fumble Saturday to give North Carolina State a 13-7 triumph in a football game featured by stellar defensive play.

The Tech error came near the end of the third period and gave the Wolfpack a 13-0 lead. The Gobblers' running offense then caught fire in the final quarter and narrowed the gap to 13-7 on an 80-yard scoring drive.

State's Dave Houtz tossed a 51-yard punt to Tech's Mike Cahill on the 3. He boggled the ball in the end zone and Koszarsky pounced on it for the score.

The teams, which entered the game with 6-1 records, based offenses on hard-runing, tricky quarterbacks — Bob Schweickert, with the nation's third best running record for Tech, and Jim Rossi for State.

Schweickert, thrown repeatedly for long losses, broke loose for a 59-yard sprint which set up the Tech touchdown. He carried it over from the 1 with 6½ minutes left in the game.

State launched a drive after the next kickoff and ran out the clock.

The Wolfpack's first score came in the opening period drive in 10 plays. The first nine plays carried the ball to the Tech 16. Then Rossi passed to halfback Joe Scarpati for the tally.

State missed an opportunity at the start of the second period when it moved from its 27 to the Tech 17. Tech defenders then began nabbing Rossi behind the line of scrimmage and the drive was halted.

Holy Cross Get Win Over VMI

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP)—Holy Cross, the last remaining team in New England to leave the winless ranks, edged Virginia Military Institute 14-12 Saturday with a two-point conversion pass from Fran Coughlin to Jim Gravel.

The deciding points came early in the second quarter following the Crusaders' first touchdown.

Coughlin combined twice with that period for touchdown passes, throwing 7 and 29 yards. Both Holy Cross scores followed interceptions.

VMI completed only six passes in the game played before 7,500 spectators. But two of them were scoring tosses from quarterback Butch Nunnally.

Roberts Leads Dartmouth Win

NEW YORK (AP)—Dana Kelly bested Archie Roberts in a passing duel Saturday as Dartmouth, defending Ivy League champion, kept alive its title hopes by crushing Columbia 47-6.

Scott Creelman, lanky senior end, was the favorite target for Kelly. The most spectacular touchdown of the game came 30 seconds before the end of the half when Kelly passed 39 yards to Creelman and 37 to Chris Vancura on successive plays to put the ball on the three. Kelly plunged over from the one.

Dartmouth's victory gave the team an Ivy League mark of 3-2 against 1-4-1 for Columbia.

UNANIMOUS VOTE

Texas Integrates Varsity Athletics

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — University of Texas regents voted unanimously Saturday to integrate varsity athletics at the school, the first Southwest Conference school to take this action.

That was the major effect of a board ruling "to remove all student restrictions of every kind and character based on race or color heretofore imposed by the board of regents.

The eight - member conference includes besides the university, Southern Methodist University, Texas Christian University, Texas A&M University, Texas Tech, Rice, Baylor and Arkansas.

An unwritten regent rule at the university has prohibited negroes from participating in varsity sports, although they have been allowed to take part in intramural sports for men and women since first being admitted to the school in 1950.

Sources said two years ago that "integration of athletics is not a unilateral choice. Members of the board of regents have indicated that when a Southwest Conference vote comes up on the integration question, the university's representatives will be instructed to vote 'aye'. But the university regents do not want to imperil the excellent relationships they have with other Southwest Conference members."

The Regents' ruling, made at the closing session of a two-day meeting, gives Texas Athletic Director Darrell Royal the authority to decide when and if a Negro may participate in the school's athletic program.

Royal was not available for comment.

The ruling said in part:

"Any student is entitled to the use of all the facilities of the University of Texas; and voluntary participation in any student activities upon approval by administrative officials or department heads supervising such activities."

Specifically omitted in the regents' ruling was integration of university housing, dormitories and co-operative living units.

McNeese Draws Near GSC Flag With Rally Win

NATCHITOCHES, La. (AP)—Sophomore Richard Guillory tossed two touchdown passes and booted three extra points to lead undefeated McNeese to a 21-13 victory over Northwestern State Saturaay night.

McNeese, trailing in the Gulf States Conference game 13-7 in the final quarter, pushed over two touchdowns on a 2-yard run by Tommy Thompson and a 61-yard pass play from Guillory to Earl Hicks.

Guillory, a 5-foot-10, 170-pounder from Lake Charles, threw only three passes, but completed them all for 117 yards. His first touchdown aerial was a 14-yarder to Robert Young to open the third period scoring.

NSC rebounded to take the lead on a 26-yard run by Claude Patrick on a punt blocked by center Sammy Joe Odom and a 2-yard plunge by Odom.

McNeese, now deadlocked with Southeastern Louisiana at 3-0 for the GSC lead, has a 6-0 overall record. NSC is 3-5 and 1-2 in the league.

BUT FANT NOT HURT

Indian Cagers Put In 5th Spot

Northeast State has not been picked to win the Gulf States Conference basketball championship this winter and Coach Lenny Fant's feelings are not hurt a bit.

GSC coaches, in a recent poll, picked Northeast to finish fifth in the six-team league. Southwestern, which shared second place with Northeast last season, was picked to win the championship. Northwestern and Louisiana Tech tied for second in the voting, defending champion McNeese State was picked to finish fourth and Southeastern sixth.

Northeast, after winning the GSC title in 1962, was picked to win the championship last season but finished in a tie for second.

"This is a rebuilding year for us," says Fant. "We must replace three starters — all of them four-year lettermen — and lack of experience should be our biggest problem. We're hoping to surprise a few clubs, however."

Last year's starters who are missing are Milton Linder, Robert Cook and all - GSC Stuart Toms. Also gone is reserve Malcolm George.

The returning starters are big Jimmy Walker (6-4) and Irby Gamble (5-7), both seniors. Walker has made the all - GSC second team twice in a row and averaged 14.5 points last season. Gamble averaged 10.1 points and led the GSC in field goal accuracy with 50.5 per cent.

Fant currently has transfer Dick Williams (6-3) and lettermen Larry Butler (6-4) and Tommy Enloe (5-9) running on the first unit with Walker and Gamble. Butler and Enloe have shown great improvement in practice so far and Williams, after a slow start, has done good work lately.

Walker and Gamble appear certain to start the first game but the other three have stiff competition. Sophomore letterman Lawson Swearingen, the team's biggest man at 6-6, is battling Butler for regular status, soph letterman Billy Brooks (6-2) is competing with Williams and transfer Walter Snelling (5-8) is Enloe's chief competitor.

Three other players are expected to see frequent duty. They are returning squadmen Albert Krause (5-11), James "Polk" Brian (6-3) and Truett Nolan (6-1), Nolan, who played in only one game last winter, has been probably the most improved player on the squad in practice so far.

Fant has decided to redshirt his heralded freshman prospect, Glynn Saulters of Lisbon. Saulters had been rated a strong contender for a first-string berth but Fant said he felt the youngster would benefit from a year of practice without competition and be able to help the team even more in his first season of varsity competition next winter.

Fant is planning to redshirt several other promising freshmen and the only genuine rookies on the 15-man varsity squad will be Paul Thompson (6-5) of Calhoun and Eugene Norred (6-0) of Quitman. The other two members of the varsity are Butch Cerniglia (6-1) and Mike Vining (6-1), both of whom worked out with the team last year.

Northeast opens its season here Nov. 26 against Arkansas A&M.

Vandy-Wildcats Escape SEC Mat With Deadlock

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Kentucky and Vanderbilt battled to a scoreless tie Saturday in a Southeastern Conference football game which saw Wildcat quarterback Rick Norton set a league record for passes thrown without an interception.

The Kentucky sophomore had thrown 68 consecutive passes without an interception when Vanderbilt halfback Bennett Baldwin grabbed one in the second quarter.

The old conference record of 61 was set in 1947 by Charley Conerly at Ole Miss. Norton broke Conerly's record when he completed a pass to halfback Rodger Bird in the first series of plays after the opening kickoff.

The tie let both teams back out of a deadlock for last place in the SEC standings, as Tulane lost to Tennessee. The winless Commodores now have a record of six losses and a tie for the season, and Kentucky's mark stands at 2-5-1.

Kentucky's young sophomores came closest to scoring when they moved to a first down at the Vanderbilt 1 in the second period.

Bullets Defeat Philadelphia

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Bullets, paced by Terry Dischinger, Rod Thorn and Walt Bellamy, racked up a 116-100 National Basketball Association victory Saturday night over the Philadelphia 76'ers.

Dischinger scored 24 points to lead the way, with Thorn contributing 20 points and Bellamy 19.

Lee Shaffer was high scorer for the game and paced the losers with 29 points.

Bears Tumble As Carlisle Paces Steers

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Crafty Duke Carlisle carried Texas on a blistering 45-yard touchdown drive in the third period Saturday and the nation's No. 1 team won its eighth straight game and took over the undisputed lead in the Southwest Conference with a 7-0 victory over Baylor.

With only two games ahead—Texas Christian and Texas A&M—Texas became an overwhelming favorite to return to the Cotton Bowl for the third consecutive year.

Baylor's great Don Trull and Larry Elkins set Southwest Conference passing records and probably continued on as the nation's leaders in passing and pass-receiving, but they could do nothing when the chips were down against the vicious Texas pass rush and glittering defense.

STRUGGLE WITH AGGIES

Richey's Kick Saves Mustangs From Loss

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP)—John Richey kicked a 17-yard field goal with 43 seconds left Saturday to pull Southern Methodist from behind and give the Ponies a 9-7 victory over Texas A&M.

The Mustangs had trailed from the opening minutes and gambled on a two-point conversion that failed after a second quarter touchdown.

Sophomore quarterback Mac White set up the field goal by steering the Mustangs from their own 46 in five plays. He passed once to Larry Jernigan for 23 yards, again for six yards and then to John Roderick for 20 yards that put the ball on the Aggie 5.

Three runs by White put the ball less than a foot from the goal but the last sneak injured White. So Richey came into the game and put his toe to work.

The win gave the Aggies undisputed possession of the Southwest Conference cellar. It was SMU's first conference victory. The Aggies have tied one conference battle.

A&M jumped off to an early lead the first time the Aggies got their hands on the ball when they drove 78 yards for a touchdown. They did it by riding the arm of quarterback Charles Lagrange as three of his passes moved the ball to the Pony 17.

Three runs by halfback Budgie Ford moved the ball to the 1, with fullback Jerry Rogers going over. Bobby Lee's kick made it 7-0.

SMU's touchdown came on two quick plays—one of them an accident. Danny Thomas passed in the general direction of Rickey but the ball was short. An Aggie defender leaped into the air and deflected it into Richey's arms for a 15-yard gain.

Fullback Tom Sherwin on the next play went 58 yards for a touchdown. The Ponies gambled here but Thomas was stopped short on his conversion run.

From this point until the final Mustang spurt the teams engaged in one of the most beautiful punting battles of the season. They repeatedly put each other in holes that only another punt could close.

Arkansas Team Ties Grambling In SWC Tussel

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (Special) — An ebullent Arkansas AM&N club battled inconsistent Grambling to a 7-7 tie Saturday in a clash of Southwestern Conference have-nots.

It was a dismal day for Glum Eddie Robinson and Coach Van Johnson who watched their charges claw each other in a 20-20 stalemate last fall.

Each team was slowed by a tenacious defense, fumbles and costly interceptions.

Dogged Gramlbing disciples suffered through their second frustrating week - end. Texas Southern axed the Tigers, 27-14, in their last appearance and Grambling was enabled to surmount a second period touchdown today.

The sputtering Tigers drove 85 yards for their only score in the initial stanza. Grambling used its full routine of power to cover the distance with fullback Henry Dyer crashing over from the one. J. D. Garrett converted.

Stung to life, the resurging Lions moved 45 yards for a touchdown.

Jerome Henderson bulled over a one-yard smash. Willie Goldsmith split the upright with the PAT.

That ended the scoring as the situation fluctuated after intermission with threatening gestures.

Both teams had a number of scoring opportunities but were unable to move into the rarefied territory beyond the last double stripe.

Grambling stalled at the one and Arkansas was repulsed on the two in the most menancing gestures.

The Tigers left the contest with a 4-3-1 record. Arkansas has a 5-2-1 mark.

Richmond Takes 26-7 Win Over Citadel Eleven

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Richmond quarterback Ron Smith set up a barrage of passes, with halfback Norris Aldridge his No. 1 target and led the Spiders to a 26-7 Southern Conference football victory over The Citadel Saturday.

Smith's 12-yard pass to halfback Ken Stoudt gave Richmond a second period go-ahead touchdown and the Spiders were never threatened from that point.

Fullback Nick Dilorento scored The Citadel's touchdown opening the second half with a 71-yard dash on the first play from scrimmage.

Aldridge set up Richmond's second touchdown by gathering in a Smith pass for 48 yards.

OVER FLORIDA STATE

Lothridge Leads Tech To Victory

ATLANTA (AP) — Bowl-minded Georgia Tech rallied behind the passing and running of quarterback Billy Lothridge for a 15-7 football victory over Florida State Saturday.

Trailing 7-3 at the half, Georgia Tech stormed back in the third period as Lothridge tossed a 23-yard touchdown pass to Billy Martin.

Lothridge broke loose on a 12-yard run in the fourth quarter to the FSU 19 to set up the Yellow Jackets' clinching touchdown. Fullback Ray Mendheim went over and Tech led 15-7.

Lothridge passed a total of 246 yards, a school record. He also boosted his NCAA field goal record to 20 with a 22-yarder in the second quarter.

Florida State took the opening kickoff and drove 68 yards in nine plays for a touchdown. Quarterback Steve Tensi passed to Bill Dawson in the end zone and Doug Messer converted to give FSU a 7-0 lead with 9:46 remaining in the first period.

Tech got its offense going near the end of the first quarter.

The Yellow Jackets started on their 28 and drove to the FSU 5 behind Lothridge's passing and the running of Mendheim and halfback Gerry Bussell. Lothridge booted his 11th field goal of the year with 11:23 remaining.

Lothridge also broke his own total offense record with 274 yards. He broke his own record against Duke last week with 211-yard total.

Halfback Dave Snyder led Florida State's offense with 82 yards in 14 carries.

It was a reversal of last year's game when Tech had to come from behind to gain a 14-14 tie.

Recovered Ball Gives Wolfpack Close Triumph

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Halfback Tony Koszarsky recovered a Virginia Tech fumble Saturday to give North Carolina State a 13-7 triumph in a football game featured by stellar defensive play.

The Tech error came near the end of the third period and gave the Wolfpack a 13-0 lead. The Gobblers' running offense then caught fire in the final quarter and narrowed the gap to 13-7 on an 80-yard scoring drive.

State's Dave Houtz tossed a 51-yard punt to Tech's Mike Cahill on the 3. He boggled the ball in the end zone and Koszarsky pounced on it for the score.

The teams, which entered the game with 6-1 records, based offenses on hard-runing, tricky quarterbacks — Bob Schweickert, with the nation's third best running record for Tech, and Jim Rossi for State.

Schweickert, thrown repeatedly for long losses, broke loose for a 59-yard sprint which set up the Tech touchdown. He carried it over from the 1 with 6½ minutes left in the game.

State launched a drive after the next kickoff and ran out the clock.

The Wolfpack's first score came in the opening period drive in 10 plays. The first nine plays carried the ball to the Tech 16. Then Rossi passed to halfback Joe Scarpati for the tally.

State missed an opportunity at the start of the second period when it moved from its 27 to the Tech 17. Tech defenders then began nabbing Rossi behind the line of scrimmage and the drive was halted.

Holy Cross Get Win Over VMI

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP)—Holy Cross, the last remaining team in New England to leave the winless ranks, edged Virginia Military Institute 14-12 Saturday with a two-point conversion pass from Fran Coughlin to Jim Gravel.

The deciding points came early in the second quarter following the Crusaders' first touchdown.

Coughlin combined twice with that period for touchdown passes, throwing 7 and 29 yards. Both Holy Cross scores followed interceptions.

VMI completed only six passes in the game played before 7,500 spectators. But two of them were scoring tosses from quarterback Butch Nunnally.

Roberts Leads Dartmouth Win

NEW YORK (AP)—Dana Kelly bested Archie Roberts in a passing duel Saturday as Dartmouth, defending Ivy League champion, kept alive its title hopes by crushing Columbia 47-6.

Scott Creelman, lanky senior end, was the favorite target for Kelly. The most spectacular touchdown of the game came 30 seconds before the end of the half when Kelly passed 39 yards to Creelman and 37 to Chris Vancura on successive plays to put the ball on the three. Kelly plunged over from the one.

Dartmouth's victory gave the team an Ivy League mark of 3-2 against 1-4-1 for Columbia.

UNANIMOUS VOTE

Texas Integrates Varsity Athletics

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — University of Texas regents voted unanimously Saturday to integrate varsity athletics at the school, the first Southwest Conference school to take this action.

That was the major effect of a board ruling "to remove all student restrictions of every kind and character based on race or color heretofore imposed by the board of regents.

The eight - member conference includes besides the university, Southern Methodist University, Texas Christian University, Texas A&M University, Texas Tech, Rice, Baylor and Arkansas.

An unwritten regent rule at the university has prohibited negroes from participating in varsity sports, although they have been allowed to take part in intramural sports for men and women since first being admitted to the school in 1950.

Sources said two years ago that "integration of athletics is not a unilateral choice. Members of the board of regents have indicated that when a Southwest Conference vote comes up on the integration question, the university's representatives will be instructed to vote 'aye'. But the university regents do not want to imperil the excellent relationships they have with other Southwest Conference members."

The Regents' ruling, made at the closing session of a two-day meeting, gives Texas Athletic Director Darrell Royal the authority to decide when and if a Negro may participate in the school's athletic program.

Royal was not available for comment.

The ruling said in part: "Any student is entitled to the use of all the facilities of the University of Texas; and voluntary participation in any student activities upon approval by administrative officials or department heads supervising such activities."

Specifically omitted in the regents' ruling was integration of university housing, dormitories and co-operative living units.

Bridge Winner

GULFPORT, Miss. (AP) — Mrs. Nancy Alpaugh of New Orleans and Ace Gutowsky of Oklahoma City, Okla., won the mixed pair event in the Mid-South regional bridge tournament Friday night.

Play will be concluded Sunday.

McNeese Draws Near GSC Flag With Rally Win

NATCHITOCHES, La. (AP)—Sophomore Richard Guillory tossed two touchdown passes and booted three extra points to lead undefeated McNeese to a 21-13 victory over Northwestern State Saturaay night.

McNeese, trailing in the Gulf States Conference game 13-7 in the final quarter, pushed over two touchdowns on a 2-yard run by Tommy Thompson and a 61-yard pass play from Guillory to Earl Hicks.

Guillory, a 5-foot-10, 170-pounder from Lake Charles, threw only three passes, but completed them all for 117 yards. His first touchdown aerial was a 14-yarder to Robert Young to open the third period scoring.

NSC rebounded to take the lead on a 26-yard run by Claude Patrick on a punt blocked by center Sammy Joe Odom and a 2-yard plunge by Odom.

McNeese, now deadlocked with Southeastern Louisiana at 3-0 for the GSC lead, has a 6-0 overall record. NSC is 3-5 and 1-2 in the league.

BUT FANT NOT HURT

Indian Cagers Put In 5th Spot

Northeast State has not been picked to win the Gulf States Conference basketball championship this winter and Coach Lenny Fant's feelings are not hurt a bit.

GSC coaches, in a recent poll, picked Northeast to finish fifth in the six-team league. Southwestern, which shared second place with Northeast last season, was picked to win the championship, Northwestern and Louisiana Tech tied for second in the voting, defending champion McNeese State was picked to finish fourth and Southeastern sixth.

Northeast, after winning the GSC title in 1962, was picked to win the championship last season but finished in a tie for second.

"This is a rebuilding year for us," says Fant. "We must replace three starters — all of them four-year lettermen — and lack of experience should be our biggest problem. We're hoping to surprise a few clubs, however."

Last year's starters who are missing are Milton Linder, Robert Cook and all - GSC Stuart Toms. Also gone is reserve Malcolm George.

The returning starters are big Jimmy Walker (6-4) and Irby Gamble (5-7), both seniors. Walker has made the all - GSC second team twice in a row and averaged 14.5 points last season. Gamble averaged 10.1 points and led the GSC in field goal accuracy with 50.5 per cent.

Fant currently has transfer Dick Williams (6-3) and lettermen Larry Butler (6-4) and Tommy Enloe (5-9) running on the first unit with Walker and Gamble. Butler and Enloe have shown great improvement in practice so far and Williams, after a slow start, has done good work lately.

Walker and Gamble appear certain to start the first game but the other three have stiff competition. Sophomore letterman Lawson Swearingen, the team's biggest man at 6-6, is battling Butler for regular status, soph letterman Billy Brooks (6-2) is competing with Williams and transfer Walter Snelling (5-8) is Enloe's chief competitor.

Three other players are expected to see frequent duty. They are returning squadmen Albert Krause (5-11), James "Polk" Brian (6-3) and Truett Nolan (6-1), Nolan, who played in only one game last winter, has been probably the most improved player on the squad in practice so far.

Fant has decided to redshirt his heralded freshman prospect, Glynn Saulters of Lisbon. Saulters had been rated a strong contender for a first-string berth but Fant said he felt the youngster would benefit from a year of practice without competition and be able to help the team even more in his first season of varsity competition next winter.

Fant is planning to redshirt several other promising freshmen and the only genuine rookies on the 15-man varsity squad will be Paul Thompson (6-5) of Calhoun and Eugene Norred (6-0) of Quitman. The other two members of the varsity are Butch Cerniglia (6-1) and Mike Vining (6-1), both of whom worked out with the team last year.

Northeast opens its season here Nov. 26 against Arkansas A&M.

Vandy-Wildcats Escape SEC Mat With Deadlock

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Kentucky and Vanderbilt battled to a scoreless tie Saturday in a Southeastern Conference football game which saw Wildcat quarterback Rick Norton set a league record for passes thrown without an interception.

The Kentucky sophomore had thrown 68 consecutive passes without an interception when Vanderbilt halfback Bennett Baldwin grabbed one in the second quarter.

The old conference record of 61 was set in 1947 by Charley Conerly at Ole Miss. Norton broke Conerly's record when he completed a pass to halfback Rodger Bird in the first series of plays after the opening kickoff.

The tie let both teams back out of a deadlock for last place in the SEC standings, as Tulane lost to Tennessee. The winless Commodores now have a record of six losses and a tie for the season, and Kentucky's mark stands at 2-5-1.

Kentucky's young sophomores came closest to scoring when they moved to a first down at the Vanderbilt 1 in the second period.

Bullets Defeat Philadelphia

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Bullets, paced by Terry Dischinger, Rod Thorn and Walt Bellamy, racked up a 116-100 National Basketball Association victory Saturday night over the Philadelphia 76'ers.

Dischinger scored 24 points to lead the way, with Thorn contributing 20 points and Bellamy 19.

Lee Shaffer was high scorer for the game and paced the losers with 29 points.

Water Crisis Strikes Home

With Sam Hanna

Conservation Spotlighted

Never before has the need for water conservation hit home any stronger than it has here these past several days with Bayou DeSiard dropping to a crisis stage.

The people of this area sat too long with their hands folded even though the Department of Public Works is moving now to pump water from Bayou Bartholomew into Bayou DeSiard.

Had the officials of Ouachita and Morehouse been successful in their talks several years ago to get the Bartholomew project off the ground, Monroe today would not be faced with the possibility of turning to the polluted Ouachita River for drinking water.

This problem is serious enough on the local level, but more seriously it points up the importance of protective steps everywhere to conserve water.

Water will become or already has become the nation's most treasured natural resource -- more important than timber, oil and gas.

Louisiana, including our northeastern section of the state, is fortunate in that water is abundant. But water is not good to us unless it can be consumed.

Millions of dollars, perhaps even billions, are being spent in the California area to provide water for that rapidly - growing section.

In our own case, we have seen streams in Northeast Louisiana gutted in drainage programs. Yet today this area is undergoing a tough drought while on the national scale the water table is dropping.

Luckily for Monroe, the Department of Public Works will have into operation by June or July, according to engineer A. P. Andrews, two pump installations on Bartholomew that will pump water into Lake Bartholomew (or Dead Bayou) at Sterlington. From there, the water will be channeled via pipe beneath U.S. 165 into Bayou DeSiard, which is Monroe's chief source.

A second 72-inch pipe will be installed beneath state highway 134 near Fairbanks to permit the flow of water. This will enable us to hold the water level in Bayou DeSiard at a 71-foot sea level mark, or about eight feet above the present low stage.

Meantime, it has become apparent that the city will turn to the polluted Ouachita River for drinking water.

Fortunately, the five-year program sponsored by the Arkansas Water Pollution Control Commission to clean up the Ouachita is scheduled for completion in December — next month.

Marvin Wood, commission director, advised us on the phone Friday from Little Rock that the salt brine that was once dumped into the Ouachita by Arkansas oil producers has been reduced considerably.

He said that in July of 1958 some 130-million pounds of chloride passed the Arkansas-Louisiana line in the Ouachita. According to Wood, by July of 1962 the figure had dropped to 47.4-million pounds of chloride.

Probably there will always be some degree of salt in the river, since rains will wash the oil field brine from the underground systems in Arkansas — by some degree — into the river.

When the program is completed, the Arkansas commission will conduct a re-survey to doublecheck it. At the same time the Louisiana Wild Life & Fisheries Commission has a station on the Ouachita near the Arkansas line to check the pollution.

However, Louisiana also has oil production near the Ouachita that must be watched closely. The Arkansas program will not do us any good if we pollute the river also.

Meantime, the City of West Monroe, while graciously offering Monroe residents drinking water, will have to get its sewer plant program rolling, or the sewer plant that Monroe is building will fail to become a complete success.

In short, this area has water, but can't use it completely.

Water conservation has been a foreign problem to Northeast Louisiana in the past. It's our problem today.

Register Duck Blinds

Today is the last day to register duck blinds with International Paper Co. on Wham Brake. You can register your blind today from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m. with a representative of the paper company at the control gates on Wham .

Blinds not registered and not maintained will be destroyed, according to Lindy Houston of IP.

Meantime, hunters have until November 24th to register their blinds on Black Bayou, according to Columbian Fuel Corporation. Registration lists will be placed at Payne's Boat Dock and Oliver's Boat Dock by Monday.

Work on Black Bayou blinds must be completed by dark, November 24th, and registered. After that, those that are not registered and maintained will be destroyed.

The season opens November 29th — the day after Thanksgiving, or 19 days away.

Confusion On Seasons

A lot of hunters are still confused about the special still hunting seasons on deer that opened yesterday in 24 parishes, including small parts of Union, Jackson and Winn in this area.

It would be impossible to describe these areas here. So the best advice that we can give the hunter is to refer to the official regulations on the hunting seasons available at your dealer.

Those small sections in Union, Jackson and Winn will be open for nine days.

After that, the regular gun season opens in Louisiana on November 29th, just 19 days away.

Tensas, meantime, is open for hunting, although we understand it never was officially closed. The Madison Parish Police Jury still has not met to officially re-open its season, although reports persist here that hunting is underway in Madison.

Since the deer season is fast approaching, perhaps the Police Jury in Madison and the Wild Life & Fisheries Commission will get together on whether the season will be open or not. A lot of people would like to know.

In Arkansas, according to the Game & Fish Commission, the seasons have been re-opened. The deer season in Arkansas — again according to the commission — will be conducted in three splits — November 11-16, December 9-14 and December 28-January 1.

Little Man's Corner

Fishing was good and the bow hunters continued as the little men made news afield.

But the biggest howl of the week came from Jim Packer, president of the Ouachita Wildlife Unit. Packer's picture was published Friday with a goose referred to as a "blue." Actually, the goose was white-fronted.

Jim wants his teasing friends to know that he knows the difference.

From Oak Ridge, Grady Day dropped a doe with a bow at 30 yards. It was Grady's first deer with a bow as the season continues to November 24th.

Bill Windham of Tallulah killed one with a bow in Mississippi.

So far we know of about five deer that have been killed in the archery season around here. Nine deer were killed in the Arkansas archery season before it was closed because of the drought.

Meantime, on the fishing scene, James Kiper of Winnsboro caught 27 white perch on shiners. Locally, Jim Baker and a partner landed 11 specs in Moon Lake.

At Old River in the Lake Providence area, Billy Stewart and Jean Ragus of Pioneer landed 87 white perch. J. Moreland and J. Musgrove of Bastrop got 40 white perch.

Bass fishing has been good in Lake Providence. Tony Cohron of Lake Providence landed a 7-pound bass. He was fishing from 11 a.m. through 1 p.m., landing a nice string.

BAYOU BARTHOLOMEW will provide a major source of water for the City of Monroe after pumps are installed by the Department of Public Works. Water will be pumped from Bartholomew into Lake Bartholomew at Sterlington, from there channeled into Bayou DeSiard via pipe beneath U.S. 165. Bartholomew is a pure stream with excellent water. The project is expected to be completed by early summer, 1964. (Staff photo by Sam Hanna)

AND ALL FREE TOO

Deer Can Provide Feast If Meat Is Handled Right

LITTLE ROCK (Special) — The legal harvest of deer in Arkansas last year was at least 28,000 — considering that the reported gun take was 27,772, plus a few hundred that were not reported, and the fact that archers are not required to report their kills.

How much edible meat does that amount to? A conservative estimate would be an average of 70 pounds per deer, a total of 1,960,000 pounds. Valued at 50c a pound, that's $980,000 worth of venison for the table in litle more than 17 days of hunting.

But did it all get to the table in good eating condition? Unfortunately, it did not. Many thousand pounds were wasted —allowed to ruin, or so poorly cared for that few people would eat it.

That should not be. In fact, it is a downright shame that so much of what could be very good meat is so grossly neglected that many people "just don't care for venison."

A lot of these same people probably have never eaten properly cared for venison, or have allowed a bait of bad meat to turn them against it.

This subject has been written and talked about thousands of times in hundreds of publications and through various other communications media. But there is yet much impovement to be made by many hunters.

Proper field dressing is the first requirement — without it, regardless of later care, the cooked meat will not be as it should.

A deer should be bled as soon as it is killed. Depending on where hit, the shooting very often takes care of this. But if not, a knife should be inserted at the base of the neck and the artery cut. Keep the wound open and free of clot.

With the insides removed (not difficult if done in a proper and orderly fashion), prop open the chest cavity and wipe with a clean cloth. Trim away gunshot damaged flesh and allow to cool.

Flies are often a problem, but black pepper applied to exposed flesh will keep them away. Some hunters (a common practice out west) skin and wrap their deer in clean cheesecloth.

All blood and hair should be washed from the animal before transporting it home. Water won't hurt the meat if allowed to drain off.

Much meat spoilage occurs while the carcass travels from the hunting area to its final destination. Never ride the carcass on the hood of your car or even on the fender — this subjects it to undesirable heat and dirt.

Upon reaching home the deer should be hung immediatly and the cooling process continued — several days are preferred. Depending on outside temperatures, an ice house or other means of artifical refrigeration may be necessary. Before processing, trim away excess fat.

Once these basics are accomplished, you will have plenty of good venison — one of the choicest of all meats.

One final thought. Accurate shooting provides the best venison. When a wonded animal runs off to die at a distance his physical exertions send blood coursing through the body into the muscles. This makes meat tough and coarse. You don't like venison" Trace events from the crack of the rifle to the time of cooking — you may learn the fault is not with the deer but with the hunter.

HOGS NOT GAME

The Game and Fish Commission has no enforcement responsibility over the killing of hogs, wild or domestic. Commission attorney Ed Ashbaugh advises that in case of a violation, the civil laws are involved and the case should be referred to local authorities.

It isn't unusual for hunters, especially on state and federally owned lands, to shoot "wild" or unmarked hogs running range free. This is perhaps why some persons think the G&FC has regulatory control.

It is suggested that anyone shooting a so-called wild hog be sure domestic animals are not authorized to be on that particular land. Too, precaution should be taken to assure that the animal is not marked for owner identification.

It is also pointed out that the owner is taking a risk by allowing his stock to range on lands where such ranging authority has not been obtained.

ARCHERY SCORE

Doyle Thornton of Malvern is added to the 1963 list of successful bow and arrow deer hunters. Thornton made his kill, a buck, just outside the Grant - Saline county refuge.

However, Vacel Razer of Lake Providence has been fishing in the late afternoons, catching a few each afternoon. Dr. W. A. Harry caught 15 in the big lake.

Frank Harvison of Bastrop landed the limit of bass in Lake St. John. Jimmy Tullos got the limit in Lake Concordia.

Getting the limit of bass in Lake Concordia were Ed Carol, Clarence and George Eyrick, Earl Wentworth, Claude Wallace, Henry Thompson, Elmer Turner, Oscar Stewart and John T. Reeves, and also W. F. Johnson, J. S. Matthews and Sam Tate.

Al Strickland and Percy May continue to catch fish at Deer Park.

Vidalia fishermen Willie Goss, Donald Mulihill, M. D. Feltenberger and Ed Price got the limit of white perch in the Red River barpits. Henry Matthews got the limit of white perch in Cocodrie Bayou.

Deer Park fishermen getting the limit of bass and a few white perch were Bill Williamson, George Trindle, S. L. Winston Jr., Lee Warner, Roland Stacy, J. O. Theriot, W. B. Shelton, Charles Nichols, Kenneth Mathern, Leroy Jones, Otis Flowers and Louis Crooks Jr.

Oklahoma Rallies To Beat Iowa State In Big 8 Tilt

By NORMAN ROWLAND

NORMAN, Okla. (AP)—Sixth-ranked Oklahoma spotted Iowa State a pair of touchdowns Saturday, then rallied for a 24-14 Big Eight onference football victory.

The scrappy Cyclones raced to a 14-0 lead in the second quarter, driving in after recovering a Sooner fumble on the Oklahoma 14-yard line, and springing fulback Tom Vaughan on a 73-yard touchdown run with an Oklahoma punt.

Oklahoma, aided by a 34-yard gain on a pass interception call, drove 70 yards late in the second period for its only score before intermission.

The Sooners wasted no time tying the game in the second half. On Iowa State's second play, Genl Condren recovered a wild pitchout on the Iowa State 17. Fullback Jim Grisham bulled over from the one seven plays later.

Oklahoma made it 17-14 on George Jarman's 23-yard field goal from an extreme angle, and capped its scoring when Virgil Boll picked off a Cyclone pass and raced 46 yards down the sideline for a touchdown.

Iowa State blunted the Sooner attack during the first half with tremendous line play, holding Oklahoma to a net of 13 yards rushing.

But the Sooners didn't yield much to the Cyclones, either. Iowa State managed only 75 yards total offense for the game, 69 rushing and six passing.

The Sooners held Vaughan, the nation's second leading ground gainer, to 47 yards in 24 carries. But the shifty 192-pounder put the Sooners in a hole with his punt return.

WIN 27-7

Panthers Top Fighting Irish

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Halfback Paul Martha's 92-yard touchdown ramble on a kickoff return and the passing and running of Fred Mazurek led eighth-ranked Pitt to a 27-7 victory over Notre Dame Saturday.

Martha's run came on the kickoff following Notre Dame's only touchdown.

Notre Dame suffering its fifth loss against two victories, held a 7-6 advantage after John Meyer blocked Dick Leeson's attempted conversion, but from there on in Pitt took charge and rolled to its sixth victory in seven games.

The Panthers went ahead 12-7 with a second quarter touchdown keyed by Eric Crabtree's 45-yard punt return to the Irish 25. Mazurek flipped a seven-yard pass to Martha and an 11-yard pass to Joe Kuznescki before Leeson bowled over from the 1.

Pitt put the game beyond reach in the third quarter. Leeson intercepted a Notre Dame pass and on the next play Mazurek hit Martha with a 40-yard pass to the Irish 10. Mazurek ran over for the touchdown and faked an extra point kick and ran over for two more points.

Pitt's final touchdown in the fourth quarter caused a mild disturbance involving Irish Coach Hugh Devore. Quarterback ohn Huarte went back to pass and when he apparently threw the ball into the ground, Pitt's Jim Jones fell on it and the officials ruled it a recovered fumble. Devore raced on the field but the demonstration cost Notre Dame a 15-yard penalty and moved the ball to the Irish 40.

Sophomore quarterback Ken Lucas took charge and moved the Panths to the Irish 6 before tossing a touchdown pass to Bill Bowley.

Water Crisis Strikes Home

With Sam Hanna

Conservation Spotlighted

Never before has the need for water conservation hit home any stronger than it has here these past several days with Bayou DeSiard dropping to a crisis stage.

The people of this area sat too long with their hands folded even though the Department of Public Works is moving now to pump water from Bayou Bartholomew into Bayou DeSiard.

Had the officials of Ouachita and Morehouse been successful in their talks several years ago to get the Bartholomew project off the ground, Monroe today would not be faced with the possibility of turning to the polluted Ouachita River for drinking water.

This problem is serious enough on the local level, but more seriously it points up the importance of protective steps everywhere to conserve water.

Water will become or already has become the nation's most treasured natural resource — more important than timber, oil and gas.

Louisiana, including our northeastern section of the state, is fortunate in that water is abundant. But water is not good to us unless it can be consumed.

Millions of dollars, perhaps even billions, are being spent in the California area to provide water for that rapidly - growing section.

In our own case, we have seen streams in Northeast Louisiana gutted in drainage programs. Yet today this area is undergoing a tough drought while on the national scale the water table is dropping.

Luckily for Monroe, the Department of Public Works will have into operation by June or July, according to engineer A. P. Andrews, two pump installations on Bartholomew that will pump water into Lake Bartholomew (or Dead Bayou) at Sterlington. From there, the water will be channeled via pipe beneath U.S. 165 into Bayou DeSiard, which is Monroe's chief source.

A second 72-inch pipe will be installed beneath state highway 134 near Fairbanks to permit the flow of water. This will enable us to hold the water level in Bayou DeSiard at a 71-foot sea level mark, or about eight feet above the present low stage.

Meantime, it has become apparent that the city will turn to the polluted Ouachita River for drinking water.

Fortunately, the five-year program sponsored by the Arkansas Water Pollution Control Commission to clean up the Ouachita is scheduled for completion in December — next month.

Marvin Wood, commission director, advised us on the phone Friday from Little Rock that the salt brine that was once dumped into the Ouachita by Arkansas oil producers has been reduced considerably.

He said that in July of 1958 some 130-million pounds of chloride passed the Arkansas-Louisiana line in the Ouachita. According to Wood, by July of 1962 the figure had dropped to 47.4-million pounds of chloride.

Probably there will always be some degree of salt in the river, since rains will wash the oil field brine from the underground systems in Arkansas — by some degree — into the river.

When the program is completed, the Arkansas commission will conduct a re-survey to doublecheck it. At the same time the Louisiana Wild Life & Fisheries Commission has a station on the Ouachita near the Arkansas line to check the pollution.

However, Louisiana also has oil production near the Ouachita that must be watched closely. The Arkansas program will not do us any good if we pollute the river also.

Meantime, the City of West Monroe, while graciously offering Monroe residents drinking water, will have to get its sewer plant program rolling, or the sewer plant that Monroe is building will fail to become a complete success.

In short, this area has water, but can't use it completely.

Water conservation has been a foreign problem to Northeast Louisiana in the past. It's our problem today.

Register Duck Blinds

Today is the last day to register duck blinds with International Paper Co. on Wham Brake. You can register your blind today from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m. with a representative of the paper company at the control gates on Wham .

Blinds not registered and not maintained will be destroyed, according to Lindy Houston of IP.

Meantime, hunters have until November 24th to register their blinds on Black Bayou, according to Columbian Fuel Corporation. Registration lists will be placed at Payne's Boat Dock and Oliver's Boat Dock by Monday.

Work on Black Bayou blinds must be completed by dark, November 24th, and registered. After that, those that are not registered and maintained will be destroyed.

The season opens November 29th — the day after Thanksgiving, or 19 days away.

Confusion On Seasons

A lot of hunters are still confused about the special still hunting seasons on deer that opened yesterday in 24 parishes, including small parts of Union, Jackson and Winn in this area.

It would be impossible to describe these areas here. So the best advice that we can give the hunter is to refer to the official regulations on the hunting seasons available at your dealer.

Those small sections in Union, Jackson and Winn will be open for nine days.

After that, the regular gun season opens in Louisiana on November 29th, just 19 days away.

Tensas, meantime, is open for hunting, although we understand it never was officially closed. The Madison Parish Police Jury still has not met to officially re-open its season, although reports persist here that hunting is underway in Madison.

Since the deer season is fast approaching, perhaps the Police Jury in Madison and the Wild Life & Fisheries Commission will get together on whether the season will be open or not. A lot of people would like to know.

In Arkansas, according to the Game & Fish Commission, the seasons have been re-opened. The deer season in Arkansas — again according to the commission — will be conducted in three splits — November 11-16, December 9-14 and December 28-January 1.

Little Man's Corner

Fishing was good and the bow hunters continued as the little men made news afield.

But the biggest howl of the week came from Jim Packer, president of the Ouachita Wildlife Unit. Packer's picture was published Friday with a goose referred to as a "blue." Actually, the goose was white-fronted.

Jim wants his teasing friends to know that he knows the difference.

From Oak Ridge, Grady Day dropped a doe with a bow at 30 yards. It was Grady's first deer with a bow as the season continues to November 24th.

Bill Windham of Tallulah killed one with a bow in Mississippi.

So far we know of about five deer that have been killed in the archery season around here. Nine deer were killed in the Arkansas archery season before it was closed because of the drought.

Meantime, on the fishing scene, James Kiper of Winnsboro caught 27 white perch on shiners. Locally, Jim Baker and a partner landed 11 specs in Moon Lake.

At Old River in the Lake Providence area, Billy Stewart and Jean Ragus of Pioneer landed 87 white perch. J. Moreland and J. Musgrove of Bastrop got 40 white perch.

Bass fishing has been good in Lake Providence. Tony Cohron of Lake Providence landed a 7-pound bass. He was fishing from 11 a.m. through 1 p.m., landing a nice string.

However, Vacel Razer of Lake Providence has been fishing in the late afternoons, catching a few each afternoon. Dr. W. A. Harry caught 15 in the big lake.

Frank Harvison of Bastrop landed the limit of bass in Lake St. John. Jimmy Tullos got the limit in Lake Concordia.

Getting the limit of bass in Lake Concordia were Ed Carol, Clarence and George Eyrick, Earl Wentworth, Claude Wallace, Henry Thompson, Elmer Turner, Oscar Stewart and John T. Reeves, and also W. F. Johnson, J. S. Matthews and Sam Tate.

Al Strickland and Percy May continue to catch fish at Deer Park.

Vidalia fishermen Willie Goss, Donald Mulihill, M. D. Feltenberger and Ed Price got the limit of white perch in the Red River barpits. Henry Matthews got the limit of white perch in Cocodrie Bayou.

Deer Park fishermen getting the limit of bass and a few white perch were Bill Williamson, George Trindle, S. L. Winston Jr., Lee Warner, Roland Stacy, J. O. Theriot, W. B. Shelton, Charles Nichols, Kenneth Mathern, Leroy Jones, Otis Flowers and Louis Crooks Jr.

BAYOU BARTHOLOMEW will provide a major source of water for the City of Monroe after pumps are installed by the Department of Public Works. Water will be pumped from Bartholomew into Lake Bartholomew at Sterlington, from there channeled into Bayou DeSiard via pipe beneath U.S. 165. Bartholomew is a pure stream with excellent water. The project is expected to be completed by early summer, 1964. (Staff photo by Sam Hanna)

AND ALL FREE TOO

Deer Can Provide Feast If Meat Is Handled Right

LITTLE ROCK (Special) — The legal harvest of deer in Arkansas last year was at least 28,000 — considering that the reported gun take was 27,772, plus a few hundred that were not reported, and the fact that archers are not required to report their kills.

How much edible meat does that amount to? A conservative estimate would be an average of 70 pounds per deer, a total of 1,960,000 pounds. Valued at 50c a pound, that's $980,000 worth of venison for the table in litle more than 17 days of hunting.

But did it all get to the table in good eating condition? Unfortunately, it did not. Many thousand pounds were wasted —allowed to ruin, or so poorly cared for that few people would eat it.

That should not be. In fact, it is a downright shame that so much of what could be very good meat is so grossly neglected that many people "just don't care for venison."

A lot of these same people probably have never eaten properly cared for venison, or have allowed a bait of bad meat to turn them against it.

This subject has been written and talked about thousands of times in hundreds of publications and through various other communications media. But there is yet much impovement to be made by many hunters.

Proper field dressing is the first requirement — without it, regardless of later care, the cooked meat will not be as it should.

A deer should be bled as soon as it is killed. Depending on where hit, the shooting very often takes care of this. But if not, a knife should be inserted at the base of the neck and the artery cut. Keep the wound open and free of clot.

With the insides removed (not difficult if done in a proper and orderly fashion), prop open the chest cavity and wipe with a clean cloth. Trim away gunshot damaged flesh and allow to cool.

Flies are often a problem, but black pepper applied to exposed flesh will keep them away. Some hunters (a common practice out west) skin and wrap their deer in clean cheesecloth.

All blood and hair should be washed from the animal before transporting it home. Water won't hurt the meat if allowed to drain off.

Much meat spoilage occurs while the carcass travels from the hunting area to its final destination. Never ride the carcass on the hood of your car or even on the fender — this subjects it to undesirable heat and dirt.

Upon reaching home the deer should be hung immediatly and the cooling process continued — several days are preferred. Depending on outside temperatures, an ice house or other means of artifical refrigeration may be necessary. Before processing, trim away excess fat.

Once these basics are accomplished, you will have plenty of good venison — one of the choicest of all meats.

One final thought. Accurate shooting provides the best venison. When a wonded animal runs off to die at a distance, his physical exertions send blood coursing through the body into the muscles. This makes meat tough and coarse.

You don't like venison? Trace events from the crack of the rifle to the time of cooking — you may learn the fault is not with the deer but with the hunter.

HOGS NOT GAME

The Game and Fish Commission has no enforcement responsibility over the killing of hogs, wild or domestic. Commission attorney Ed Ashbaugh advises that in case of a violation, the civil laws are involved and the case should be referred to local authorities.

It isn't unusual for hunters, especially on state and federally owned lands, to shoot "wild" or unmarked hogs running range free. This is perhaps why some persons think the G&FC has regulatory control.

It is suggested that anyone shooting a so-called wild hog be sure domestic animals are not authorized to be on that particular land. Too, precaution should be taken to assure that the animal is not marked for owner identification.

It is also pointed out that the owner is taking a risk by allowing his stock to range on lands where such ranging authority has not been obtained.

ARCHERY SCORE

Doyle Thornton of Malvern is added to the 1963 list of successful bow and arrow deer hunters. Thornton made his kill, a buck, just outside the Grant - Saline county refuge.

Oklahoma Rallies To Beat Iowa State In Big 8 Tilt

By NORMAN ROWLAND

NORMAN, Okla. (AP)—Sixth-ranked Oklahoma spotted Iowa State a pair of touchdowns Saturday, then rallied for a 24-14 Big Eight onference football victory.

The scrappy Cyclones raced to a 14-0 lead in the second quarter, driving in after recovering a Sooner fumble on the Oklahoma 14-yard line, and springing fulback Tom Vaughan on a 73-yard touchdown run with an Oklahoma punt.

Oklahoma, aided by a 34-yard gain on a pass interception call, drove 70 yards late in the second period for its only score before intermission.

The Sooners wasted no time tying the game in the second half. On Iowa State's second play, Genl Condren recovered a wild pitchout on the Iowa State 17. Fullback Jim Grisham bulled over from the one seven plays later.

Oklahoma made it 17-14 on George Jarman's 23-yard field goal from an extreme angle, and capped its scoring when Virgil Boll picked off a Cyclone pass and raced 46 yards down the sideline for a touchdown.

Iowa State blunted the Sooner attack during the first half with tremendous line play, holding Oklahoma to a net of 13 yards rushing.

But the Sooners didn't yield much to the Cyclones, either. Iowa State managed only 75 yards total offense for the game, 69 rushing and six passing.

The Sooners held Vaughan, the nation's second leading ground gainer, to 47 yards in 24 carries. But the shifty 192-pounder put the Sooners in a hole with his punt return.

WIN 27-7

Panthers Top Fighting Irish

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Halfback Paul Martha's 92-yard touchdown ramble on a kickoff return and the passing and running of Fred Mazurek led eighth-ranked Pitt to a 27-7 victory over Notre Dame Saturday.

Martha's run came on the kickoff following Notre Dame's only touchdown.

Notre Dame,suffering its fifth loss against two victories, held a 7-6 advantage after John Meyer blocked Dick Leeson's attempted conversion, but from there on in Pitt took charge and rolled to its sixth victory in seven games.

The Panthers went ahead 12-7 with a second quarter touchdown keyed by Eric Crabtree's 45-yard punt return to the Irish 25. Mazurek flipped a seven-yard pass to Martha and an 11-yard pass to Joe Kuzneski before Leeson bowled over from the 1.

OVER MARYLAND

Staubach Leads Middies To Crushing 42-7 Victory

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP)—Roger Staubach and Skip Paskewich provided the offensive fireworks and Navy's defense did the rest Saturday as the fourth-ranked Middies crushed Maryland 42-7.

Staubach scored two touchdowns and passed for one in turning in another spectacular job of quarterbacking before leaving the game early in the third quarter.

His seven pass completions in 12 attempts tied a Naval Academy season record at 94 completions. He has two games left. His 104 yards passing and 20 rushing boosted his total offense for the season to 1.544 yards.

Paskewich turned in the most spectacular run, racing 76 yards for a touchdown after intercepting a Dick Shiner pas. It was one of four interceptions by the Middies, who harried Shiner throughout the day. The Navy defense also recovered three fumbles.

Maryland's hopes for an upset were dashed early.

Linebacker Fred Marlin picked off a Shiner pass at the Navy 34 early in the first quarter and ran to the 49. Staubach promptly took the Middies on a touchdown drive, scoring himself on a two-yard sweep around left end.

Navy broke the game wide open with three touchdowns in the second quarter. Gary Kellner recovered a fumble to start one of the drives from the Maryland 43.

Paskewich scored minutes later with his pass interception and Staubach pulled off his most brazen play of the day for the third score of the quarter.

It was fourth down and 22 on the Maryland 3. The Middie quarterback was chased back to the 50 before unloading a pass which Kellner caught at the 6. Staubach scored three plays later.

End Dave Sjuggerud kept the rout going by recovering a fumble at the Maryland 28 at the start of the third period. Five plays later he caught an 11-yard pass from Staubach for a touchdown.

Maryland's lone touchdown came in the fourth quarter on a 22-yard pass from Shiner to Darryl Hill.

Steal Preserves Virginia Victory

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP)—Tom Krebs' last-minute pass interception preserved a 9-7 football victory for Virginia Saturday over a William and Mary team which nine times failed to score from the 25-yard line or closer.

The Cavaliers' third interception of the game checked an apparent William and Mary attempt to set up a field goal. Stolen aerials also keyed Virginia's touchdown and field goal.

John Pincavage halted W&M's second scoring threat of the first period with an interception on the Virginia 20 and a 63-yard runback to the Indians' 17. The Cavaliers scored in five plays, Bob Dunphey going the last three yards.

An interception by Duane Bickers in the fourth period set up Tom Shuman's 37-yard field goal with 6:38 left.

But W&M struck back with 5½ minutes left on a 69-yard aerial bomb from Dan Henning to Charley Weaver.

The Indians, rolling up 453 yards in total offense to 162 for the Cavaliers, were headed for the goal line again at the Virginia 23 when Krebs came up with a game-saving grab of a Henning pass.

It was the fifth straight defeat for the Indians, now 2-6 over-all. Virginia is 2-5-1.

Southern Cal Rallies For 25-11 Victory

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Southern California rallied with 17 points in the final quarter Saturday to defeat Stanford 25-11 in a game that was won—and lost—by fumbles.

The heavily favored Trojans trailed the underrated Stanford Indians 11-0 at the half, but came back to score a touchdown in the third and forged ahead with an automatic safety and two touchdowns in the last period.

A punt fumbled by Stanford's Dick Ragsdale was recovered on the Stanford 15 and led to the safety and soon after the winning touchdown.

After the safety, Southern Cal's Mike Garrett returned Stanford's punt 44 yards to the Indian 30. A moment later Craig Fertig passed for 17 yard to Willie Brown for the go-ahead touchdown.

EDGE SOUTH CAROLINA

Memphis State Keeps Hopes For Bowl Game

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI)—Undefeated Memphis State kept its bowl hopes alive here Saturday, but the Tigers had to capitalize on a fumble and an interception to squeeze pas tinspired South Carolina 9-0.

Senior fullback Dave Casinelli rambled for one touchdown and ground out most of the yardage to set up quarterback Billy Fletcher's 35-yard field goal.

The fighting Gamecocks more than once spoiled Tiger scoring opportunities and left 17,006 stunned fans watching what appeared to be a scoreless ball game until Fletcher's kick split the goal posts in the last second of the third quarter.

INTERCEPTION IS KEY

A diving interception by linebacker Ed Weldon started the drive at the midfield mark, but it took a penalty at the South Carolina 23 to keep the Tigers going. Even with a penalty halfway to the goal, the most the Tigers could get was Fletcher's field goal.

Linebacker Herb Cummings scooped up a Gamecock fumble early in the fourth period to ignite the Memphis State touchdown drive. From their own 32, the Tigers clawed out yardage with a 23-yard pass from senior quarterback Russ Vollmer to Casinelli, the key play in the drive. Casinelli rammed over from the two-yard line to bring his scoring total to an even 60 points for the season. He had been ranked third in scoring going into the game. Vollmer's kick hit the goal posts and bounced back.

The first half was a grinding defensive battle with Memphis State racking up the yardage, but spinning its wheels near the goal line. On one occasion, the Tigers drove down to the one-yard line before South Carolina again held the Tigers when it counted.

LOO KFOR BREA K

The Gamecocks several times looked as if they might break a bad luck streak that has left them with only one win and one tie in eight outings, but each time the powerful Tiger defense bulled through to halt the drive.

Quarterback Dan Reeves, playing at full speed and looking like the signal caller that set conference records last year, hit pass after pass, but the Tigers broke through to spill him and freeze any scoring effort.

Memphis State is now undefeated in 15 consecutive games and needs wins over Chattanooga and Houston for its first undefeated season since 1938.

Army Defeats Hard Utah But Shutouts Ended

WEST POINT, N. Y. (AP)—Rollie Stichweh plunged over the goal line for a two-point conversion Saturday that gave heavily favored Army an 8-7 victory over an aroused Utah team before 22,400 fans.

Utah broke Army's string of four shutouts with a third period touchdown on a two-yard burst by Alen Jacobs and led Army 7-0 going to the final quarter.

With fourth and nine on the Utah 29, Stichweh hit Don Parcells with a 21-yard pass that moved Army to the Utah 8. After Stichweh made no gain, Ken Waldrop burst into the end zone on an eight-yard run.

FIRST SEC WIN

Tennessee Vols Trample Tulane

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Mallon Faircloth and Hal Wantland led Tennessee to its first Southeastern Conference football victory of the season Saturday as the Volunteers defeated Tulane 26-0.

The heavier Tennessee line opened gaping holes for Faircloth and Wantand to set up two first half touchdowns.

Faircloth added a third touchdown in the third period with a 35-yard pass to end Buddy Fisher, and the Vols reserve carried the load the rest of the way.

Wantland, second team tailback, got the first Tennessee drive going with an 18-yard pass to end Glenn Gray. The Vols scored in three power plays. Fullback Pat Canini plunged over from the 1 for the score. Fred Martin kicked the point.

Faircloth got the second drive started with a pass to end Bob Frazier for a first down at the Greenie 33. Faircloth gained a first down in two carries and fullback Stan Mitchell drove to the 9. Mitchell circled left end untouched for the touchdown. Martin again converted.

The Vols got a break in the third quarter when Ken Homea recovered a Tulane fumble at the Greenies' 30. Tennessee was penalized five yards but Faircloth spotted Fisher alone at the 10 and passed for the Vols third score. The try for the point failed.

Tennessee reserves drove 68 yards in 13 plays for the Vols fourth score. Reserve fullback Jack Patterson plunged over from the 1.

Tulane's closest try for a score came in the first quarter when a 28-yard field goal by Don Bright was wide.

Wilkinson Is Hero In Duke 39-7 Victory

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Halfback Jay Wilkinson scored three touchdowns, one on a 72-yard punt return, as Duke rolled from behind to a 39-7 victory over Wake Forest Saturday. It was the Deacons 18th straight football loss and eighth of the season.

Duke, winner of the last three Atlantic Coast Conference titles, moved into a three-way tie for the lead with North Carolina State and the University of North Carolina.

Wake Forest scored in the first period when fullback Brian Piccolo rammed over from the 5 to cap a 59-yard drive. The Deacons enjoyed a brief 7-6 lead on Karl Sweetan's conversion kick, but Wilkinson's punt return touchdown later in the period set up quarterback Billy Fletcher's 35-yard field goal.

GATOR VICTORY

Florida Trims Georgia 21-14

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) Sophomore Bruce Bennett Triggered a pass defense that blunted record-setting Larry Rakestraw's tosses Saturday and gave Florida a 21-14 victory over Georgia.

Bennett intercepted Rakestraw's first pass and ran 43 yards for a touchdown. He intercepted two more before the game ended.

Florida took to the air on Tom Shannon's tosses after an onside kick and ran up a 14-0 lead before Georgia ran its second offensive play.

Rakestraw failed to complete a pass in the first half. He finally got going in the second half and moved the Georgia attack in a constant threat that kept the 48,235 spectators shouting wildly. But the last Bulldog threat ended with a Bennett short circuit in the last minute.

Larry Dupree, Florida fullback whose wife gave birth to a still-born son early Friday, was a doubtful participant until game time. But he led Florida's running attack as usual and scored one touchdown on a four-yard power smash. Dupree broke loose for another apparent touchdown but officials ruled he stepped out of bounds near midfield.

Both Georgia touchdowns were the result of Florida fumbles.

Two of Florida's fumbles aided them, as the Gators could do no wrong in the first half. On the drive for Florida's second touchdown, Jack Harper fumbled on a fourth down play that appeared stopped and Barry Brown recovered for Florida at the Georgia 4. Dupree scored on the next play.

Florida's third touchdown also resulted from a fumble. Dupree lost the ball at about the Georgia 2 and it rolled into the end zone, where end Lynn Matthews nabbed it for the Gator score.

Rakestraw wound up with 10 completions in 29 tries for 94 yards, but four interceptions were a decisive factor.

Dupree, the nation's 14th ranking runner, boosted his season total to 558 on a 74-yard game production.

Newellton Bears Rule Loop 3-B With 6-0 Slate

NEWELLTON (Special)—The Newellton Bears have clinched the championship of district 3-B as they claim a 6-0 district record with but one game remaining of the schedule.

Runner-up is Vidalia, with a 4-1 record in the loop, the only loss coming at the hands of Newellton by a 13-7 margin.

The Bears still have a game remaining to be played Friday, Nov. 15 with Waterproof, but the outcome of the tilt will not effect the race, as Waterproof has a 3-2-1 loop slate.

Newellton will face the winner of the Holly Ridge-Haughton clash in bi-district play. Holly Ridge is champ of district 1-B and Haughton rules loop 2-B.

YMCA Football

The Bengals clinched first place in YMCA flag football with a 6-6 tie with the Bandits. Perry tossed a pass to W. McMakin for the clincher.

The Steelers and the Lakers also played to a 6-6 tie, with the Lakers coming from behind in the final quarter on a run by Acree. Ledbetter scored for the Steelers on a 60 yard gallop.

The Rams beat the Vikings 18-6 as Surratt scored all the winners' points. Marx got the Viking tally.

In the Blue League the Cowboys clinched a tie for first place with a 27-12 win over the Cardinals. Graham picked up 12 points for the winners to add to his league leading total.

The Giants scored their second victory of the season with a 26-6 romp of the Bears. Porter and Farr each scored twice for the wiiners. Cale tallied for the losers.

Pittman scored four TD's to lead the Tigers to a 27-6 win over the Colts.

The Indians continued their winning ways in scoring a 27-6 win over the Packers. Brown scored two times in the final period to clinch the Tribe's victory.

SPARTANS ROLL

Michigan State Blanks Purdue

LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP)—Michigan State threw a blanket over Purdue's aerial offensive and converted two Boilermaker fumbles into scores as it beat Purdue 23-0 Saturday.

The victory kept the Spartans on the road to the Big Ten football title and a possible Rose Bowl date.

Michigan State had great difficulty moving against the supposedly loose Purdue defense in the first half and led only 3-0 at halftime on a 28-yard field goal by Earl Latimer.

A Purdue fumble had opened the way for that score, and another fumble in the third quarter set up Michigan State's first touchdown. The Spartans put the game out of reach with two more touchdowns in the fourth quarter.

Neither team could cross midfield under its own power in the first half. Michigan State got the ball in Purdue territory twice on a pass interception and a fumble recovery and drove to the Purdue 12 yard line for the field goal attempt.

The Boilermakers weren't quite ready for Michigan States scatback, Sherm Lewis, but they got a free lesson early. On the third play of the game he slipped off tackle and went all the way from the Michigan State 35-yard line, but a penalty for illegal procedure nullified the run.

Lewis never got loose like that again, but he set up two touchdowns with good runs.. He drove 30 yards to the one-yard line in the second quarter and carried 14 yards to the Purdue four in the fourth period. Roger Lopes scored both times on one-yard plunges.

Michigan State came to Lafayette with the tightest defense in the Big Ten and demonstrated that the statistics weren't lying.

Purdue got across midfield only once and was stopped at Michigan State's 36-yard line. The Spartans held Purdue's Ron DiGravio to 65 yards by passing and never let him hit for the long games Purdue needed.

Snook's Passing Leads Iowa Win Over Minnesota

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Iowa broke out of a three-game losing slump by whipping Minnesota 27-13 in a Big Ten football contest Saturday behind the pin-point passing of Gary Snook.

The sophomore quarterback threw three touchdown passes and tossed for a two-point conversion as the Hawkeyes won their second conference game against three defeats.

Snook, making his second start of the season, was helped by spectacular catches by end Cloyd Webb, who had been demoted to the second team earlier in the week, and by the jarring defensive play of guard Mike Reilly.

The Hawkeyes clinched the triumph early in the last period when Bob Sherman intercepted a pass thrown by Minnesota's Bob Sadek and ran 30 yards for a touchdown.

Alongi-Chuvalo Outcome Altered

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — Friday night's nationally-televised heavyweight fight between Tony Alongi and George Chuvalo was declared a draw Saturday as the Miami Beach Boxing Commission reversed the decision which had given the fight to Alongi.

Chuvalo's manager, Eddie Trotter, said the 26-year-old Canadian hoped to get a rematch with Alongi as soon as possible.

"Then we'll go after Cassius Clay," Trotter said.

OVER MARYLAND

Staubach Leads Middies To Crushing 42-7 Victory

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP)—Roger Staubach and Skip Paskewich provided the offensive fireworks and Navy's defense did the rest Saturday as the fourth-ranked Middies crushed Maryland 42-7.

Staubach scored two touchdowns and passed for one in turning in another spectacular job of quarterbacking before leaving the game early in the third quarter.

His seven pass completions in 12 attempts tied a Naval Academy season record at 94 completions. He has two games left. His 104 yards passing and 20 rushing boosted his total offense for the season to 1,544 yards.

Paskewich turned in the most spectacular run, racing 76 yards for a touchdown after intercepting a Dick Shiner pas. It was one of four interceptions by the Middies, who harried Shiner throughout the day. The Navy defense also recovered three fumbles.

Maryland's hopes for an upset were dashed early.

Linebacker Fred Marlin picked off a Shiner pass at the Navy 34 early in the first quarter and ran to the 49. Staubach promptly took the Middies on a touchdown drive, scoring himself on a two-yard sweep around left end.

Navy broke the game wide open with three touchdowns in the second quarter. Gary Kellner recovered a fumble to start one of the drives from the Maryland 43.

Paskewich scored minutes later with his pass interception and Staubach pulled off his most brazen play of the day for the third score of the quarter.

It was fourth down and 22 on the Maryland 3. The Middie quarterback was chased back to the 50 before unloading a pass which Kellner caught at the 6. Staubach scored three plays later.

End Dave Sjuggerud kept the rout going by recovering a fumble at the Maryland 28 at the start of the third period. Five plays later he caught an 11-yard pass from Staubach for a touchdown.

Maryland's lone touchdown came in the fourth quarter on a 22-yard pass from Shiner to Darryl Hill.

Steal Preserves Virginia Victory

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP)—Tom Krebs' last-minute pass interception preserved a 9-7 football victory for Virginia Saturday over a William and Mary team which nine times failed to score from the 25-yard line or closer.

The Cavaliers' third interception of the game checked an apparent William and Mary attempt to set up a field goal. Stolen aerials also keyed Virginia's touchdown and field goal.

John Pincavage halted W&M's second scoring threat of the first period with an interception on the Virginia 20 and a 63-yard runback to the Indians' 17. The Cavaliers scored in five plays, Bob Dunphey going the last three yards.

An interception by Duane Bickers in the fourth period set up Tom Shuman's 37-yard field goal with 6:38 left.

But W&M struck back with 5½ minutes left on a 69-yard aerial bomb from Dan Henning to Charley Weaver.

The Indians, rolling up 453 yards in total offense to 162 for the Cavaliers, were headed for the goal line again at the Virginia 23 when Krebs came up with a game-saving grab of a Henning pass.

It was the fifth straight defeat for the Indians, now 2-6 over-all. Virginia is 2-5-1.

Southern Cal Rallies For 25-11 Victory

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Southern California rallied with 17 points in the final quarter Saturday to defeat Stanford 25-11 in a game that was won—and lost—by fumbles.

The heavily favored Trojans trailed the underrated Stanford Indians 11-0 at the half, but came back to score a touchdown in the third and forged ahead with an automatic safety and two touchdowns in the last period.

A punt fumbled by Stanford's Dick Ragsdale was recovered on the Stanford 15 and led to the safety and soon after the winning touchdown.

After the safety, Southern Cal's Mike Garrett returned Stanford's punt 44 yards to the Indian 30. A moment later Craig Fertig passed for 17 yard to Willie Brown for the go-ahead touchdown.

EDGE SOUTH CAROLINA

Memphis State Keeps Hopes For Bowl Game

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI)—Undefeated Memphis State kept its bowl hopes alive here Saturday, but the Tigers had to capitalize on a fumble and an interception to squeeze pas tinspired South Carolina 9-0.

Senior fullback Dave Casinelli rambled for one touchdown and ground out most of the yardage to set up quarterback Billy Fletcher's 35-yard field goal.

The fighting Gamecocks more than once spoiled Tiger scoring opportunities and left 17,006 stunned fans watching what appeared to be a scoreless ball game until Fletcher's kick split the goal posts in the last second of the third quarter.

INTERCEPTION IS KEY

A diving interception by linebacker Ed Weldon started the drive at the midfield mark, but it took a penalty at the South Carolina 23 to keep the Tigers going. Even with a penalty halfway to the goal, the most the Tigers could get was Fletcher's field goal.

Newellton Bears Rule Loop 3-B With 6-0 Slate

NEWELLTON (Special)—The Newellton Bears have clinched the championship of district 3-B as they claim a 6-0 district record with but one game remaining of the schedule.

Runner-up is Vidalia, with a 4-1 record in the loop, the only loss coming at the hands of Newellton by a 13-7 margin.

The Bears still have a game remaining to be played Friday, Nov. 15 with Waterproof, but the outcome of the tilt will not effect the race, as Waterproof has a 3-2-1 loop slate.

Newellton will face the winner of the Holly Ridge-Haughton clash in bi-district play. Holly Ridge is champ of district 1-B and Haughton rules loop 2-B.

YMCA Football

The Bengals clinched first place in YMCA flag football with a 6-6 tie with the Bandits. Perry tossed a pass to W. McMakin for the clincher.

The Steelers and the Lakers also played to a 6-6 tie, with the Lakers coming from behind in the final quarter on a run by Acree. Ledbetter scored for the Steelers on a 60 yard gallop.

The Rams beat the Vikings 18-6 as Surratt scored all the winners' points. Marx got the Viking tally.

In the Blue League the Cowboys clinched a tie for first place with a 27-12 win over the Cardinals. Graham picked up 12 points for the winners to add to his league leading total.

The Giants scored their second victory of the season with a 26-6 romp of the Bears. Porter and Farr each scored twice for the wiiners. Cale tallied for the losers.

Pittman scored four TD's to lead the Tigers to a 27-6 win over the Colts.

The Indians continued their winning ways in scoring a 27-6 win over the Packers. Brown scored two times in the final period to clinch the Tribe's victory.

SPARTANS ROLL

Michigan State Blanks Purdue

LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP)—Michigan State threw a blanket over Purdue's aerial offensive and converted two Boilermaker fumbles into scores as it beat Purdue 23-0 Saturday.

The victory kept the Spartans on the road to the Big Ten football title and a possible Rose Bowl date.

Michigan State had great difficulty moving against the supposedly loose Purdue defense in the first half and led only 3-0 at halftime on a 28-yard field goal by Earl Latimer.

A Purdue fumble had opened the way for that score, and another fumble in the third quarter set up Michigan State's first touchdown. The Spartans put the game out of reach with two more touchdowns in the fourth quarter.

Neither team could cross midfield under its own power in the first half. Michigan State got the ball in Purdue territory twice on a pass interception and a fumble recovery and drove to the Purdue 12 yard line for the field goal attempt.

The Boilermakers weren't quite ready for Michigan States scatback, Sherm Lewis, but they got a free lesson early. On the third play of the game he slipped off tackle and went all the way from the Michigan State 35-yard line, but a penalty for illegal procedure nullified the run.

Lewis never got loose like that again, but he set up two touchdowns with good runs.. He drove 30 yards to the one-yard line in the second quarter and carried 14 yards to the Purdue four in the fourth period. Roger Lopes scored both times on one-yard plunges.

Michigan State came to Lafayette with the tightest defense in the Big Ten and demonstrated that the statistics weren't lying.

Purdue got across midfield only once and was stopped at Michigan State's 36-yard line. The Spartans held Purdue's Ron DiGravio to 65 yards by passing and never let him hit for the long games Purdue needed.

Snook's Passing Leads Iowa Win Over Minnesota

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Iowa broke out of a three-game losing slump by whipping Minnesota 27-13 in a Big Ten football contest Saturday behind the pin-point passing of Gary Snook.

The sophomore quarterback threw three touchdown passes and tossed for a two-point conversion as the Hawkeyes won their second conference game against three defeats.

Snook, making his second start of the season, was helped by spectacular catches by end Cloyd Webb, who had been demoted to the second team earlier in the week, and by the jarring defensive play of guard Mike Reilly.

The Hawkeyes clinched the triumph early in the last period when Bob Sherman intercepted a pass thrown by Minnesota's Bob Sadek and ran 30 yards for a touchdown.

Alongi-Chuvalo Outcome Altered

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — Friday night's nationally-televised heavyweight fight between Tony Alongi and George Chuvalo was declared a draw Saturday as the Miami Beach Boxing Commission reversed the decision which had given the fight to Alongi.

Chuvalo's manager, Eddie Trotter, said the 26-year-old Canadian hoped to get a rematch with Alongi as soon as possible.

"Then we'll go after Cassius Clay," Trotter said.

TRADITION OF POVERTY

Greece Now Sports Rich, Modern Look

ATHENS, Greece (AP)—Out of a centuries-old tradition of poverty, out of the devastation of World War II and out of a postwar Communist rebellion, Greece has emerged with a modern look of prosperity.

Greece's economic picture is bright, with growing industrialization, a strong currency position and increasing trade links with the rest of the world. American financial aid and technical assistance have been major factors.

Yet, Greece still has a long way to go to solve all its economic problems.

There is a nagging problem of how to raise the bare subsistency level of many farmers.

Unemployment remains relatively high despite the fact that Greece may soon have a serious shortage of skilled technicians.

Behind Greece's growing prosperity are these developments:

—American aid. The United States poured more than $2 billion into the country after the war to help halt economic dislocation. American technical advisers trained Greeks in modern systems of accounting, agricultural techniques and business methods.

—Greek initiative. Under the guidance of former Premier Constantine Caramanlis, a 5-year industrial plan started in 1960. It called for public and private investment of $3.7 billion and the creation of 400,000 jobs.

—Tourism. Starting seven years ago, the government began investing heavily in promotion of tourism. In 1962 Greece realized $76 million in foreign exchange from visitors. More than 600,000 tourists visited Greece that year, a 15 per cent increase over 1961. By 1965 officials expect one million tourists to bring in more than $100 million. Tourism income has helped counter the trade imbalance. At the end of 1962 hard currency reserves stood at $270 million.

—Common Market. As an associate member of the European Common Market, Greece has acquired tariff advantages designed to protect and encourage its industries for the next 20 years. This has increased the motive for private investment in Greece's industries. The country's geographical position also means accessibility to the growing Middle East market.

—Political stability. Despite the recent resignation of Premier Caramanlis, Greece enjoys a high degree of stability. The 1947-49 civil war made economic expansion impossible. A key feature of Caramanlis' eight years in office was to provide an atmosphere in which industry and business could grow.

As a result, Greece, one of the last countries in Europe to recover from World War II, has achieved such notable advances as these:

The 1962 gross national product —the total of all goods and services—stands at $3.4 billion, a 100 per cent increase over the past 17 years.

Per capita income for the 8.4 million Greeks, still low by Western European standards, has climbed from $127 in 1950 to $370 today—an increase of almost 300 per cent.

Industrialization, with emphasis on textiles, chemicals, cement, glass, metallurgy and shipbuilding, has developed so rapidly that demand for technicians may soon become a major problem.

But 120,000 out of a total labor force of 942,000 are unemployed. Tens of thousands more have jobs —but they had to go abroad to find them.

Despite industrialization, Greece remains predominantly agricultural. About half the working population is rural, and their living standard generally is the lowest in the land.

Tobacco has been the traditional big cash crop. It always has competition problems. Efforts are under way to increase wheat, cotton and rice production.

Perhaps Greece's cities best typify the economic picture. New buildings have shot up, giving a modern look to the country.

Trees May Help Put Ruston On Louisiana's Tourist Map

By JIMMY HATEN
STATE EDITOR

RUSTON — Ruston and the countryside around it has an abundance of trees but that fact certainly has not obscured Mayor John W. Perritt's view of the forest.

He envisions a "Forests of All Nations" project that he hopes would put Ruston on the Louisiana tourist map.

Since taking office in July of 1962, Perritt has pondered Ruston's image. He figures the town has everything a town of 14,000 should offer — a good school system, a top-notch college in Louisiana Tech and cultural, recreational and religious advantages.

But he, and many others who want a "touch of something extra" are not quite satisfied.

Perritt, a board of directors member of the Lovely Louisiana Tourist Association, is aware that Ruston has no outstanding tourist attraction.

Many towns such as Ruston are searching around in an attempt to remedy just such a situation. St. Joseph, for instance, is undergoing a "Demodernization" that will remake the little town into a replica of the steamboat heydays of the 1850's.

With no riverboat history, no Civil War history, and no particular natural attractions to tourists, a considerable amount of ingenuity would seem to be needed to come up with a project that would prove to be a tourist attraction.

And Mayor Perritt may have it. At the moment, it's strictly in the planning stage, with no hardfast plans made, but it's a beginning.

Faced with having to take what Ruston has and making a tourist attraction from it, Mayor Perritt wondered: "Why not trees?"

He consulted Dr. Lloyd Blackwell, head of the forestry department at Louisiana Tech, who told the Mayor that Lincoln has the soil and climate to grow many of the tree varieties of the world.

Armed with a report on the possibilities of such an undertaking, Perritt reported to a recent meeting of the Lovely Louisiana Tourist Association what he had in mind could "make Ruston stand out among all the cities of the world.

"There is only one other project to rival it, a city in Washington, but that area lacks the proper climate to grow as wide a variety of trees as we can grow in Ruston."

He said the project would call for 200-300 acres of land where planners hope to build creek beds with stone and to create artificial waterfalls.

In his report on a possible Ruston City Park-Arboretum, J. Kuprionis, assistant to Dr. Blackwell, said, "There are three main elements which make a site atractive, namely: trees, hills and water.

"The first element — trees, can be planted and therefore their presence at the moment of establishment is not essential.

"A hilly, rolling site is more interesting and more suitable for the arrangement of different species in various combinations.

"A stream or a basin of water is attractive by itself. Also many trees and blooming shrubs planted in proper arrangement with a body of water increases their effectiveness. An artificial pond 10 acres or something similar would be a solution to this problem.

"The size of the whole area, including the water basin, should be at least about 50-100 acres. An area of 200-300 acres would allow to create really something."

He went on to note that the arrangement of the Ruston Park-Arboretum can be based on these groups of plants:

1. Blooming shrubs and trees of hardy species such as wild azaleas, spireas, flowering quince, forsythias, vistarias, flowering dogwoods, red buds, catalpa, honey-locust, etc.

2. Exotic trees including species from abroad and from different regions of this country.

He said there is a good assortment of European, Asiatic, Australian and South American species which can be grown in the Ruston area. "Also," he continued, "some species from the Pacific coast and Northern forests of the United States could be used.

Wrote Kuprionis: "These trees would make Ruston's Park-Arboretum different from the other common parks. It would have a great importance from the scientific point for the study of acclimatization and would be very interesting for visitors."

In addition, he said, local trees including more deocrative species such as magnolias, tulip trees, lombardy poplars, and some rare species such as river birch, sand, pond, spruce, sondereger, Virginia pines, etc., could be used.

Kuprionis noted that "At the same time, all local common species can be grown to make a more complete botanical arrangement. An Alpinum Garden in Ruston Park-Arboretum can be established."

MAYOR JOHN W. PERRITT of Ruston hopes that his town can undertake a "Forests of All Nations" project. With trees from many points of the world in an attractive setting, Perritt believes tourists would be attracted to Ruston. (Staff Photo by Jimmy Hatten)

Own Home Dreamed Of By Oldsters

NEW YORK (UPI)—Dream of retirement?

To many persons perhaps the dream of ideal retirement includes a home of their own, smaller and easier to care for, less expensive to maintain than the one they raised the family in: a leisurely yet full life in a pleasant environment; facilities for indoor and outdoor recreation yet convenient to shopping and other community facilities.

All of this within easy reach of family and old friends. Not everyone wants to pull up stakes and head for far places when the big day finally arrives. Some look forward just to doing, in familiar surroundings, the simple things they'd always wished they had the time to do.

It's a dream such as this that's the model for a new "leisure village," a community for senior citizens in Lakewood, N.J., being built (on Route 70, just off Exit 88 of the Garden State Parkway) by Robilt, Inc.

Sixteen model units went on display recently in the village which, when completed, will contain 4,000 one and two-story garden patio homes, and a complex of recreational buildings, community halls, medical center and outdoor areas worth some $75 million.

Robil t President Robert J. Schmertz, said he has tried to plan everything in he village with an eye to the special needs and wishes of senior citizens.

"This," he said, "includes a location that is a short drive from residents' former homes (approximately midway between New York and Philadelphia) so that visiting with families and old friends can be done with ease."

The village covers 450 acres—only ten percent to contain housing; with the remainder devoted to scenic and recreational areas and buildings such as arts and crafts, shopping mall and medical center.

An out-of-hospital medical plan for residents will provide at $6 per person each month prescription drugs, doctor's visits at home and office and laboratory tests.

There is a swimming pool, nine - hole pitch - and-putt golf course and a 30-acre man-made lake, stocked with fish, and equipped with boats. There are picnic and other recreational areas and acres of pine woods.

The garden patio homes themselves are fully electric from baseboard heat to latest kitchen appliances and remote lighting—which permits residents to turn on lights in any part of the house at the front door; turning them off from either bedroom or kitchen. There will be no cross traffic in the community and all garages or carports are in the rear. There will be 24-hour doorman service at the entrance.

The apartments will be sold (for $12,500 to $18,500) under condominium ownership so that each buyer will receive an independent mortgage for his unit, just as a homeowner does for a house.

OPENS NOVEMBER 14

State Conference Set By Red Cross

LAFAYETTE (Special) — Ralph J. Mitchell, deputy manager of the Southeastern Area American National Red Corss, will deliver the keynote address at the Red Cross State Conference to be held in Lafayette at the Municipal Auditorium November 14 - 15.

Those planning to attend from Monroe were reported to include Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Gruber, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Boardman, Mrs. John B. Collins and Mrs. E. L. Gilbert.

The conference, which has as its theme, "The Next Hundred Years" will celebrate the centennial of the founding of the Red Cross movement. Registration for the conference will start on November 14 at 8:30 a.m. The conference planning committee has scheduled lunch at 12 a.m. and a buffet banquet at 6 p.m.

The program will include the following: "The First Hundred Years", "Red Cross and the Contemporary Community," "Leadership in the Chapter," and "Your Place in Disaster." Mitchell will speak at the banquet and Dr. John Melton, Minister of the First Presbyterian Church in Baton Rouge, will address members at the luncheon.

Professional workers and volunteers of the 78 chapters in Louisiana are invited to attend. J. Raymond Thomas, Chapter Chairman of the Lafayette Parish Chapter, said that reservations may be purchased from the Lafayette Red Cross office, an agency of the United Givers Fund, 2100 Jefferson Street.

Mitchell was appointed to his present position in March 1962, twenty years after he joined the organization as an assistant field director in Services to the Armed Forces.

He spent the first six months of 1963 in Havana as an official representative of the American Red Cross. He worked with the Cuban Red Cross and Cuban government officials in receiving shipments of drugs, medical equipment, and food given by the United States in exchange for the release of prisoners captured during the Bay of Pigs invasion.

Mitchell received his B.A. degree from the University of Mississippi. As part of his special training for administration in the Red Cross, he attended the Kellogg Institute's School of Management Development in Lansing, Michigan.

Solons Pass Many Bills Without Delay

WASHINGTON (AP)—Of the 775 bills passed so far this year by the House of Representatives, well over half zoomed through with little or no debate and by an indirect unanimous vote.

Much the same procedure is followed in the Senate.

This is not careless or sinister —except on very rare occasions.

It is the traditional way of dealing with minor legislation with a minimum of fuss and bother. The bills are supposed to be noncontroversial, and are screened in advance in both Senate and House. But occasionally a ringer does slip in.

The Senate has a "calendar call" whenever a backlog builds up, and then dozens of bills are passed by unanimous consent. The objection of one senator can halt a bill.

The same is true of the House, but there these bills are placed on separate legislative calendars, the private and consent calendars.

Various safeguards are built into the system. In addition, there is Rep. H. R. Gross, a slight, balding Republican from Waterloo, Iowa, with a suspicious cast of mind.

The consent calendar deals with bills of public interest, but pretty minor stuff. The rules are that no expenditure in a consent bill should be more than $1 million, it should not change national or international policy, and it should be in accord with the President's program.

Consent bills are usually for such things as "establishing the Battle of Lake Erie Sesquicentennial Celebration Commission."

These bills are passed by unanimous consent of the House. The objection of a single member can halt the process, and often does. But there is no direct vote as such.

An unofficial objectors' committee is named at the start of each Congress, with three Democrats and three Republicans.

And in case the objectors' committee misses something, Gross is always on hand ready to pounce. "If they don't object, I will," Gross says of many of the bills he regards as improper.

The consent and private calendars are called twice a month. So far this year the House has passed 206 consent bills and 250 private bills.

Private bills are even more obscure. They usually deal with individual cases. Many of them are to waive immigration snags for individuals.

One which got the thumbsdown sign from the man from Waterloo last week would have given $1,000 to Outlet Stores, Inc., of Denver, Colo., for a mistake in a government contract award.

It seems that Outlet Stores made a bid on some surplus used snowshoes the government wanted to get rid of.

Outlet Stores had a deal to resell the snowshoes at a profit. But through a mistake, the government sold the used snowshoes to two other guys, even though Outlet Stores was the high bidder at $6.11 a pair.

So Outlet Stores had to call off its deal and disappoint its customers. Its president, Leonard Joseph, also was out of pocket for a trip from Denver to St. Joseph, Mo., to inspect the snowshoes.

The comptroller general ruled Joseph had no legal remedy. Rep. Byron G. Rogers, D-Colo., introduced a private relief bill.

But Gross agreed with the comptroller general. No relief Outlet Stores.

Satellite Holds Promises For Mineral Hunt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An orbiting spacecraft may well be the best vantage point from which to search for mineral treasures still awaiting discovery on earth.

This is suggested by some remarkable color photographs taken from Mercury capsules at altitudes of around 100 miles. They show grand-scale geologic features which could not be spotted as quickly and simply by any other means.

These rock structures in a number of the photographs are like those which have yielded fortunes in oil, gold, silver, uranium and other minerals in places where they have been explored by prospectors on the surface.

One picture taken by astronaut L. Gordon Cooper in May conceivably could spur the Communist Chinese to an intensive search for riches on a three-mile-high Himalayan Plateau in north-Central Tibet.

The photograph shows a region of nearly 15,000 square miles east of Lake Montcalm and south of the Koko Shili Mountains. Paul D. Lowman, geologist of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), prepared a sketch from the picture which shows "a number of structures of possible economic interest."

Lowman said he believes mineral exploration will be one of the more valuable practical results of space activities.

"A hilly, rolling site is more interesting and more suitable for the arrangement of different species in various combinations.

"A stream or a basin of water is attractive by itself. Also many trees and blooming shrubs planted in proper arrangement with a body of water increases their effectiveness. An artificial pond 10 acres or something similar would be a solution to this problem.

"The size of the whole area, including the water basin, should be at least about 50-100 acres. An area of 200-300 acres would allow to create really something."

He went on to note that the arrangement of the Ruston Park-Arboretum can be based on these groups of plants:

1. Blooming shrubs and trees of hardy species such as wild azaleas, spireas, flowering quince, forsythias, vistarias, flowering dogwoods, red buds, catalpa, honey-locust, etc.

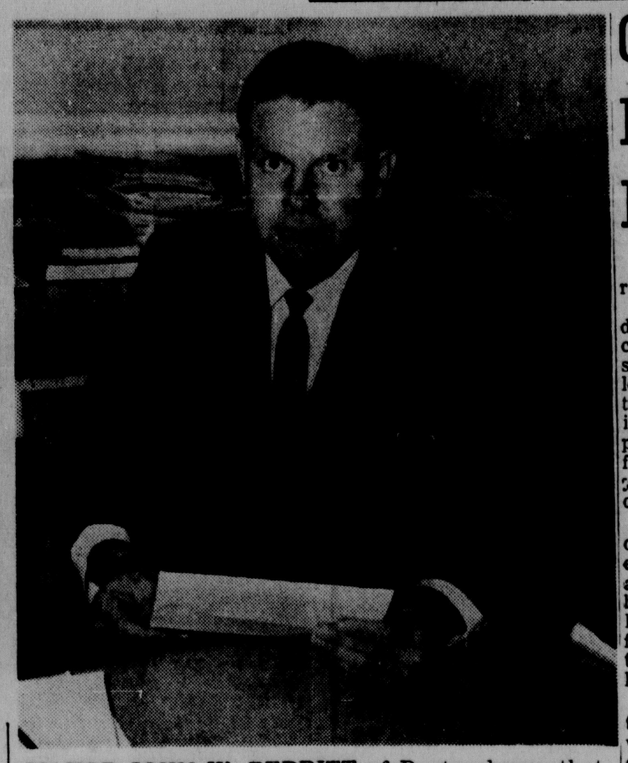
2. Exotic trees including species from abroad and from different regions of this country.

He said there is a good assortment of European, Asiatic, Australian and South American species which can be grown in the Ruston area. "Also," he continued, "some species from the Pacific coast and Northern forests of the United States could be used.

Wrote Kuprionis: "These trees would make Ruston's Park-Arboretum different from the other common parks. It would have a great importance from the scientific point for the study of acclimatization and would be very interesting for visitors."

In addition, he said, local trees including more deocrative species such as magnolias, tulip trees, lombardy poplars, and some rare species such as river birch, sand, pond, spruce, sondereger, Virginia pines, etc., could be used.

Kuprionis noted that "At the same time, all local common species can be grown to make a more complete botanical arrangement. An Alpinum Garden in Ruston Park-Arboretum can be established."



MAYOR JOHN W. PERRITT of Ruston hopes that his town can undertake a "Forests of All Nations" project. With trees from many points of the world in an attractive setting, Perritt believes tourists would be attracted to Ruston. (Staff Photo by Jimmy Hatten)

Solons Pass Many Bills Without Delay

WASHINGTON (AP)—Of the 775 bills passed so far this year by the House of Representatives, well over half zoomed through with little or no debate and by an indirect unanimous vote.

Much the same procedure is followed in the Senate.

This is not careless or sinister —except on very rare occasions.

It is the traditional way of dealing with minor legislation with a minimum of fuss and bother. The bills are supposed to be noncontroversial, and are screened in advance in both Senate and House. But occasionally a ringer does slip in.

The Senate has a "calendar call" whenever a backlog builds up, and then dozens of bills are passed by unanimous consent. The objection of one senator can halt a bill.

The same is true of the House, but there these bills are placed on separate legislative calendars, the private and consent calendars.

Various safeguards are built into the system. In addition, there is Rep. H. R. Gross, a slight, balding Republican from Waterloo, Iowa, with a suspicious cast of mind.

The consent calendar deals with bills of public interest, but pretty minor stuff. The rules are that no expenditure in a consent bill should be more than $1 million, it should not change national or international policy, and it should be in accord with the President's program.

Consent bills are usually for such things as "establishing the Battle of Lake Erie Sesquicentennial Celebration Commission."

These bills are passed by unanimous consent of the House. The objection of a single member can halt the process, and often does. But there is no direct vote as such.

An unofficial objectors' committee is named at the start of each Congress, with three Democrats and three Republicans.

And in case the objectors' committee misses something, Gross is always on hand ready to pounce. "If they don't object, I will," Gross says of many of the bills he regards as improper.

The consent and private calendars are called twice a month. So far this year the House has passed 206 consent bills and 250 private bills.

Private bills are even more obscure. They usually deal with individual cases. Many of them are to waive immigration snags for individuals.

One which got the thumbsdown sign from the man from Waterloo last week would have given $1,000 to Outlet Stores, Inc., of Denver, Colo., for a mistake in a government contract award.

It seems that Outlet Stores made a bid on some surplus used snowshoes the government wanted to get rid of.

Outlet Stores had a deal to resell the snowshoes at a profit. But through a mistake, the government sold the used snowshoes to two other guys, even though Outlet Stores was the high bidder at $6.11 a pair.

So Outlet Stores had to call off its deal and disappoint its customers. Its president, Leonard Joseph, also was out of pocket for a trip from Denver to St. Joseph, Mo., to inspect the snowshoes.

The comptroller general ruled Joseph had no legal remedy. Rep. Byron G. Rogers, D-Colo., introduced a private relief bill.

But Gross agreed with the comptroller general. No relief Outlet Stores.

OPENS NOVEMBER 14

State Conference Set By Red Cross

LAFAYETTE (Special) — Ralph J. Mitchell, deputy manager of the Southeastern Area American National Red Corss, will deliver the keynote address at the Red Cross State Conference to be held in Lafayette at the Municipal Auditorium November 14 - 15.

Those planning to attend from Monroe were reported to include Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Gruber, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Boardman, Mrs. John B. Collins and Mrs. E. L. Gilbert.

The conference, which has as its theme, "The Next Hundred Years" will celebrate the centennial of the founding of the Red Cross movement. Registration for the conference will start on November 14 at 8:30 a.m. The conference planning committee has scheduled lunch at 12 a.m. and a buffet banquet at 6 p.m.

The program will include the following: "The First Hundred Years", "Red Cross and the Contemporary Community," "Leadership in the Chapter," and "Your Place in Disaster." Mitchell will speak at the banquet and Dr. John Melton, Minister of the First Presbyterian Church in Baton Rouge, will address members at the luncheon.

Professional workers and volunteers of the 78 chapters in Louisiana are invited to attend. J. Raymond Thomas, Chapter Chairman of the Lafayette Parish Chapter, said that reservations may be purchased from the Lafayette Red Cross office, an agency of the United Givers Fund, 2100 Jefferson Street.

Mitchell was appointed to his present position in March 1962, twenty years after he joined the organization as an assistant field director in Services to the Armed Forces.

He spent the first six months of 1963 in Havana as an official representative of the American Red Cross. He worked with the Cuban Red Cross and Cuban government officials in receiving shipments of drugs, medical equipment, and food given by the United States in exchange for the release of prisoners captured during the Bay of Pigs invasion.

Mitchell received his B.A. degree from the University of Mississippi. As part of his special training for administration in the Red Cross, he attended the Kellogg Institute's School of Management Development in Lansing, Michigan.

Satellite Holds Promises For Mineral Hunt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An orbiting spacecraft may well be the best vantage point from which to search for mineral treasures still awaiting discovery on earth.

This is suggested by some remarkable color photographs taken from Mercury capsules at altitudes of around 100 miles. They show grand-scale geologic features which could not be spotted as quickly and simply by any other means.

These rock structures in a number of the photographs are like those which have yielded fortunes in oil, gold, silver, uranium and other minerals in places where they have been explored by prospectors on the surface.

One picture taken by astronaut L. Gordon Cooper in May conceivably could spur the Communist Chinese to an intensive search for riches on a three-mile-high Himalayan Plateau in north-Central Tibet.

The photograph shows a region of nearly 15,000 square miles east of Lake Montcalm and south of the Koko Shili Mountains. Paul D. Lowman, geologist of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), prepared a sketch from the picture which shows "a number of structures of possible economic interest."

Lowman said he believes mineral exploration will be one of the more valuable practical results of space activities.

Own Home Dreamed Of By Oldsters

NEW YORK (UPI)—Dream of retirement?

To many persons perhaps the dream of ideal retirement includes a home of their own, smaller and easier to care for, less expensive to maintain than the one they raised the family in; a leisurely yet full life in a pleasant environment; facilities for indoor and outdoor recreation yet convenient to shopping and other community facilities.

All of this within easy reach of family and old friends. Not everyone wants to pull up stakes and head for far places when the big day finally arrives. Some look forward just to doing, in familiar surroundings, the simple things they'd always wished they had the time to do.

It's a dream such as this that's the model for a new "leisure village," a community for senior citizens in Lakewood, N.J., being built (on Route 70, just off Exit 88 of the Garden State Parkway) by Robilt, Inc.

Sixteen model units went on display recently in the village which, when completed, will contain 4,000 one and two-story garden patio homes, and a complex of recreational buildings, community halls, medical center and outdoor areas worth some $75 million.

Robil t President Robert J. Schmertz, said he has tried to plan everything in he village with an eye to the special needs and wishes of senior citizens.

"This," he said, "includes a location that is a short drive from residents' former homes (approximately midway between New York and Philadelphia) so that visiting with families and old friends can be done with ease."

The village covers 450 acres—only ten percent to contain housing; with the remainder devoted to scenic and recreational areas and buildings such as arts and crafts, shopping mall and medical center.

An out-of-hospital medical plan for residents will provide at $6 per person each month prescription drugs, doctor's visits at home and office and laboratory tests.

There is a swimming pool, nine - hole pitch - and-putt golf course and a 30-acre man-made lake, stocked with fish, and equipped with boats. There are picnic and other recreational areas and acres of pine woods.

The garden patio homes themselves are fully electric from baseboard heat to latest kitchen appliances and remote lighting—which permits residents to turn on lights in any part of the house at the front door; turning them off from either bedroom or kitchen. There will be no cross traffic in the community and all garages or carports are in the rear. There will be 24-hour doorman service at the entrance.

The apartments will be sold (for $12,500 to $18,500) under condominium ownership so that each buyer will receive an independent mortgage for his unit, just as a homeowner does for a house.

BLACK AND CHAR. BROWN

POSITIVELY ESSENTIAL

That is the way our customers classify the famous Nettleton hand-sewn moccasin. Naturally it is no ordinary, run-of-the-mill moccasin, but a real shoe, blessed with the famous Nettleton knack for moulding easy comfort into a smart, stay-put casual. Soft premium calfskin, full leather lined, handled with typical Nettleton craftsmanship, lovingly, painstakingly applied. Costs a bit more, but, for the years of service it gives, the economy-minded consider anything less a downright extravagance! Black or dark brown calfskin. $24.95

Linda Womack Becomes Bride Of James Mulhern

White chrysanthemums, greenery and lighted candles formed a setting in First Baptist Church, West Monroe, for the ceremony Saturday, November 9 which united in marriage Miss Linda Womack and Lieutenant James Ernest Mulhern.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Womack, 3811 Blanks, Monroe and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Mulhern, Sterlington.

Dr. Clifton R. Tennison performed the double ring vows at 7 p.m. following a prenuptial concert by Bob Oldenburg of Fort Worth, Texas, organist and Mrs. Estelle S. Sanders, soloist. Traditional wedding marches were also played by Mr. Oldenburg.

Wearing a gown of white peau de soie and nylon lace the bride was escorted to the altar by her father who gave her in marriage. The gown was designed with bateau neckline, fitted bodice and long lace sleeves forming lily points over the hands. Appliques of lace and peau de soie roses embellished the long pleated skirt which terminated in a chapel train. Her veil was a mantilla of white lace in fingertip length. The bride's bouquet was a cascade of white feathered chrysanthemums encircling a white orchid.

Miss Sara Blanton Womack, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and bridesmaids were Mrs. W. H. Anders Jr., cousin of the bridegroom; Mrs. Ray Parker, Dallas, Texas; Miss Anita Womack, sister of the bride and Miss Myra Gail Womack, cousin of the bride of Marks, Mississippi. They wore identical gowns of aqua crystaline satin, designed with scalloped V necklines, short sleeves and lowered waistlines with pleated skirts. Small pillboxes of matching fabric and silk organza formed their headpieces and they carried bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums with aqua streamers. Aqua slippers matched their gowns.

Flower girl, Verone Medley of Dallas, Texas, was dressed identically to the bridesmaids.

Mr. Mulhern served his son as best man. Groomsmen - ushers were Bobby Brown of Tallulah, cousin of the groom; Pete Mulhern Jr., Rayville; cousin of the groom; Tommy Trawick, Jimmy Womack, brother of the bride; Carlton Lueg and Gene Lueg. The latter two also lighted the candles. Ring bearer was Daryl Oldenburg.

Mrs. Womack chose for her daughter's wedding a mauve silk linen sheath with short jacket, matching hat and gloves, gray shoes and bag. Mrs. Mulhern, mother of the groom, was wearing a blue silk linen sheath and jacket ensemble with matching accessories. Both mothers wore orchid corsages.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained with a reception in the church reception hall. Yellow candles in silver candelabra centered the bride's table where Mrs. R. L. Jarmon of Darnell, aunt of the bride and Mrs. Carey Kirkland, West Monroe, alternated at the silver bowl of yellow punch. Mrs. Charles Welch and Mrs. Carl K. White Jr. served the tiered wedding cake, trimmed in yellow and green from the opposite end of the table. Mrs. Ray Vineyard presided at the guest book.

Assisting with the reception as tea girls were Misses Mary Allen, Carolyn Boyce, Jo Ann Culpepper, Faye Parker, LaLuce Thompson, Betty Tucker and Pat Wilson.

For travel when the couple left on a wedding trip the bride changed into a teal blue suit with white feather pillbox, white kid gloves and gray patent accessories. She wore the corsage from her bouquet. The couple will be at home in Blytheville, Arkansas where Lt. Mulhern will be stationed with the U.S. Air Force.

The bride is a graduate of Delhi high school and attended Northeast Louisiana State College. A graduate of Neville high school, Lt. Mulhern attended Louisiana Tech and was graduated from Northeast. He is a member of Pi Sigma Epsilon, National business fraternity.

Hobo Handbag Has Jaunty Air For Young Set

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

Handbags are often revealing of their owner's judgment about what suits her age. There are as wide differences in styling handbags as there are in other accessories and clothes and certain styles are undoubtedly younger than others.

As an example, take the hobo handbag, a success at Britemodes right now. Whether in gray tweed, madras, corduroy or tapestry, this pouch which actually comes on an over-the-shoulder stick, is definitely a young style.

Britemodes makes an entire group of styles just right for young junior looks and activities. Totes, for example, form a whole group, with set-in handles, wood handles and shell handles, in deep, demi and small sizes, in half a dozen fabrics and leathers. Demi and small totes even come in various gilded and brocade fabrics to carry for evening.

One of their cleverest junior ideas is the size-zipped clutch which is carried by a handle at its narrow end. It's particularly youthful in a diagonal combination of madras and leather. The madras plaid is particularly big this fall with the junior set, and practically all the young bags can be had in it.

It looks great for school in a deep tote with set-in handle which can fold over to become a neat clutch bag, and in a true clutch, long and narrow, for churchgoing costumes.

Among the young, the clutch bag and the tailored pouch are favorites for party bags, and they appear in satin of all colors, black velvet and pleated chiffon.

MRS. JAMES R. McCULLIN

McCullin-Goodrum Vows Read In Goodhope Church

Miss Charlotte Goodrum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Goodrum, 105 Lisa Lane, West Monroe, became the bride of James R. McCullin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Horace McCullin, 112 Height, West Monroe, in a double ring ceremony Friday, November 1 at Goodhope Baptist Church.

An arch of greenery, fern trees and baskets of white gladioli formed a background for the prie dieu where the ceremony was performed by the Rev. D. C. Tippen. Branched candelabra holding lighted tapers completed the setting.

Traditional nuptial music was provided by Miss Biddy Dupree, organist and Dave Norris, soloist.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a full length gown of white peau de soie which terminated in a chapel train. French imported lace encircled the scalloped neckline and extended down front of the skirt with seed pearls scattered over the bodice and lace panel. A crown of seed pearls held her waist length veil. She carried a white Bible topped with a bouquet of white bridal roses and one long - stemmed rose which was given to the mother of the bride during the ceremony.

Matron of honor, Mrs. Parker Gibson of Delhi, wore a gown of sea blue brocade taffeta, styled with cap sleeves and pleated skirt. She wore a white fur pillbox and carried a matching fur muff to which was attached a bouquet of sea blue carnations.

Candlelighters were Miss Linda Peters and Miss Sherry Flowers, who wore identical gowns of sea blue brocade taffeta with white fur pillboxes and shoulder corsages of sea - blue carnations.

Serving as best man was J. H. McCullin and ushers were Joe Ross Jr. and John D. Walker. Steve Gibson acted as ring bearer.

For the occasion the bride's mother wore a beige wool boxy suit accented with gold accessories and brown patent shoes and bag. Her hat was of multi hued feathers. The bridegroom's mother wore a sky blue silk sheath with white hat and gloves and black leather shoes and bag.

A reception followed in the recreation room of the church where the bride's table, covered in pink was overlaid with a white lace cloth. An arrangement of pink and white chrysanthemums formed the centerpiece with the bowl of pink punch and the tiered wedding cake at opposite ends.

When the couple left on a brief wedding trip the bride was wearing a dark brown wool suit with lizard accessories and a white fur pillbox. They will be at home at 412 Everett in Ruston, where both will continue studies at Louisiana Tech. Both are graduates of West Monroe high school and Mrs. McCullin previously attended Northeast.

A number of out-of-town guests attended the ceremony.

The Christmas program meeting will be held December 2 at the home of Mrs. R. L. Wood, 1403 Park Avenue.

Linda Womack Becomes Bride Of James Mulhern

White chrysanthemums, greenery and lighted candles formed a setting in First Baptist Church, West Monroe, for the ceremony Saturday, November 9 which united in marriage Miss Linda Womack and Lieutenant James Ernest Mulhern.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Womack, 3811 Blanks, Monroe and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Mulhern, Sterlington.

Dr. Clifton R. Tennison performed the double ring vows at 7 p.m. following a prenuptial concert by Bob Oldenburg of Fort Worth, Texas, organist and Mrs. Estelle S. Sanders, soloist. Traditional wedding marches were also played by Mr. Oldenburg.

Wearing a gown of white peau de soie and nylon lace the bride was escorted to the altar by her father who gave her in marriage. The gown was designed with bateau neckline, fitted bodice and long lace sleeves forming lily points over the hands. Appliques of lace and peau de soie roses embellished the long pleated skirt which terminated in a chapel train. Her veil was a mantilla of white lace in fingertip length. The bride's bouquet was a cascade of white feathered chrysanthemums encircling a white orchid.

Miss Sara Blanton Womack, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and bridesmaids were Mrs. W. H. Anders Jr., cousin of the bridegroom; Mrs. Ray Parker, Dallas, Texas; Miss Anita Womack, sister of the bride and Miss Myra Gail Womack, cousin of the bride of Marks, Mississippi. They wore identical gowns of aqua crystaline satin, designed with scalloped V necklines, short sleeves and lowered waistlines with pleated skirts. Small pillboxes of matching fabric and silk organza formed their headpieces and they carried bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums with aqua streamers. Aqua slippers matched their gowns.

Flower girl, Verone Medley of Dallas, Texas, was dressed identically to the bridesmaids.

Mr. Mulhern served his son as best man. Groomsmen - ushers were Bobby Brown of Tallulah, cousin of the groom; Pete Mulhern Jr., Rayville; cousin of the groom; Tommy Trawick, Jimmy Womack, brother of the bride; Carlton Lueg and Gene Lueg. The latter two also lighted the candles. Ring bearer was Daryl Oldenburg.

Mrs. Womack chose for her daughter's wedding a mauve silk linen sheath with short jacket, matching hat and gloves, gray shoes and bag. Mrs. Mulhern, mother of the groom, was wearing a blue silk linen sheath and jacket ensemble with matching accessories. Both mothers wore orchid corsages.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained with a reception in the church reception hall. Yellow candles in silver candelabra centered the bride's table where Mrs. R. L. Jarmon of Darnell, aunt of the bride and Mrs. Carey Kirkland, West Monroe, alternated at the silver bowl of yellow punch. Mrs. Charles Welch and Mrs. Carl K. White Jr. served the tiered wedding cake, trimmed in yellow and green from the opposite end of the table. Mrs. Ray Vineyard presided at the guest book.

Assisting with the reception as tea girls were Misses Mary Allen, Carolyn Boyce, Jo Ann Culpepper, Faye Parker, LaLuce Thompson, Betty Tucker and Pat Wilson.

For travel when the couple left on a wedding trip the bride changed into a teal blue suit with white feather pillbox, white kid gloves and gray patent accessories. She wore the corsage from her bouquet. The couple will be at home in Blytheville, Arkansas where Lt. Mulhern will be stationed with the U.S. Air Force.

The bride is a graduate of Delhi high school and attended Northeast Louisiana State College. A graduate of Neville high school, Lt. Mulhern attended Louisiana Tech and was graduated from Northeast. He is a member of Pi Sigma Epsilon, National business fraternity.

Hobo Handbag Has Jaunty Air For Young Set

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

Handbags are often revealing of their owner's judgment about what suits her age. There are as wide differences in styling handbags as there are in other accessories and clothes and certain styles are undoubtedly younger than others.

As an example, take the hobo handbag, a success at Britemodes right now. Whether in gray tweed, madras, corduroy or tapestry, this pouch which actually comes on an over-the-shoulder stick, is definitely a young style.

Britemodes makes an entire group of styles just right for young junior looks and activities. Totes, for example, form a whole group, with set-in handles, wood handles and shell handles, in deep, demi and small sizes, in half a dozen fabrics and leathers. Demi and small totes even come in various gilded and brocade fabrics to carry for evening.

One of their cleverest junior ideas is the size-zipped clutch which is carried by a handle at its narrow end. It's particularly youthful in a diagonal combination of madras and leather. The madras plaid is particularly big this fall with the junior set, and practically all the young bags can be had in it.

It looks great for school in a deep tote with set-in handle which can fold over to become a neat clutch bag, and in a true clutch, long and narrow, for churchgoing costumes.

Among the young, the clutch bag and the tailored pouch are favorites for party bags, and they appear in satin of all colors, black velvet and pleated chiffon.

With all the special clothes for special sports around these days, one hobby has been much neglected — gardening. Now designer Ann Campion has remedied the insult.

She has produced a group of practical, colorful clothes called Gardenaires, and confirmed gardeners should go for them.

McCullin-Goodrum Vows Read In Goodhope Church

Miss Charlotte Goodrum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Goodrum, 105 Lisa Lane, West Monroe, became the bride of James R. McCullin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Horace McCullin, 112 Height, West Monroe, in a double ring ceremony Friday, November 1 at Goodhope Baptist Church.

An arch of greenery, fern trees and baskets of white gladioli formed a background for the prie dieu where the ceremony was performed by the Rev. D. C. Tippen. Branched candelabra holding lighted tapers completed the setting.

Traditional nuptial music was provided by Miss Biddy Dupree, organist and Dave Norris, soloist.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a full length gown of white peau de soie which terminated in a chapel train. French imported lace encircled the scalloped neckline and extended down front of the skirt with seed pearls scattered over the bodice and lace panel. A crown of seed pearls held her waist length veil. She carried a white Bible topped with a bouquet of white bridal roses and one long - stemmed rose which was given to the mother of the bride during the ceremony.

Matron of honor, Mrs. Parker Gibson of Delhi, wore a gown of sea blue brocade taffeta, styled with cap sleeves and pleated skirt. She wore a white fur pillbox and carried a matching fur muff to which was attached a bouquet of sea blue carnations.

Candlelighters were Miss Linda Peters and Miss Sherry Flowers, who wore identical gowns of sea blue brocade taffeta with white fur pillboxes and shoulder corsages of sea - blue carnations.

Serving as best man was J. H. McCullin and ushers were Joe Ross Jr. and John D. Walker. Steve Gibson acted as ring bearer.

For the occasion the bride's mother wore a beige wool boxy suit accented with gold accessories and brown patent shoes and bag. Her hat was of multi hued feathers. The bridegroom's mother wore a sky blue silk sheath with white hat and gloves and black leather shoes and bag.

A reception followed in the recreation room of the church where the bride's table, covered in pink was overlaid with a white lace cloth. An arrangement of pink and white chrysanthemums formed the centerpiece with the bowl of pink punch and the tiered wedding cake at opposite ends.

When the couple left on a brief wedding trip the bride was wearing a dark brown wool suit with lizard accessories and a white fur pillbox. They will be at home at 412 Everett in Ruston, where both will continue studies at Louisiana Tech. Both are graduates of West Monroe high school and Mrs. McCullin previously attended Northeast.

A number of out-of-town guests attended the ceremony.

One would think, from the number of our people who drive south each weekend, that Tiger Stadium was a mere two miles away, rather than two hundred. Social affairs throughout football season are planned with one eye on the Bayou Bengals' schedule.

This past weekend, however, traffic was somewhat reduced by the opportunity local fans had to watch the BIG game of the year on television. Several families invited friends in for game - watching parties. One such gathering was held at the LOUIS MILNER home on Park Avenue. Guests saw the game and then were served a buffet supper which included ham, roast beef, rice pilaf, marinated beans, and fudge cake for dessert.

Those attending this party with the Milners were the DUDE BARHAMS and the JOE BARHAMS of Oak Ridge, BENNIE and NELSON ABELL, MAE and BO SHAW.

Celebrating their anniversary as well as football season, JESSIE and RAY WALTON invited twenty-two guests to see the game at their home on Loop road. LSU colors were used with pennants and yellow chrysanthemums in the arrangement which centered the buffet table. Several guests arrived carrying Ole Miss colors to complete the picture.

Individual shrimp molds were served with dips as hors d'oeuvres in the television room. The buffet itself included barbecued turkey, fresh pork ham, rice salad, baked beans, with coffee.

An annual party is held for game watching at the home of YVONNE and JACK HERRON during football season each year. The group which gathers for this affair includes KATHERINE and BILL HOLLIS, DOT and TOM HYLAND, MARY and MEL COOK. This year after the game, Jack did the honors at the barbecue grill, serving a supper highlighted by barbecued ribs and baked beans.

One group which had their cake and ate it too had all the fun of a weekend football trip with a minimum of driving. They drove to Ruston and checked into the Holiday Inn for television game watching and a weekend houseparty. In the group were PAT and DICK BLANCHARD, NANCY and BILL STAAB, HELEN and LARRY ROBERTS, JUDY and GENE WORTHEN.

And speaking of Judy Worthen, she and VERA KELSO entertained Tuesday afternoon at a bridge party at Bayou DeSiard country club. Guests included members of a club with which the hostesses are frequent substitutes. Three tables of players took part in the games, with JANE SARTOR winning a frozen turkey as high prize.

Visitors in town this past week were DR. and MRS. R. R. SPENCER of Sarasota, Florida, who paid their annual visit to their son and his family, the NAT SPENCERS. They left for home on Friday.

Barrie Spencer invited twenty-four ladies for luncheon honoring her mother-in-law on Wednesday. The party was held on the porch at Bayou DeSiard country club. A green cloth covered the table, which was appointed with green crystal. Yellow roses in a brass container formed the centerpiece.

A two-house house party was how it all worked out when visitors were here from South Louisiana last weekend. DR. and MRS. M. F. CURRIER of Plaquemine were guests of the SOL COURTMANS; DENIS and CAROLYN MURREL of Bayou Goula visited CAROL and PAUL TENNIS. A number of small affairs honored the guests during their stay, including a milk punch party Saturday with ANN and THOMAS HOLMES, hosts; milk punch with DORIS and SANDY STEPHENS Sunday; and luncheon later with JEAN and DICK DICKENHORST.

Out of town guests here this week were MRS. DON QUICK of Kansas City; and MRS. DICK Thomas of St. Louis. These two ladies were honored at a sherry party given by JEAN M'CALL Tuesday at her home. A green and white theme was carried out in decorations, with a centerpiece of white chrysanthemums arranged in a silver and chrystal epergne. A choice of sherry or coffee was served with dainty goodies.

On the past two Saturday nights, the GRAYSON GUTHRIES have been hosts at twin supper parties at their family home, Grecian Bend plantation, north of town. Bouquets of ruby red dahlias decorated the hall and spacious living porch for both parties. In the dining room, the table was centered with a ceramic turkey surrounded with rosy onions, red and yellow chrysanthemums. The menu served to about thirty couples was highlighted by turkey spaghetti. Miniature doughnuts were passed for dessert.

A morning birthday party honored FAY WINK Monday. Hostesses were JEAN DIXON and DIBBLE PATE, in whose home the party was held. Rust colored chrysanthemums were used on the refreshment table in the den, where coffee was served with a choice of chocolate cake or homemade cinnamon rolls. A few of Fay's close friends called to wish her "Happy Birthday" and "Good luck" on her trip. With husband J. D., Fay left Tuesday for a house-hunting visit to New York. The Winks plan to move to the biggest city as soon as living quarters can be located.

We have two special poems this week. First, here is a poem by Monroe's own JOY ELEANOR PHELPS, written in honor of MAY SMITH WHITE, who was featured as the World's "Interesting Woman" on Thursday:

I know a charming little house
All white outside and in,
Where welcome greets each customer
Before the sales begin.
Within this charming little house
True love and goodness dwell —
You sense it as you pass its door,
Or pause to ring its bell.
Each room hold gifts and treasures
That fascinate and hold
One's fullest admiration —
While gifts are bought and sold.
But the true gift of beauty
Is in she who dwells within,
Whose life contains such qualities,
As we would like to win!
She gives it warmth and steadfast faith,
With gentle human care —
And lifts the spirits heavenward
Of all who visit there!

And in honor of Veterans' Day tomorrow, here is "In Flanders Fields" by World War I poet John McCrae:

In Flanders Fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That make our place; and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly
Scarce heard amid the guns below.
We are the Dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders fields.
Take up our quarrel with the foe:
To you from failing hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high.
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders fields.

American Women Buy Status, Not Warmth

Ninety per cent of the American women who buy fur coats do so for psychological satisfactions, not necessities.

They don't care whether coats are warm or long wearing. They buy the ones that make them feel good, that fit into the psychological picture.

That is what Louis Cheskin, told members of the Associated Fur Industries in Chicago. Cheskin is a well known author and director of a marketing and motivation research institute.

He claims that 85 per cent of American middle class consumers buy what the community accepts and what is status, and only 12 to 15 per cent buy what they want.

"It is characteristic of an affluent society, such as ours today," he says, to pay for originality, creativity, unusualness.'

Cheskin urged furriers to keep furs a status symbol, reminding them they must compete with boats, swimming pools, and sports cars for the status dollar.

Never Too Old For New Designs

Contrary to some opinions, contemporary furniture has a sizable following among retired couples.

In addition to its easy maintenance, contemporary furnishings appeal to a person or couple who is "young" in vitality and outlook. Space and storage problems are also kept to a minimum with the engineering marvels contemporary designers create.

Recent surveys indicate that many American buyers furnish three times in their adult lives — as young marrieds, during the prosperous middle years and again for a retirement home or apartment. The trend toward converting vacation houses to retirement homes calls for the contemporary spirit in decorating.

Fake-Fur Fabrics Make Fabulous Accessories

Wild and wonderful furs are coming out of the jungle and off the looms this fall . . . long haired and short haired, striped and spotted, to make really exciting accessories.

And since the right way to look this season is the Sportive way, the furry accessories — bags, vests, ascots and stoles — even boots — are one of the newest and smartest ways to add your own personal signature to your coordinated costume.

Among the pretend furs that will liven the fashion scene this fall are the zebra's stripes and the leopard's spots, both being widely used in almost everything from top to toe, from hats to vests to skirts to boots.

New weaving processes and new synthetic fibers have made possible an entirely new range of truly beautiful fake furs with all the richness of depth and color and texture of the originals.

And the creative designers, from the very top-ranking names on down, have gone wild over these furry fabrics, as will you when you see them.

These are not cheap and shoddy and shamefaced imitations of the real thing. They are frankly fake and frankly fabulous.

Consider the fashion impact of a "mink" pullover sweatery top, for example, or a floor-length "broadtail" hostess gown — or a "zebra" bag, big and bold, with a stark black suit.

Another dramatic use of these new "furs" is in sleeveless vests to be worn over plain little dresses There's an "ocelot" with "mink" trim that would be heaven with a golden wool — and there are even a wide range of "fur" shirts and blouses, sweaters and cardigans that are wonderful wardrobe extenders when teamed with your skirts, pants and basic dresses.

If you love the look of furs, and the luxury of furs, but not the cost of furs, then this fall will be the time for you to indulge yourself in all the glamour that these beautiful new fabrics are offering.

Pearls Are In Fashion Spotlight

Cultured pearls grow stronger in their fashion importance every day, and now the larger and rarer pearl is in the fashion spotlight. Double choker and opera length necklaces of impressive-sized pearls create an unusual effect and add interest.

The convertible necklace, an opera length that breaks into a choker and bracelet at will, is winning many new admirers. Pins, bracelets and rings featuring pearls and accented with rubies, diamonds, emeralds, or sapphires, are extremely popular.

Pearl necklaces of all kinds have universal fashion appeal, an attractive combination being a double choker worn with a longer necklace for a "full neckline" effect.

Diamond jewelry, of course, is ageless in its beauty and appeal, with diamond pendants, pins and earrings more dazzling than ever. The various cuts of diamonds — oval, marquise, pear and emerald, as well as brilliant — have each taken on individual fashion importance.

Diamonds are being accented with romantic colored precious stones, including rubies, emeralds and sapphries, creating an aura of elegance that is truly breathtaking.

The settings are light and airy, with a minimum of gold showing, and for added special effect different cuts of stones are used.

MRS. CHARLES BUTCHER

Candlelight Vows Unite Couple In Farmerville

Baskets of yellow and white chrysanthemums and myriad white tapers formed a setting in Zion Hill Baptist Church of Farmerville for the candlelight ceremony which united in marriage Miss Brenda Tucker and Charles Butcher of Greenville, Mississippi. Rev. James C. Houston performed the double ring vows at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, November 2.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Tucker of Farmerville and parents of the bridegroom and Mr. and Mrs. Earl H. Butcher of Lake Charles.

Mrs. Kenneth D. Kilpatrick presented a program of nuptial music and accompanied Jimmy Tucker of Monroe, brother of the bride, who sang.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a gown of white brocade satin with moulded bodice featuring a bateau neckline and elbow sleeves. A tiered bustle effect accented the short pleated skirt. She wore long lace mitts and carried a cascade bouquet of white French carnations with seed pearls and net poufs. Her short tiered veil of imported illusion was held in place by a crown of seed pearls.

Miss Ruby Ann Farrar, maid of honor, wore a gown of white brocade satin, styled with fitted basque, bateau neckline, long tapering sleeves and a bell shaped skirt. Her bouquet was of white feathered carnations with poufs of yellow net.

Candles were lighted by Cris Tucker and Randy Rhodes, nephews of the bride.

Gary Cobb, cousin of the bride, served Mr. Butcher as best man. Ushers were Rex Cobb, also her cousin and Bruce Odom.

Following the ceremon, Mr. and Mrs. Tucker were hosts at a reception in the social room of the church. For the occasion the bride's mother wore a brown wool sheath with matching shoes and bag, white hat and gloves. Her corsage was of white carnations.

Miss Shirley Ward of Northeast Louisiana State College, presided at the bride's book placed on a table covered with a yellow cloth and lighted by a white memory candle, encircled with yellow and white carnations. Also on the table was a manzanita branch holding tiny rice bags, which were distributed to the guests.

The bride's table covered with a yellow cloth, overlaid by a white net floor length skirt, caught at intervals with wedding bells, had as its central decor a massive arrangement of yellow and white pompons interspersed with white wedding bells and leather leaf fern, sprayed with glitter. White tapers in brass candelabra completed the setting.

The tiered cake, decorated with pale yellow roses was served by Mrs. Jimmy Tucker of Monroe, sister-in-law of the bride. Mrs. Michael Rhodes, sister of the bride, served yellow punch from a crystal bowl and Miss Joann Rockett of Spearsville, presided at the silver coffee service.

For travel the bride changed into a royal blue wool ensemble with white accessories, shoes and bag of crushed leather and the corsage from her bouquet. The couple will establish a home in Greenville, Miss., where Mr. Butcher is employed.

Among out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Butcher, Mrs. Ethel Grayson and Miss Carol Dean Butcher of Lake Charles and Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Williams of Haynesville.

HINT FOR PUFFS

If there's a stack of old powder puffs in your dresser drawer, wash them and dry in your automatic dryer. If puffs are enclosed in a mesh bag before drying, they're easier to remove when finished. They are also ideal for polishing fine silverware.

FOLLOW STYLE TREND

Confused by the kaleidoscopic assortment of waistlines, hems and silhouettes from which to choose this Fall? Don't be.

Underneath the maze of styles the trend is still very much to the loose - fitting shift and the softly fitted sheath. If you keep this simple fact in mind your wardrobe can include waistlines from Empire to Roaring Twenties, skirt lengths that dip demurely below the knee or peek above it — and you'll still be in the heart of fashion.

MRS. ERNEST EDWIN BISCAMP

Daughter Of Former Monroyan Wed In Texas

First Baptist Church, Galveston, Texas was scene of the ceremony Saturday, November 2 which united in marriage Miss Sally Lou Eaton and Ernest Edwin Biscamp.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louie N. Eaton of Galveston and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Ernest L. Biscamp, Texas City, Texas. Mrs. Eaton is the former Miss Nettie Jackson of Monroe.

Rev. Richard Perkins performed the double ring ceremony at 3 p.m.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a gown of imported angel skin sheer. The sabrina neckline was etched with reembroidered lace and seed pearls and the motif was repeated on the long tapered sleeves and the A-shaped skirt which terminated in a chapel train. Her veil of silk illusion was attached to a pearl and lace encrusted taffeta rose and she carried a cascade of white feathered carnations centered with a white orchid.

Attending the bride were Mrs. R. W. Shows, her sister, as matron of honor; Miss Barbara Jean Torrealba, maid of honor and Mrs. Charles Owens and Mrs. Jimmy Lafferty, sisters of the groom, bridesmaids. Flower girl was Miss Daffney Kay Lafferty, niece of the groom. The attendants wore gowns of emerald green lustrous peau de soie, styled with fitted bodices and belled skirts. They wore matching pill box hats with brief veils and carried cascade bouquets of bronze chrysanthemums.

Byrum Drue Biscamp attended his brother as best man and groomsmen were R. W. Shows, brother-in-law of the bride; Robert Phillips Jr., cousin of the bride and Larry Burchfield, brother-in-law of the groom. Serving as ushers were Charles David Miller and Cliff Baker.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Eaton entertained with a reception in the Castle Building of the church.

After a wedding trip to New Orleans the couple will be at home in Texas City. For travel the bride wore a cranberry sheath with black cardigan jacket, black accessories and a white orchid corsage.

Sportswear Is Bulky, Layered

Sportswear tops this season are looking better than ever. The little cropped top is replaced by boyish jackets with sleeve patches, by turtleneck sweaters under long sleeveless V - neck vests. Fisherman blouses and long, cuff - sleeved Oliver blouses look terrific.

In sweaters, too, the layered look predominates. The horseshoe neckline and V-neck are favored for the outer layer with turtleneck underneath.

Green - LeBlanc Vows Slated

Mr. and Mrs. Percy J. LeBlanc of West Monroe announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Miss Eileen Margaret LeBlanc to Carrol Lavelle Green. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robin H. Green, also of West Monroe.

Vows will be solemnized in St. Paschal's Catholic Church at 10 a.m. Thursday, November 28.

Color Runs Rampant In Footwear

Color is an integral part of the fashion story in the season's footwear that runs through the gentled, ladylike, lightweight theme.

Neutrals, stronger than ever, include the lightened, ashy beiges, the charred oaks, the tauped, browned grays. They take in the calm camels, the deep, unreddened browns, the slightly greened and honeyed wood tones. Rust and russet are in for their share of interest. So are khaki, cordovan and lustrous copper penny colors. The neutrals are expressed more often in textured finishes, the caviar grains, the reptiles, the plushy suedes, the sleek antelopes, ponies and slubbed, brushed leathers.

True greens and greens-with-brown (the brassy, deep woodsy colorings) are welcomed for their affinity for every color that fashion loves this fall. Try them with blue, with brown, with all the fashion neutrals, and for a bang-up new look, team them with firecracker or tawny reds.

Black, still the grande dame of all the colors, turns up in textures, lends its status to new silhouettes, gives a look of rightness to every color on the fashion palette in a whole range of new combinations with black. It is favored in pebbly textures, deeply grained alligator, ostrich, brushed leathers, new long-haired furs. It adds depth to kidskin, brilliance to patent, importance to waxy or matte finishes. Black-with-white is a new excitement, cropping up in frankly fake zebra stripes in pinto pony, in black shaded white snake.

Reds are on their way to becoming a reigning fashion family. The brights are most important now, the scarlets, cherries and other explosive shades.

MRS. ERNEST EDWIN BISCAMP

Daughter Of Former Monroyan Wed In Texas

First Baptist Church, Galveston, Texas was scene of the ceremony Saturday, November 2 which united in marriage Miss Sally Lou Eaton and Ernest Edwin Biscamp.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louie N. Eaton of Galveston and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Ernest L. Biscamp, Texas City, Texas. Mrs. Eaton is the former Miss Nettie Jackson of Monroe.

Rev. Richard Perkins performed the double ring ceremony at 3 p.m.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a gown of imported angel skin sheer. The sabrina neckline was etched with reembroidered lace and seed pearls and the motif was repeated on the long tapered sleeves and the A-shaped skirt which terminated in a chapel train. Her veil of silk illusion was attached to a pearl and lace encrusted taffeta rose and she carried a cascade of white feathered carnations centered with a white orchid.

Attending the bride were Mrs. R. W. Shows, her sister, as matron of honor; Miss Barbara Jean Torrealba, maid of honor and Mrs. Charles Owens and Mrs. Jimmy Lafferty, sisters of the groom, bridesmaids. Flower girl was Miss Daffney Kay Lafferty, niece of the groom. The attendants wore gowns of emerald green lustrous peau de soie, styled with fitted bodices and belled skirts. They wore matching pill box hats with brief veils and carried cascade bouquets of bronze chrysanthemums.

Byrum Drue Biscamp attended his brother as best man and groomsmen were R. W. Shows, brother-in-law of the bride; Robert Phillips Jr., cousin of the bride and Larry Burchfield, brother-in-law of the groom. Serving as ushers were Charles David Miller and Cliff Baker.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Eaton entertained with a reception in the Castle Building of the church.

After a wedding trip to New Orleans the couple will be at home in Texas City. For travel the bride wore a cranberry sheath with black cardigan jacket, black accessories and a white orchid corsage.

Bonnie Sue Clark to Wed Harry Crowe December 6

Mr. and Mrs. William I. Clark 106 Rex, West Monroe, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Bonnie Sue to Harry Wimp Crowe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Merlin W. Crowe, 1602 Florida, Monroe.

December 6 is the date chosen for the wedding which will be solemnized at 7 p.m. in the First Baptist Church, Monroe. Dr. J. T. Horton will officiate.

The bride-elect has chosen her sisters, Miss Janis Clark and Mrs. Joyce Trawick, as maid and matron of honor. Bridesmaids will be Miss Priscilla Thompson, Miss Carolyn Wroten, Miss Kay Butler, Mrs. Jennifer Fox, and Mrs. Dolores Prejean, New Iberia. Cindy Trawick will act as flower girl and Richard Crowe Jr. will be ring bearer.

Robert McMullen of Shreveport, will attend Mr. Crowe as best man and chosen as ushers are Tommy Crowe, Dickie Crowe, C. A. Lowe, R. W. Kimball, Ike McMullen and Cecil Kaufman.

Miss Clark is the granddaughter of Mrs. Ellen Collie, Calhoun. A graduate of West Monroe high school she attended Northeast Louisiana State College for two years.

Mr. Crowe is the grandson of Mrs. J. R. Partain, East Prairie, Mo., and the late Thomas R. Wimp and of the late Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Crowe, Girardeau, Mo. He was graduated from Ouachita Parish high school and attended Northeast and is presently employed in Monroe where the couple will reside.

New Oven Cleans Itself

AP Newsfeatures

The chore that women abhor, oven cleaning, may be a thing of the past. A self-cleaning oven is now a reality.

The new oven operates at 800 degrees. To clean it three dials must be set to "clean" and oven door latched.

It cannot be opened while the cleaning cycle is in progress, or until the temperature of the oven returns to 600 degrees. The cleaning job takes about an hour - and - a - half for a slightly soiled oven to four hours for a real dirty job.

Christmas Card Artists Know Fashion

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

All those old English scenes and Santa Clauses are all very well, but today's Christmas card artist must be a fashion buff.

Cards with modern themes created by the distinguished members of American Artists Group have to be up to the minute in the clothes shown. A scene showing the family doing Christmas decorations has a fashionably correct jumper dress on daughter, sweater outfits on mother and father. A sophisticated azalea pink card shows an elegantly green-gloved hand swaying a colorful Christmas ball, while on another, an exotically made-up lady expresses holiday cheer with a headdress of toys and baubles.

Not all the fashion cards are done by women, either. Kermit Adler painted a little girl in a charming white holiday frock with green and red smocking (smocking is very a la mode this year), while Nicolai Cikovsky did the brightly clad skaters on Central Park's frozen lake.

Hard sophistication is out, however, in fashion cards. Everybody looks happily Christmasy this year, as on Ralph Avery's charming scene of a colorful crowd in front of New York's glowing Public Library. Even the fashionable skiers in John Pike's Swiss scene, tunic jackets and all, seem like people you'd like to know, instead of being merely rich.

All this fashion solves a minor Seventh Avenue mystery. During the fall showings, all those sketches must have been Christmas card artists doing research!

MR. AND MRS. JIMMY ROSS ALBRITTON

Albritton-Martin Vows Exchanged By Candlelight

McClendon Baptist Church in West Monroe was scene of the ceremony on Friday, November 1 which united in marriage Miss Bonnie Suanna Martin and Jimmy Ross Albritton. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. C. M. Martin, West Monroe and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. James B. Albritton, Farmerville.

A candle tree centered the altar with baskets of white gladioli on either side to form a background for the double ring vows at 7:30 p.m. performed by Rev. E. L. Hayes.

Mrs. Jane Peterson, organist and Reggie Guice, soloist, presented a program of wedding music.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Charles M. Martin Jr. Her gown of Chantilly lace and bridal tulle over white satin, was designed with long pointed sleeves and voluminous full length tulle overskirt. Seed pearls etched the neckline and were scattered over the lace bodice. Her veil of bridal tulle fell fingertip length from a crown of seed pearls, and she carried a bouquet comprised of a white orchid, encircled by white chrysanthemums atop a lace over satin covered Bible.

Miss Carolyn Causey, maid of honor, wore a full-skirted gown of French blue chromspun satin, styled with long fitted sleeves and bodice enclosed with tiny buttons. Her headdress was of matching tulle over satin and she carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums. Bridesmaids, Miss Linda Kane and Miss Dianne Albritton, sister of the groom, wore gowns of sky blue chromspun satin, styled identically to that of the maid of honor, with matching headdresses and bouquets.

Miss Naomi Gilmore, flower girl, also wore a frock of French blue and carried a lace-covered satin basket of chrysanthemums.

Serving as best man was Danny Albritton and groomsmen-ushers were Ronnie Bayles and Bobby Fletcher.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Martin chose a light blue wool model with beige accessories. The bridegroom's mother was wearing a tan wool dress with matching accessories and both wore corsages of white chrysanthemums.

A reception followed in the church banquet room. The bride's table, covered with a white damask cloth, held a centerpiece in shades of blue to match the bridesmaids' gowns. Mrs. Jennette Little served the tiered wedding cake, decorated with blue flowers and butterflies while at the opposite end of the table Mrs. Mary Lou Gilmore served the deep yellow punch. Mrs. Kenneth Parker presided at the guest book.

When the couple left on a short wedding trip the bride was wearing a light blue wool dress with black patent accessories and the orchid from her bouquet. They will be at home in West Monroe.

The bride is a senior at West Monroe high school and Mr. Albritton, a graduate of Farmerville high school, is a junior at Northeast Louisiana State College.

Mrs. G. L. Gulett of Whittier, Calif., sister of the bridegroom, was among the out - of - town guests.

Chanel Style Is Perennial Fashion Leader

The winds of fashion blow and change, but Chanel goes on forever. Periodically, somebody announces the Chanel look is finished, only to see Mlle. Coco pop up again, indestructible as ever.

Most recent premature burial was in a fashion trade newspaper, which said that mass copies of Chanel had caused women to stop buying her originals. Hardly a week later, the same paper ran two pages of pictures of socialites at Deauville, France, all wearing Chanels.

Chanel's secret is that she developed a single style uniquely hers, and stuck to it, year in and year out. Amidst all the fashion changes, when you can't tell a Dior from a Ricci, you can always recognize a Chanel suit.

That easy, square jacket, with its ribbon or braid edgings, those zillionaire silk shirts, those skirts, all in colors and fabrics only she could put together, have been unmistakable for forty years.

SCRUB STAINS

To remove coffee stains from plastic cups, use toothpaste with a damp cloth or baking soda and water with a bit of "elbow grease."

BAKED APPLES

Try baking apples, tomatoes or stuffed peppers in well-greased muffin pans. This method helps keep shape and makes them more attractive when served.

Gay Holiday Decorations Easily Made At Home

Handy do-it-yourself-ers can capitalize on the festive air of the holiday season by coordinating gay table setting idea and window treatments. A small, round table is the perfect foil for a floor-length Christmas cloth. Make one of bright red or green cotton and trim with white swag - and - ball fringe around the bottom using a narrow zigzag stitch. Make matching seat covers and back cushions for the dining chairs in stylized Christmas tree shape. Trim tree with fabric covered buttons in contrasting colors so that they look like flat Christmas tree balls. Sewing experts suggest you make a paper pattern of tree before cutting fabric which you can also use to make extra trees to paste on your window shades. Add same ball fringe to the shade border and multi-colored flat buttons to the trees, and - for a little time and effort - and very little money - you'll have a delightful spot to entertain Santa.

Give your bathroom an elegant holiday air, say the sewing experts by having your towels and window shades brightly decorated with amusing Christmas motifs.

Christmas bells, holly leaves, candy canes, or decorative candles are all easy to silhouette. Cut the appliques out of washable fabric in colors that lend a pretty contrast to your towels and applique with a zigzag stitch. Add several rows of decorative stitch patterns to design to give your towels a special, custom look. To complete your color scheme, paste one set of appliques on your window shade and cover a waste basket with towel and trim with ball fringe. Artificial holly shade pulls will add still another imaginative fillip.

Sewing experts have worked out a colorful felt version of the medieval banner for use as a novel Christmas decoration. You can easily make one yourself to hang over the mantel, the front door - or on the wall like a picture. Just select a favored Yuletide design, such as a pair of angels, a jolly Santa, a scroll of medieval music notes on a white ground or a Christmas wreath. Make paper patterns of the component parts and trace these on gaily colored felt. Cut them out and sew them on a large felt sheet to make a fine approximation of the handsome wall hanging that once graced the castle for Christmas dinner. As an added touch of gaiety, paste some of the same felt motifs on window shades. Banner and shades are easy to roll up and save with your other Christmas ornaments till next year.

Bonnie Sue Clark to Wed Harry Crowe December 6

Mr. and Mrs. William I. Clark 106 Rex, West Monroe, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Bonnie Sue to Harry Wimp Crowe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Merlin W. Crowe, 1602 Florida, Monroe.

December 6 is the date chosen for the wedding which will be solemnized at 7 p.m. in the First Baptist Church, Monroe. Dr. J. T. Horton will officiate.

The bride-elect has chosen her sisters, Miss Janis Clark and Mrs. Joyce Trawick, as maid and matron of honor. Bridesmaids will be Miss Priscilla Thompson, Miss Carolyn Wroten, Miss Kay Butler, Mrs. Jennifer Fox, and Mrs. Dolores Prejean, New Iberia. Cindy Trawick will act as flower girl and Richard Crowe Jr. will be ring bearer.

Robert McMullen of Shreveport, will attend Mr. Crowe as best man and chosen as ushers are Tommy Crowe, Dickie Crowe, C. A. Lowe, R. W. Kimball, Ike McMullen and Cecil Kaufman.

Miss Clark is the granddaughter of Mrs. Ellen Collie, Calhoun. A graduate of West Monroe high school she attended Northeast Louisiana State College for two years.

Mr. Crowe is the grandson of Mrs. J. R. Partain, East Prairie, Mo., and the late Thomas R. Wimp and of the late Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Crowe, Girardeau, Mo. He was graduated from Ouachita Parish high school and attended Northeast and is presently employed in Monroe where the couple will reside.

Christmas Card Artists Know Fashion

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

All those old English scenes and Santa Clauses are all very well, but today's Christmas card artist must be a fashion buff.

Cards with modern themes created by the distinguished members of American Artists Group nave to be up to the minute in the clothes shown. A scene showing the family doing Christmas decorations has a fashionably correct jumper dress on daughter, sweater outfits on mother and father. A sophisticated azalea pink card shows an elegantly green-gloved hand swaying a colorful Christmas ball, while on another, an exotically made-up lady expresses holiday cheer with a headdress of toys and baubles.

Not all the fashion cards are done by women, either. Kermit Adler painted a little girl in a charming white holiday frock with green and red smocking (smocking is very a la mode this year), while Nicolai Cikovsky did the brightly clad skaters on Central Park's frozen lake.

Hard sophistication is out, however, in fashion cards. Everybody looks happily Christmasy this year, as on Ralph Avery's charming scene of a colorful crowd in front of New York's glowing Public Library. Even the fashionable skiers in John Pike's Swiss scene, tunic jackets and all, seem like people you'd like to know, instead of being merely rich.

All this fashion solves a minor Seventh Avenue mystery. During the fall showings, all those sketches must have been Christmas card artists doing research!

New Oven Cleans Itself

AP Newsfeatures

The chore that women abhor, oven cleaning, may be a thing of the past. A self-cleaning oven is now a reality.

The new oven operates at 800 degrees. To clean it three dials must be set to "clean" and oven door latched.

It cannot be opened while the cleaning cycle is in progress, or until the temperature of the oven returns to 600 degrees. The cleaning job takes about an hour - and - a - half for a slightly soiled oven to four hours for a real dirty job.

MR. AND MRS. JIMMY ROSS ALBRITTON

Albritton-Martin Vows Exchanged By Candlelight

McClendon Baptist Church in West Monroe was scene of the ceremony on Friday, November 1 which united in marriage Miss Bonnie Suanna Martin and Jimmy Ross Albritton. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. C. M. Martin, West Monroe and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. James B. Albritton, Farmerville.

A candle tree centered the altar with baskets of white gladioli on either side to form a background for the double ring vows at 7:30 p.m. performed by Rev. E. L. Hayes.

Mrs. Jane Peterson, organist and Reggie Guice, soloist, presented a program of wedding music.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Charles M. Martin Jr. Her gown of Chantilly lace and bridal tulle over white satin, was designed with long pointed sleeves and voluminous full length tulle overskirt. Seed pearls etched the neckline and were scattered over the lace bodice. Her veil of bridal tulle fell fingertip length from a crown of seed pearls, and she carried a bouquet comprised of a white orchid, encircled by white chrysanthemums atop a lace over satin covered Bible.

Miss Carolyn Causey, maid of honor, wore a full-skirted gown of French blue chromspun satin, styled with long fitted sleeves and bodice enclosed with tiny buttons. Her headdress was of matching tulle over satin and she carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums. Bridesmaids, Miss Linda Kane and Miss Dianne Albritton, sister of the groom, wore gowns of sky blue chromspun satin, styled identically to that of the maid of honor, with matching headdresses and bouquets.

Miss Naomi Gilmore, flower girl, also wore a frock of French blue and carried a lace-covered satin basket of chrysanthemums.

Serving as best man was Danny Albritton and groomsmen-ushers were Ronnie Bayles and Bobby Fletcher.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Martin chose a light blue wool model with beige accessories. The bridegroom's mother was wearing a tan wool dress with matching accessories and both wore corsages of white chrysanthemums.

A reception followed in the church banquet room. The bride's table, covered with a white damask cloth, held a centerpiece in shades of blue to match the bridesmaids' gowns. Mrs. Jennette Little served the tiered wedding cake, decorated with blue flowers and butterflies while at the opposite end of the table Mrs. Mary Lou Gilmore served the deep yellow punch. Mrs. Kenneth Parker presided at the guest book.

When the couple left on a short wedding trip the bride was wearing a light blue wool dress with black patent accessories and the orchid from her bouquet. They will be at home in West Monore.

The bride is a senior at West Monroe high school and Mr. Albritton, a graduate of Farmerville high school, is a junior at Northeast Louisiana State College.

Mrs. G. L. Gulett of Whittier, Calif., sister of the bridegroom, was among the out - of - town guests.

NEW YORK (AP) — Herman Bernstein has been elected president of the League of New York Theaters, the organization of Broadway show producers. He succeeds Herman Levin.

Other officials elected are Herman Shumlin, first vice president; Samuel Schwartz, second vice president; Louis Lotito, secretary; and Alfred de Liagre Jr., treasurer.

YOUR PROBLEMS

Troubles Multiply By Mixing Families

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I've been offered a promotion but my wife doesn't want me to accept it because it means moving to a city where my ex-wife and daughter live.

Although our divorce was a bitter one my ex-wife and I are now on friendly terms. We speak on the long distance telephone often about matters of mutual concern. I've been paying stiff alimony and support for eight years but I feel it is my moral obligation and I'm not complaining.

Every year since the divorce I have gone to celebrate my daughter's birthday with her. This provokes annual fireworks from my wife. When I attended my ex-father-in-law's funeral last year my wife was enraged.

You have frequently said in your column that a good wife should do whatever she can to help her husband get ahead. I like your expression "She should go where the grapes grow."

Will you repeat it please?—Arnold

Dear Arnold: If the grapes are growing in a patch of poison ivy I don't believe it's worth it.

Multiply by 1000 the trouble you are now having because of your wife's resentment to your first family. You'll then have a vague notion of what life will be like if you all live in the same city. In my opinion, Bub, no grapes are worth it.

Dear Ann Landers: Several of us young married women were discussing a variety of subjects at sewing circle last Wednesday and we wound up in a terrible argument. Can you give us your ideas on this subject?

Is it proper for a mother to nurse her baby in public — say on a bus, a park bench, in a theater or in a restaurant? Two of the girls were vehement in their opinion that only an evil-minded person would think this was wrong. They claim there is no sight more beautiful in all the world than a mother nursing her baby.

Others of us believe that nursing a baby in public is vulgar and only a very ignorant person would do it. How do you feel about this? — Heavy Debate.

Dear Debate: This is not a matter of right or wrong, ignorance or vulgarity — it's a matter of custom.

In our society it is not considered good taste to nurse a baby in a public place.

Dear Ann Landers: My cousin is 40 years of age. She is attractive, well - educated and has a charming personality. Her husband passed away five months ago and she is just beginning to come out of her grief and enjoy living again.

I have three friends (two widowers and a bachelor) who would be just right for her, but I don't know how to go about fixing her up. The problem is that because they all know each other so well these men just can't see the forest for the trees.

How can I get them to take her out without being too obvious? Please give me a hand with this project. — S.A.Q.

Dear S.A.Q.: If you want to ruin the woman's chances for all time, just make her a "project." That will finish her permanently.

It is always a bum idea to try to fix up a widow with men who have known her for years. They are aware that she is alone, and if they're interested, they'll call her with no cues from the peanut gallery.

The best thing you can do for your cousin is to include her in parties as you did when her husband was living.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped self - addressed envelope.

"The Bride's Guide," ANN LANDERS' newest booklet, gives authoritative and complete information on how to plan a wedding. To receive your copy of this comprehensive guide, write to Ann Landers, in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long self - addressed stamped envelope and 35c in coin.

Miss Barfoot, James Crawford Exchange Vows

White chrysanthemums and greenery formed a setting in Liberty Grove Church of God for the wedding of Miss Carolyn Inez Barfoot, and James Everett Crawford, on Friday, November 1. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Russell Barfoot, Cheniere Dam Road, West Monroe and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Dewey Crawford Sr., Winnsboro Road, Monroe.

Rev. Adrial Alexander performed the double ring ceremony following appropriate wedding music played by Mrs. Samuel Dewey Crawford Jr., sister-in-law of the groom, at the piano.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a deep blue street length dress with black veiled pillbox and black suede accessories. Her corsage was of white carnations showered with satin streamers.

Mrs. James Harry Barfoot served as matron of honor and only attendant for her sister-in-law. She wore a pink wool model with black pillbox and black patent accessories and a corsage of blue carnations with matching ribbons.

Serving as best man was James Harry Barfoot, brother of the bride.

Mrs. Barfoot chose for her daughter's wedding an aqua wool dress with black accessories. Mrs. Crawford, mother of the groom, chose a beige suit with cranberry accessories. Both mothers wore corsages of white chrysanthemums.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained with a reception in their home. The bride's table was covered with a white linen cloth and held the tiered pink and white wedding cake and the bowl of pink punch. Mrs. Julius Crawford and Mrs. W. E. Taylor, sister of the groom, served and Mrs. Willie Smith presided over the guest book.

After a wedding trip the couple will be at home on Winnsboro Road. The bride attended West Monroe high school and is a graduate of the American Correspondence School. Mr. Crawford attended Epps high school.

ROMANTIC AS A HARVEST MOON, this fall charmer attracts fashion attention with its demure tapered toe, daringly bared sides and new less-high heel. Will-o'-the-wisp side straps end in a dainty little-girl bow at the heel.

THE LIGHT, BRIGHT LOOK of Fall shows itself to perfection in the clever cutout of this autumn footwear. Crushed kid in a creamy new mushroom truffle shade, forms the smartly perfed upper, resting fashionably on a shapely mid-high heel.

'Less Shoe' Look Vies With Boots For Autumn

Feminine footwear fashions focus on leather this fall, as luxurious new textures enhance deep autumn colors and trim toe shapes. Women's leather shoes remain slim in silhouette, though somewhat shortened at the front end, and lighter in appearance and weight.

The most popular dress styles this fall — boots, pumps and strap shoes — depend on the exquisite finishes of smooth, suede, patent and reptile leather for fashion emphasis.

In tailored shoes, soft suede and finely grained leather step out strongly. Reptile and patent leather are used in combination and as trim on tailored pumps and walking ties.

For flats and casual shoes, brushed leather, waxy leather and large grains are style leaders.

Leather boots, which for several years have been growing in popularity, are easily this season's most interesting fashion news. They run the gamut from high fashion boots — in sleekly smooth, soft suede, gleaming patent and handsome reptile leathers to casual country boots. Set on slim leather soles for town wear and medium leather soles for the suburbs, the boot pleases the eye even as it cradles and protects the foot.

The boot is available this year in every price range with the widest assortment of styles and leather colors in the middle range — and in every height. Ankle - skimming boot - shoes, mid-calf and knee-high boots stand on a variety of thin, shaped heels from mid to very tall heights.

On the other end of the sale, fashion news will be made by a shallower, "less shoe" look in pumps and strap shoes. This lighter look will be introduced first in day time and evening footwear. Tailored pumps will sport narrow throats with either square or crescent toes. The three basic toes — tapered, crescent and square will be found on daytime shoes, usually with matching throat lines.

The "open" or lighter look, which had good success in spring shoes is continuing into the fall. The "open appearance is provided by low vamp straps, D'Orsay cut and side scalloped pumps and an occasional closed toe sling-back. For reasons of comfort and appearance, open-toed shoes are in eclipse.

In color, brown is in all all-purpose range — from gray-brown neutrals in smooth and grained leathers, through mid-brown to rich natural tans in all finishes. Smooth leather in spice tones is used alone or in combination with brushed and grained finishes. Cranberry red, blue and gold are also strong shoe colors this autumn.

'MERRY WIVES'

SALZBURG (AP) — This Austrian festival center isn't overlooking the boxoffice potency of Shakespeare's 400th anniversary next year.

"Merry Wives of Windsor" will be staged by Rudolf Steinboeck, with decor by Lois Egg. The selection supersedes previous tentative choice of "The Tempest" for the 1964 celebration.

The production is to be taken over after exhibit here for a run at the Vienna Burgtheater.

NEW LEAGUE PREXY

NEW YORK (AP) — Herman Bernstein has been elected president of the League of New York Theaters, the organization of Broadway show producers. He succeeds Herman Levin.

Other officials elected are Herman Shumlin, first vice president; Samuel Schwartz, second vice president; Louis Lotito, secretary; and Alfred de Liagre Jr., treasurer.

YOUR PROBLEMS

Troubles Multiply By Mixing Families

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I've been offered a promotion but my wife doesn't want me to accept it because it means moving to a city where my ex-wife and daughter live.

Although our divorce was a bitter one my ex-wife and I are now on friendly terms. We speak on the long distance telephone often about matters of mutual concern. I've been paying stiff alimony and support for eight years but I feel it is my moral obligation and I'm not complaining.

Every year since the divorce I have gone to celebrate my daughter's birthday with her. This provokes annual fireworks from my wife. When I attended my ex-father-in-law's funeral last year my wife was enraged.

You have frequently said in your column that a good wife should do whatever she can to help her husband get ahead. I like your expression "She should go where the grapes grow."

Will you repeat it please?—Arnold

Dear Arnold: If the grapes are growing in a patch of poison ivy I don't believe it's worth it.

Multiply by 1000 the trouble you are now having because of your wife's resentment to your first family. You'll then have a vague notion of what life will be like if you all live in the same city. In my opinion, Bub, no grapes are worth it.

Dear Ann Landers: Several of us young married women were discussing a variety of subjects at sewing circle last Wednesday and we wound up in a terrible argument. Can you give us your ideas on this subject?

Is it proper for a mother to nurse her baby in public — say on a bus, a park bench, in a theater or in a restaurant? Two of the girls were vehement in their opinion that only an evil-minded person would think this was wrong. They claim there is no sight more beautiful in all the world than a mother nursing her baby.

Others of us believe that nursing a baby in public is vulgar and only a very ignorant person would do it. How do you feel about this? — Heavy Debate.

Dear Debate: This is not a matter of right or wrong, ignorance or vulgarity — it's a matter of custom.

In our society it is not considered good taste to nurse a baby in a public place.

Dear Ann Landers: My cousin is 40 years of age. She is attractive, well - educated and has a charming personality. Her husband passed away five months ago and she is just beginning to come out of her grief and enjoy living again.

I have three friends (two widowers and a bachelor) who would be just right for her, but I don't know how to go about fixing her up. The problem is that because they all know each other so well these men just can't see the forest for the trees.

How can I get them to take her out without being too obvious? Please give me a hand with this project. — S.A.Q.

Dear S.A.Q.: If you want to ruin the woman's chances for all time, just make her a "project." That will finish her permanently.

It is always a bum idea to try to fix up a widow with men who have known her for years. They are aware that she is alone, and if they're interested, they'll call her with no cues from the peanut gallery.

The best thing you can do for your cousin is to include her in parties as you did when her husband was living.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped self - addressed envelope.

"The Bride's Guide," ANN LANDERS' newest booklet, gives authoritative and complete information on how to plan a wedding. To receive your copy of this comprehensive guide, write to Ann Landers, in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long self - addressed stamped envelope and 35c in coin.

Miss Barfoot, James Crawford Exchange Vows

White chrysanthemums and greenery formed a setting in Liberty Grove Church of God for the wedding of Miss Carolyn Inez Barfoot, and James Everett Crawford, on Friday, November 1. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Russell Barfoot, Cheniere Dam Road, West Monroe and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Dewey Crawford Sr., Winnsboro Road, Monroe.

Rev. Adrial Alexander performed the double ring ceremony following appropriate wedding music played by Mrs. Samuel Dewey Crawford Jr., sister-in-law of the groom, at the piano.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a deep blue street length dress with black veiled pillbox and black suede accessories. Her corsage was of white carnations showered with satin streamers.

Mrs. James Harry Barfoot served as matron of honor and only attendant for her sister-in-law. She wore a pink wool model with black pillbox and black patent accessories and a corsage of blue carnations with matching ribbons.

Serving as best man was James Harry Barfoot, brother of the bride.

Mrs. Barfoot chose for her daughter's wedding an aqua wool dress with black accessories. Mrs. Crawford, mother of the groom, chose a beige suit with cranberry accessories. Both mothers wore corsages of white chrysanthemums.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained with a reception in their home. The bride's table was covered with a white linen cloth and held the tiered pink and white wedding cake and the bowl of pink punch. Mrs. Julius Crawford and Mrs. W. E. Taylor, sister of the groom, served and Mrs. Willie Smith presided over the guest book.

After a wedding trip the couple will be at home on Winnsboro Road. The bride attended West Monroe high school and is a graduate of the American Correspondence School. Mr. Crawford attended Epps high school.

ROMANTIC AS A HARVEST MOON, this fall charmer attracts fashion attention with its demure tapered toe, daringly bared sides and new less-high heel. Will-o'-the-wisp side straps end in a dainty little-girl bow at the heel.

THE LIGHT, BRIGHT LOOK of Fall shows itself to perfection in the clever cutout of this autumn footwear. Crushed kid in a creamy new mushroom truffle shade, forms the smartly perfed upper, resting fashionably on a shapely mid-high heel.

'Less Shoe' Look Vies With Boots For Autumn

Feminine footwear fashions focus on leather this fall, as luxurious new textures enhance deep autumn colors and trim toe shapes. Women's leather shoes remain slim in silhouette, though somewhat shortened at the front end, and lighter in appearance and weight.

The most popular dress styles this fall — boots, pumps and strap shoes — depend on the exquisite finishes of smooth, suede, patent and reptile leather for fashion emphasis.

In tailored shoes, soft suede and finely grained leather step out strongly. Reptile and patent leather are used in combination and as trim on tailored pumps and walking ties.

For flats and casual shoes, brushed leather, waxy leather and large grains are style leaders.

Leather boots, which for several years have been growing in popularity, are easily this season's most interesting fashion news. They run the gamut from high fashion boots — in sleekly smooth, soft suede, gleaming patent and handsome reptile leathers to casual country boots. Set on slim leather soles for town wear and medium leather soles for the suburbs, the boot pleases the eye even as it cradles and protects the foot.

The boot is available this year in every price range with the widest assortment of styles and leather colors in the middle range — and in every height. Ankle - skimming boot - shoes, mid-calf and knee-high boots stand on a variety of thin, shaped heels from mid to very tall heights.

On the other end of the sale, fashion news will be made by a shallower, "less shoe" look in pumps and strap shoes. This lighter look will be introduced first in day time and evening footwear. Tailored pumps will sport narrow throats with either square or crescent toes. The three basic toes — tapered, crescent and square will be found on daytime shoes, usually with matching throat lines.

The "open" or lighter look, which had good success in spring shoes is continuing into the fall. The "open appearance is provided by low vamp straps, D'Orsay cut and side scalloped pumps and an occasional closed toe sling-back. For reasons of comfort and appearance, open-toed shoes are in eclipse.

In color, brown is in all all-purpose range — from gray-brown neutrals in smooth and grained leathers, through mid-brown to rich natural tans in all finishes. Smooth leather in spice tones is used alone or in combination with brushed and grained finishes. Cranberry red, blue and gold are also strong shoe colors this autumn.

'MERRY WIVES'

SALZBURG (AP) — This Austrian festival center isn't overlooking the boxoffice potency of Shakespeare's 400th anniversary next year.

"Merry Wives of Windsor" will be staged by Rudolf Steinboeck, with decor by Lois Egg. The selection supersedes previous tentative choice of "The Tempest" for the 1964 celebration.

The production is to be taken over after exhibit here for a run at the Vienna Burgtheater.

Boudoir Look For 1963 Is Imaginative, Restful

The sterotyped bedroom is definitely dead. The boudoir look for '63 is imaginative, restful and very individualistic.

Decorating trends encourage the image of the bedroom as truly a private retreat from the hurrying world. Comfortable chairs, soft lighting, writing desks, tables for cards, sewing or quiet meals are not uncommon in master bedrooms and further the invitation to relax.

The boundless possibilities of wallpaper, color and fabric work wonders in an otherwise dull bedroom. For example, instant drama and interest comes with the use of an abbreviated canopy, used just over the top of the bed, by fabric covered screens, pull up shade rollers over storage shelves or perhaps a fabric covered closet.

Bedding alone today offers a wide range of choices, from day beds, trundle beds, and testers to the popular king and queen sizes. Mechanical marvels allow beds to swing apart for use as twin beds or stay together for the one big bed look.

Headboards are often highly decorative this year and many times as functional as a small efficiency apartment with a place for books, bar, lighting, etc. Many come with reversible panels for a flip-of-the-wrist decor change. People who like to read in bed can indulge themselves with a headboard that mechanically tilts.

The Home Furnishings Industry Committee reports that many manufacturers are offering outstanding collections of juvenile furniture for the bedroom that grows with the child.

Wise buying may mean that the replacement of a crib for standard or youth bed will be the only major bedroom purchase. The light and whimsical look desired for the child's room can be easily achieved through bright colors, gay prints and wallpaper.

Organization For Mothers Of Twins Set

Organizational meeting of a Mothers of Twins Club is scheduled for Tuesday, November 12 in the Louis Locke Room of Ouachita Parish Library, North 18th, at 7:30 p.m.

Spearheading plans for the organization are Mrs. Paul Cowan Jr., Monroe, and Mrs. Harold McCleskey, West Monroe.

Mothers of Twins is a national organization, informative as well as social, Mrs. Cowan said. She is a former resident of Houston, where there are four clubs affiliated with the national organization.

Phi Mu Mothers Set Open House In December

An open house event for mothers of new Phi Mu pledges was planned by the executive committee of the Phi Mu Mothers club when it met Tuesday night in the home of Mrs. James Loker, 2212 Island Drive.

Mrs. Loker, president, conducted the business meeting during which the group voted on a constitution and by-laws for the club. The open house for mothers of new pledges is planned for December 14 to be held at the home of Mrs. George Walker, 221 Chauvin. Mrs. Douglas was named to serve as chairman of the open house.

Those attending the planning meeting were Mrs. White, Mrs. Frank Harmon, Mrs. George Walker and Mrs. Loker.

Kitchens Get New Look In Modern Decor

By BETTY PEPIS

Backgrounds as well as foregrounds are becoming increasingly important in the modern kitchen. With the new furniture look of today's cabinets the fresh disguises and camouflages of up-to-date equipment, and the insistent attention to the attractiveness of accessories like pots, pans and even pot holders, this was to be expected.

This inevitable interest in walls, floors, windows and even ceilings begins from the bottom up. One of the most intriguing floor treatments seen of late was in the home of New York interior designer, Howard Perry Rothberg. Large squares of red quarry tile were separated by two inch strips of wood. The same material was used to pave the counter tops around the sink and charcoal barbeque and its terra cotta tone blended well with the old brick used on one wall and to pave the island cooking area.

Old brick, as a matter of fact, is only one material appearing on the walls of the new cozy country kitchens. Another is stone. Still another is wood paneling, in some cases, old and retrieved from an old barn. These rough materials provide a delightfully warm contrast to the slick, polished look of appliances and negate their surgical look.

Grass cloth is another wall covering lately espoused by designers, mostly because it blends well with the beige, brown and natural look of wood cabinets now being used. An alternate to it and preferable in many ways is the plastic version of this Japanese material. Both the original and synthetic will last long and shed dirt, but the man-made variety is easier to keep clean day-by-day.

Window treatments are also undergoing a change. Frilly curtains are giving way to other window treatments which blend better with these natural materials and still control the light. Natural matchstick blinds hung either as draw draperies or pulldown window shades are one popular solution. New window shade materials like plastic coated burlap are another. Glass louvres which control ventilation as well as light have shown up in an occasional modern house; in one unusual example, metal frets at the windows held potted plants of herbs which thrived in the sunlight.

Even the ceiling comes into play. In a large provincial kitchen recently viewed, the ceiling was prepared in a provincial pattern which matched the curtains. It gave a warm intimate look to a room that would otherwise have seemed overwhelmingly oversized.

MR. AND MRS. ZACHARY T. RICE IV

Rice-Keeble Vows Read In West Monroe

Highland Presbyterian Church in West Monroe was scene of the ceremony which united in marriage Miss Jayne Ann Keeble and Zachary T. (Rusty) Rice IV. Rev. Earl Wiggins officiated at the exchange of vows on Sunday, October 27.

The bride is the daughter of Major and Mrs. C. R. Keeble of Lockbourne Air Force Base Ohio, and Mr. Rice is the son of Mrs. Evelyn Rice Hargus of West Monroe.

Miss Jeannie Nolen, cousin of the bridegroom, was the bride's only attendant and M. L. Hargus served as best man.

Out-of-town guests were Mrs. L. W. Christopher, Mrs. H. D. Bowers, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Cook, Miss Nancy Cook and Billy Cook, of El Dorado, Ark.

The couple has established a home at 215 King Avenue in Monroe. Mr. Rice has just returned here after four years with the United States Air Force.

Miss Christian, Fiance Plan Natchez Vows

The couple will exchange vows in a Nuptial Mass on November 19 at 11 a.m. in St. Mary's Catholic Cathedral of Natchez.

Miss Christian, a graduate of Natchez - Adams County high school, attended Centenary College in Shreveport and is now enrolled in the Shreveport-Draughn School of Business.

Mr. Cook, a graduate of Texas high school, Texarkana, Tex. is a senior pre-dental student at Centenary College in Shreveport.

Why Grow Old

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Some men seem to think that they should have their cake and eat it too, and evidently some men do! This is a misleading statement because I like men.

However, I received many letters from women following the column I wrote about the problems of the mother who works. Considering the great number of women who work today, this article naturally touched many of them.

Most women who have jobs away from home do so in order to improve the standard of living for the family, to help out children through college or to provide for the older members of the family. They are not working for personal luxuries.

I have always thought that it is extremely questionable as to whether a mother of young children should take a job, unless the financial situation is desperate. At least the decision should be weighed carefully by her and her husband. Values should be considered realistically. There are some women who are just not geared temperamentally to housework and the patient 24 hour supervision of small children. In this case, I think that the entire family is often happier if the mother works and employs some help with the household chores.

The letters I received were not bitter or self-pitying, but rather a bit discouraged, bewildered and tired. The thread which ran through them showed very clearly that some men do not known which era they are living in or they expect the benefits of two ways of life.

They enjoy the larger income of two checks each month instead of one, but still cling to ideas, lovely as they are, which are entirely unrealistic in such a situation. Some men evidently expect the little woman to have the comfortable slippers waiting the paper on the table by the favorite chair and stars in her eyes even if she has put in as many hours in an office as he has and was up half the night with a sick child.

Such loving and thoughtful attentions are the natural attitudes of any real woman and she often accomplishes them regardless of fatigue. However she herself could use some of the same. When a wife works, it should be 50-50 at home as well as on the job.

Unless this is true the woman is carrying too great a burden. Remember, no matter how eager a husband is to help at home, the wife will still have many more responsibilities than he. Just because of the nature of things there are many obligations which she alone can take care of.

Rice-Keeble Vows Read In West Monroe

Highland Presbyterian Church in West Monroe was scene of the ceremony which united in marriage Miss Jayne Ann Keeble and Zachary T. (Rusty) Rice IV. Rev. Earl Wiggins officiated at the exchange of vows on Sunday, October 27.

The bride is the daughter of Major and Mrs. C. R. Keeble of Lockbourne Air Force Base Ohio, and Mr. Rice is the son of Mrs. Evelyn Rice Hargus of West Monroe.

Miss Jeannie Nolen, cousin of the bridegroom, was the bride's only attendant and M. L. Hargus served as best man.

Out-of-town guests were Mrs. L. W. Christopher, Mrs. H. D. Bowers, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Cook, Miss Nancy Cook and Billy Cook, of El Dorado, Ark.

The couple has established a home at 215 King Avenue in Monroe. Mr. Rice has just returned here after four years with the United States Air Force.

Miss Christian, Fiance Plan Natchez Vows

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Christian of Natchez announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Donna Lynn Christian to Stephen C. Cook Jr. He is the son of Mrs. S. E. Templeton of Shreveport and Stephen C. Cook Sr., Wichita, Kansas.

The couple will exchange vows in a Nuptial Mass on November 19 at 11 a.m. in St. Mary's Catholic Cathedral of Natchez.

Miss Christian, a graduate of Natchez - Adams County high school, attended Centenary College in Shreveport and is now enrolled in the Shreveport-Draughn School of Business.

Mr. Cook, a graduate of Texas high school, Texarkana, Tex. is a senior pre-dental student at Centenary College in Shreveport.

Why Grow Old

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Some men seem to think that they should have their cake and eat it too, and evidently some men do! This is a misleading statement because I like men.

However, I received many letters from women following the column I wrote about the problems of the mother who works. Considering the great number of women who work today, this article naturally touched many of them.

Most women who have jobs away from home do so in order to improve the standard of living for the family, to help out children through college or to provide for the older members of the family. They are not working for personal luxuries.

I have always thought that it is extremely questionable as to whether a mother of young children should take a job, unless the financial situation is desperate. At least the decision should be weighed carefully by her and her husband. Values should be considered realistically. There are some women who are just not geared temperamentally to housework and the patient 24 hour supervision of small children. In this case, I think that the entire family is often happier if the mother works and employs some help with the household chores.

The letters I received were not bitter or self-pitying, but rather a bit discouraged, bewildered and tired. The thread which ran through them showed very clearly that some men do not known which era they are living in or they expect the benefits of two ways of life.

They enjoy the larger income of two checks each month instead of one, but still cling to ideas, lovely as they are, which are entirely unrealistic in such a situation. Some men evidently expect the little woman to have the comfortable slippers waiting the paper on the table by the favorite chair and stars in her eyes even if she has put in as many hours in an office as he has and was up half the night with a sick child.

Such loving and thoughtful attentions are the natural attitudes of any real woman and she often accomplishes them regardless of fatigue. However she herself could use some of the same. When a wife works, it should be 50-50 at home as well as on the job.

Unless this is true the woman is carrying too great a burden. Remember, no matter how eager a husband is to help at home, the wife will still have many more responsibilities than he. Just because of the nature of things there are many obligations which she alone can take care of.

MILITARY INFLUENCE — Autumn Haze, Emba natural brown mink and the most desired fur in the world, has been styled into this great coat adapted from Marines' dress uniform. Designer Phyllis of Max Bogen has placed two fur epaulets at the shoulders, formed a close neckline and added high-placed buttons to this elegant coat.

MINK JUMPER — The trend toward casual styling in furs is seen in this jumper of Diadem, Emba natural pale brown mink, designed by Fredrica. The luxurious pelts have been fashioned horizontally in this easy-going overblouse, which was designed to be worn over slacks, skirts or for evening over a long dinner gown.

BELTED FURS FOR FALL — Belts are fashion points in fall furs. In this coat of Tourmaline, Emba natural pale beige mink, chiffon has been stitched onto leather to form the belt, then flows to hem of coat. Wide shawl collar and slightly squared shoulders of coat by Revillon are hallmarks of this season's furs.

RING AROUND

NEW YORK (AP) — Three inbound Broadway musicals are involved in an unplanned ring-around of directors.

Because of a delay in production plans, Gower Champion stepped out of the staging assignment for "I Picked a Daisy," that had been planned as a creative collaboration of Richard Rodgers and Alan Jay Lerner. The latter is now working on a revised version with another partner, Burton Lane. Bob Fosse was signed to direct.

Garson Kanin has taken over "Funny Girl," which Fosse had been nominated to handle previously. And Champion is at work on "Hello, Dolly."

MIX, MATCH

There is a new trend to suits with jackets that don't match skirts, like a red jacket with black and white tweed skirt, and black blouse.

Supple Seal Shapes Coats

Once, the ultimate luxury in fur coats was Alaskan seal. Replaced by mink, it all but died out. Now seal is back, shaping those supple, fitted coats that are the news in fur styling.

Paris is partly responsible for the revival of seal in the Russian and Polish influence prominent in several collections. This has brought back the shaped coat with high collar and fur hem border. It's done in supple black-dyed seal with pastel mink for the border, sometimes the cuffs as well.

Another version, in double-breasted front fit has a sable boa to turn a day coat into a dress coat. Seal has the versatility of mink, looks new again in its soft, silky finish.

FIRST SEASON SUCCESS

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Tyrone Guthrie Theater company has completed its first season in the black.

A report by the management lists total income of $721,941 and net revenue after deduction of expenses of $6,933.

During the May 7-Sept. 22 run, 159 performances were witnessed by 193,000 spectators, giving an average attendance of 77.7 per cent of capacity. The most popular play was "The Three Sisters," followed in order by "The Miser," "Death of a Salesman" and "Hamlet."

Elegant Furs Have Sporty Look For '63

Most elegant way of all to look sportive for fall and winter is in fur fashions. Country casualness and city sophistication meet to perfection in curly furs, fluffy furs, flat furs.

Mink continues to hold the favored position and the new season brings the happy news that this luxury fur is somewhat less costly. Mostly, mink is utterly elegant, sultry and sophisticated, but it too has its sportive moments, as in a walking length coat detailed like a sailor's pea jacket.

Out of the recent showings of furs for Fall and Winter, 1963, came one outstanding fashion fact: furs have gone casual. No longer are stylists creating just the "classic" look in luxury furs, they've leaned over backwards to show that fur can be "sporty" and still be elegant.

Leading the fur fashion parade is mink, especially American - bred Emba mink in the many natural colors. Designers have styled these elegant furs into sweaters — some with ribbed wool or mohair trim — into parkas, into sleeveless tunics or vests.

Jackets, too, take on the casual look, with perky notched collars, belts of mink or leather or fabric.

One designer has styled Tourmaline, Emba natural pale beige mink, into a full-length coat with a semi-full shape, featuring a rounded notched collar, narrow sleeves and has added a belt of stitched beige chiffon, which ties and then cascades over the luscious fur.

Still another coat, in Cerulean, Emba natural blue mink, is double-breased and slim, with a notched collar, navy blue leather buttons and calf belt.

Perhaps the height of this casually elegant look are the at-home furs. Designed for home entertaining is a shirt of Azurene, Emba natural blue - grey mink, with gathered sleeves and two patch pockets, and for the most glamorous hostess, a sleeveless, floor - length coat of Jamine, Emba pure white mink, slit to the waist at the sides and sashed and lined in pale green taffeta.

White Kid Gloves Back

One of the strong impressions "Little Women" leaves on a modern girl reader is the great fuss everybody makes about gloves. Long, buttoned white kid gloves were more necessary to a lady in those days than a whole new dress. In fact, she could get by with an old gown, but not with old gloves.

Now the white kids are back again. The return of long evening dresses has also revived long white kid gloves. Not so many have all these buttons any more. In fact, instead of indicating length by "24-button," makers call them opera gloves.

However, if the use of above elbow white kids come in strong, the buttons may come back. After all, it was easier in "Little Women" days to open enough buttons to slip the hand out for eating than to take off the whole thing, as we do now.

Ensemble Look Featured In Fall, Winter Knits

Knits - the happiest combination of fashion and comfort to grace any women's wardrobe - feature several new designs for fall and winter wear.

The ensemble look is important, and consequently, almost all suits are three piece. The pleated skirt is a perky addition to the new knits, and the dress and coat ensemble has renewed vitality. The dress is usually two piece, the coat an interesting three quarter length.

Knits have a softer look — still in the classic tradition but with more grace of line. One new suit development, the sleeveless jacket, exemplifies the softer look and is particularly attractive in knits because of their draping facility. The V neck cardigan is another exponent of the softened look; for a really striking effect, add a turtle neck sweater underneath. Even the neckline shaping of the open jacket is gently curved.

Texture and tweed effects rate attention too. In boucle or raised jacquard knits, they add fashion dimension to suits from sportive to more conservative and less casual styles. Fabric interest continues with the "sweater" look in which the jacket or outer sweater is patterned, contrasting with the solid under sweater and skirt.

Contrast in general is found in most knit suits. Usually it takes the form of a color edging the jacket. It may also be expressed in buttons or it may be the blouse which is a different color. This brings us to the fashion spectrum of fall knits. In the spotlight are loden green, gray, black and white, cranberry and pumpkin.

There is one point in construction which should be mentioned and that is the elasticized waist. It eliminates many fit problems thereby making knits possible for many more women.

Hatred For Housework Pays Off In Cash For Heloise

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following story by Olga Curtis, Woman's Editor of the Denver Post, appeared in the Sunday "Contemporary," magazine section of that paper. It is one of many feature stories written about Heloise Cruse and perhaps the best dealing with Heloise's life at home.

By OLGA CURTIS

Ring a certain doorbell here and a woman in a purple muumuu with hair to match opens the door, barefooted.

"I'm Heloise," she says. "Come right on in and take off your shoes."

And that's how you begin a weekend with Heloise, the 112-pound Texas dynamo who's made her hatred for housework pay off to the tune of $100,000 a year.

I just spent that weekend with Heloise, and it was a little like living with a friendly tornado. Heloise talked continuously, laughed a lot and cried a little.

But in her own pet phrase, "I hope to smoke a pickle" if she didn't convince me that she tests each and every hint you read daily and writes it herself, too.

"They're calling me a celebrity now, but how I hate that word," Heloise says ruefully. "All it means is that when I go to a party somebody asks me how to get out spots. Well, ma'am, I hope to smoke a pickle if I ever planned on a career.

"All I ever had in mind when I was a girl was to get married."

And since Heloise does exactly what she takes a mind to, her success story starts with matrimony.

It was the beginning of April 1942, when a pretty auburn-haired comptometer operator named Heloise Bowles of Ft. Worth met a tall aviator cadet, Marshal H. Cruse of Rosebud, Tex., on a blind date. They got married on May 4, 1942, which happened to be her birthday.

When World War Two ended, Captain Cruse decided to make the Air Force his career, and Heloise began the travels every service wife knows. They lived in Nanking, China; in Kyushu and Honshu, Japan; spent three years in Waco, Texas, and four in Washington, D. C., and in 1958 were assigned to Honolulu.

That's where Heloise became a columnist.

"I started on a dare," she recalls. "I was talking at a cocktail party about how I could help women with their housework if I had just two inches of space in a newspaper, and some smart guy said: 'Who do you think you are, Walter Winchell? You can't even get a job as a cub reporter without a college degree! "So of course I went out and got the job just to show him."

It's hard to tell now who was more surprised at the effect of the new column in the Honolulu Advertiser — the newspaper or columnist Heloise. But her first article appeared Feb. 16 1959, and almost at once it became obvious that Heloise wouldn't be able to keep the promise she'd made her husband never to make more than $599 a year—so that she'd still qualify as a tax-deductible wife.

Heloise, whose column today is printed in 400 newspapers, won't say exactly how much she makes, but admits it's around $100,000 a year. Everything left over after taxes and expenses gets socked away: The family lives on the salary Lieutenant Colonel Cruse draws — about $12,000 a year.

"I put all my loot into trust funds," says Heloise. "One for my husband and me, one for our two children.

"It's a nest-egg instinct, and I've always had it. My very first check when I got my first job at 19 was $13.50 — and I put 10 per cent of that in the bank. It's still in the bank."

When you walk into Heloise's home, therefore, it's more typical of an officer's family than of a high-priced columnist.

The Cruses, who moved to Arlington when Colonel Cruse was assigned to the Pentagon have a three-bedroom, $300-a-month apartment in a huge housing development overlooking the Potomac River. The decor is Oriental, a style Heloise has loved ever since their China and Japan residence, but it's home-made Oriental.

"All the beautiful things I brought back burned in a fire in 1957," Heloise laments. "So we just made copies out of packing crates."

In typical Heloise fashion, the packing crates were transformed into black-lacquered tables, commodes and chests. The black furniture contrasts with beige carpeting and drapes in the living room, dining room and master bedroom. The second bedroom belongs to Heloise daughter, Ponce (pronounced "Pahnsee") and is decorated mostly with a TV set and the clutter only a teen-ager can achieve. Heloise's son, Louis, is home only on holidays. So the third bedroom is Heloise's office, and it looks like a mailman's nightmare.

Heloise averages from 7,000 to 20,000 letters a week from readers, and letters are piled up on the office floor, on the desks, up the walls, on the tops of cabinets and in cartons standing one on top of the other.

"I had to hire a man to do nothing but open and sort letters," said Heloise, wading through the stacks. "I try to read then all but I'm always a week behind. I wish you'd explain that's why people don't get immediate answers. There's a week to get to the letters, then I have to test ideas — maybe another week — then I write a column and send it to the syndicate, and it's another 18 days before it's printed.

"I'm supposed to stay three weeks ahead on columns but even with three secretaries and five dictaphones I'm always just getting things done at the last minute."

Heloise works the way she talks, rapidly and continually. In the two days I spent with her, I seldom had to ask a question but gained enough information to write a book. Here's some of it.

Heloise was born May 4, 1919, the first of identical twin daughters. As she puts it, "I beat Louise by five minutes." Louise is now Mrs. Woodrow Matlock of Houston, Tex., and has a 14-year-old son. Heloise's younger brother, Robert Bowles, lives in Ft. Worth, as do her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Bowles. Her father is a retired garage operator, and not, says Heloise vehemently, " a millionaire or anything like that."

Heloise attended Polytechnic High in Ft. Worth and went to business college. She worked less than a year before she married Cruse, and spent most of her married life despising what she calls "the labor of housework."

"I think housework is the reason most women go to work in an office," she says. "Just so they can get a kind word from the boss. Nobody ever compliments you on making the bed real nice, though you have to make that bed day after day. The only time a man compliments his wife is maybe after a good meal — sometimes he'll say 'thank you' to a waitress for a good cup of coffee but not to his wife."

After better than 20 years of housework, Heloise's pet hates are 1. making the bed, 2. ironing, 3. scrubbing pots and pans. But she likes cooking and sewing, the "creative parts of housework," and says:

"If I ever get real poor, I'll take a job with some rich woman as a cook so I can keep using real butter and eggs and cream. You have to have good ingredients for good food."

Ever since the success of her column, however, Heloise hasn't had much time for cooking. She cooks dinner for her husband and daughter every night, and likes to turn out a good Sunday dinner.

For instance, we sat down to pot roast simmered in coffee ("it makes the cheap cuts tastier"), hot rolls, green peas, carrots, rice souffle, cranberry sauce and milk — all prepared and served by Heloise personally.

We said "Grace" holding hands, and then ate; everybody had second helpings except Heloise, who insists she's "fat" although she measures 34-27-34 for her height of five-feet-two.

Heloise loves muumuus and has a whole closet-ful of them in rainbow colors, but she hates shoes. On warm days she wanders around barefooted; cold days her feet are encased in knitted "foot mitts" sent by an admiring reader.

And her hair is purple, or blue, or green, or pink—depending on which hair spray she's squirted on. It's really gray and attractive, but Heloise thinks she looks better with purple hair. Her eyes are teal blue and very bright, but astigmatic; most of the time Heloise has a pair of magnifying half-glasses perched on the end of her nose. Underneath the glasses and the purple hair is a very good-looking face in repose, but it's seldom in repose.

Heloise is the kind of woman who'd make a terrible poker player; every emotion she feels gushes out like Old Faithful. When she read me a letter from an elderly reader who was in trouble, she burst into tears.

By contrast, Heloise's husband and daughter are as placid as mashed potatoes.

Colonel Cruse, a big man built to six-foot-one scale, has brown eyes, thinning brown hair and an air of resignation. "Mike," as his wife calls him, hasn't had much peace and quiet since Heloise became famous but he takes such things as laundry in the deep freeze and smoke pots on the dining table in stride.

"Heloise always has been an extrovert," he says. "She loves to talk to everyone she meets. If we go to a party she may wind up in the kitchen talking to the cook or she may decide to bring home one of the guests so she can get the spots off his tie.

"I'm part of her test kitchen. She tries all her exotic recipes on me and then asks me to guess what I ate. I remember one night she gave me apple pie and then told me it was really made out of crackers.

"Ever since she started writing, it's been never a dull moment, but I think I like it. In the Air Force all we ever talk is flying and promotion and assignments and retirement. Heloise's column sure has made us meet the outside world, and all the new people are interesting.

"Of course some of my fellow officers tease me about it, but most men say they envy me and they wish their wives could so something, like Heloise."

Ponce, whose real name is Kiah Michelle after an ancestor who was Hezekiah Michael, takes things even more calmly. She simply ignores the goings-on because she and her friends have more interesting things to consider: like getting away with wearing lipstick, boys, TV and homework.

Ponce spent most of the week-end stretched out on either the sofa or the floor, eyes glued to her "personal, private" TV set. She watched old movies and complained she'd seen them all before, but interrupted her viewing only to eat up three plates of fudge.

Colonel Cruse, meanwhile, was glued to the other TV set, watching sports.

And Heloise relaxed by watching the family's third TV set, in her bedroom, dictating letters and reading mail at the same time. This is her "working routine," which starts most days after her husband goes to work.

"I've got Mike trained to wake up solo," she explains. "He gets up at 6 a.m. and gets his own orange juice and coffee. Then he wakes up Ponce at 7 and they have sweet rolls or pancakes together. He wakes me up when he leaves for the Pentagon at 7:45. My first secretary comes in at 8."

Heloise gets Ponce off to Oak Ridge School at 9 a.m., throws a bathrobe over her nightie and works in her bare feet, usually walking back and forth between bedroom and office, till about 10. Then she gets dressed and goes into her kitchen to start testing.

The pink kitchen in the apartment makes Heloise furious every time she sees it, which is about every 10 minutes.

"Look at it!" cried Heloise, slamming a cupboard door. "No space for a freezer, so we have to stick the freezer in Ponce's bedroom. Steel cabinets, which means you can't put in cup hooks. Cupboards so tall only a six-foot woman could reach them. The dishwasher is set so it bangs the door, and those shelves. . . well, ma'am, I hope to smoke a pickle if this isn't a typical kitchen designed by some man who never did a lick of cooking!"

Heloise has tried to remodel her kitchen within the limits set by the landlord: she's turned the broom closet, for instance, into a pantry with shelves sized to can heights.

"Who needs a broom closet in the kitchen?" she asks. "You don't vacuum the kitchen. But just try telling that to those builders!"

Each shelf has a label crayoned in front: "fruit," "green vegetables," "crackers," etc. Heloise stocks her pantry like a supermarket because she hates shopping.

"I'm a stockpiler," she admits. "I freeze everything, and I store canned goods by the dozen. I don't like to go to a store more than once a month."

A session in the kitchen usually puts Heloise in the mood to rest up, so from about 1 to 3 p.m. daily she's in bed with her dictaphone. The three secretaries leave about 4, and Heloise gets dinner for her family ready by 6 p.m. After that, Ponce is exiled to homework, and Heloise and Mike go through some of those thousands of letters.

"Men have the best work-easing ideas," he says, and in a way, Heloise agrees.

"Most women make their own work," she says seriously. "And they work too hard as a result. Take the question of just reading the manufacturer's instructions — women don't, and so they do things like wax ceramic tile, which doesn't need waxing at all. That's why women need to be told how to avoid extra work, because they keep making work for themselves."

One of Heloise's simplest suggestions for avoiding work is to swap it. She hates ironing, for example, so she swaps with a neighbor who doesn't mind ironing but who hates sewing, which Heloise loves.

The work - swapping routine worked so well in Honolulu that Heloise had all her neighbors lined up as testers for column ideas. But in Arlington, she relies more on information given by government and industry bureaus.

"I haven't done too much socializing here," she explains. "It's so cold I just hate to budge. My dream of heaven is someplace warm, like Texas, and that's where were going when Mike retires."

Colonel Cruse, who holds an M.A., is taking night courses in mathematics with an eye to the future. He hopes to become a mathematics teacher when he retires from the Air Force.

When that day comes, though, both he and Heloise may be so hooked on household hints that they'll work together on that.

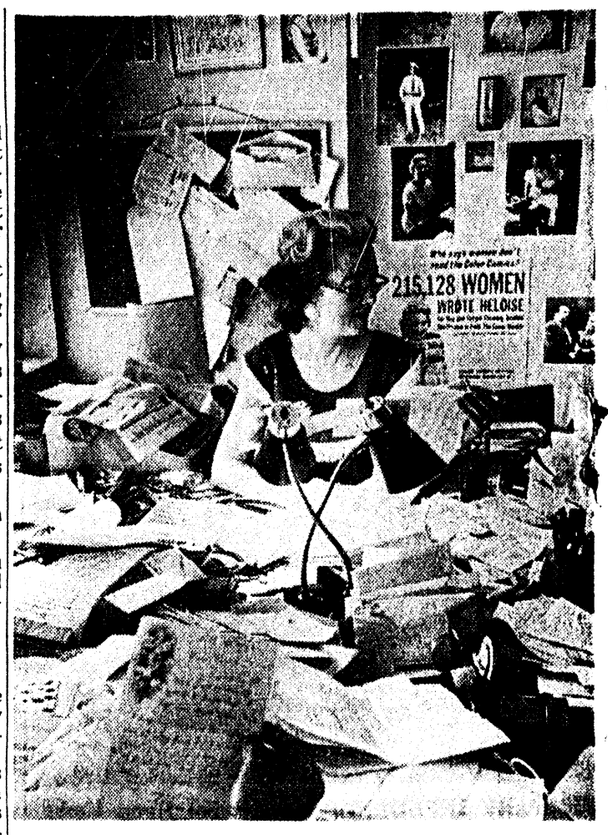
"At first I used to complain when I'd wake up at 3 a.m. and find Heloise out of bed and stitching up carpet ends to make a rug for the kitchen," Colonel Cruse says. 'But now she's got me doing it. Found myself digging out grapefruit seeds one midnight to see if they'd sprout in paper the way one reader wrote."

Such ideas as how to sprout grapefruit, interestingly enough, runs a poor second to cleaning questions in Heloise's mail.

"I get two questions every day," says Heloise. "The first is how to get spots off clothes, especially that line on a man's white shirt collar. Second most frequently asked question is what to do with burnt pans."

Heloise has only one question she'd like the answer to.

The question is, "How do you get the freckles off freckled knees?" and the knees in question belong to Heloise.



WITH GLASSES characteristically well down on her nose, Heloise goes about the business of getting out her daily column in her home-office in Washington. She has the uncanny knack of knowing where anything is amidst what she herself describes as "hopeless clutter."

MEMBERSHIP FEE

NEW YORK (AP) — The Phoenix Theater is trying a new subscription plan for its off - Broadway production season.

Instead of having supporters prebuy tickets to all shows, a flat membership fee ($4) entitles them to obtain cut-rate admission to any production during the first two weeks of its run.

Norris Houghton, codirector, said the method's value is flexibility — "we are not limited to a specific number of productions nor are we tied to a precommitted engagement of specific length."

Hatred For Housework Pays Off In Cash For Heloise

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following story by Olga Curtis, Woman's Editor of the Denver Post, appeared in the Sunday "Contemporary," magazine section of that paper. It is one of many feature stories written about Heloise Cruse and perhaps the best dealing with Heloise's life at home.

By OLGA CURTIS

Ring a certain doorbell here and a woman in a purple muu-muu with hair to match opens the door, barefooted.

"I'm Heloise," she says, "Come right on in and take off your shoes."

And that's how you begin a weekend with Heloise, the 112-pound Texas dynamo who's made her hatred for housework pay off to the tune of $100,000 a year.

I just spent that weekend with Heloise, and it was a little like living with a friendly tornado. Heloise talked continuously, laughed a lot and cried a little.

But in her own pet phrase, "I hope to smoke a pickle" if she didn't convince me that she tests each and every hint you read daily and writes it herself, too.

"They're calling me a celebrity now, but how I hate that word," Heloise says ruefully. "All it means is that when I go to a party somebody asks me how to get out spots. Well, ma'am, I hope to smoke a pickle if I ever planned on a career.

"All I ever had in mind when I was a girl was to get married."

And since Heloise does exactly what she takes a mind to, her success story starts with matrimony.

"I'm part of her test kitchen. She tries all her exotic recipes on me and then asks me to guess what I ate. I remember one night she gave me apple pie and then told me it was really made out of crackers.

"Ever since she started writing, it's been never a dull moment, but I think I like it. In the Air Force all we ever talk is flying and promotion and assignments and retirement. Heloise's column sure has made us meet the outside world, and all the new people are interesting.

"Of course some of my fellow officers tease me about it, but most men say they envy me and they wish their wives could so something, like Heloise."

Ponce, whose real name is Kiah Michelle after an ancestor who was Hezekiah Michael, takes things even more calmly. She simply ignores the goings-on because she and her friends have more interesting things to consider: like getting away with wearing lipstick, boys, TV and homework.

Ponce spent most of the week-end stretched out on either the sofa or the floor, eyes glued to her "personal, private" TV set. She watched old movies and complained she'd seen them all before, but interrupted her viewing only to eat up three plates of fudge.

Colonel Cruse, meanwhile, was glued to the other TV set, watching sports.

And Heloise relaxed by watching the family's third TV set, in her bedroom, dictating letters and reading mail at the same time. This is her "working routine," which starts most days after her husband goes to work.

"I've got Mike trained to wake up solo," she explains. "He gets up at 6 a.m. and gets his own orange juice and coffee. Then he wakes up Ponce at 7 and they have sweet rolls or pancakes together. He wakes me up when he leaves for the Pentagon at 7:45. My first secretary comes in at 8."

Heloise gets Ponce off to Oak Ridge School at 9 a.m., throws a bathrobe over her nightie and works in her bare feet, usually walking back and forth between bedroom and office, till about 10. Then she gets dressed and goes into her kitchen to start testing.

The pink kitchen in the apartment makes Heloise furious every time she sees it, which is about every 10 minutes.

"Look at it!" cried Heloise, slamming a cupboard door. "No space for a freezer, so we have to stick the freezer in Ponce's bedroom. Steel cabinets, which means you can't put in cup hooks. Cupboards so tall only a six-foot woman could reach them. The dishwasher is set so it bangs the door, and those shelves. . . well, ma'am, I hope to smoke a pickle if this isn't a typical kitchen designed by some man who never did a lick of cooking!"

Heloise has tried to remodel her kitchen within the limits set by the landlord: she's turned the broom closet, for instance, into a pantry with shelves sized to can heights.

"Who needs a broom closet in the kitchen?" she asks. "You don't vacuum the kitchen. But just try telling that to those builders!"

Each shelf has a label crayoned in front: "fruit," "green vegetables," "crackers," etc. Heloise stocks her pantry like a supermarket because she hates shopping.

"I'm a stockpiler," she admits. "I freeze everything, and I store canned goods by the dozen. I don't like to go to a store more than once a month."

A session in the kitchen usually puts Heloise in the mood to rest up, so from about 1 to 3 p.m. daily she's in bed with her dictaphone. The three secretaries leave about 4, and Heloise gets dinner for her family ready by 6 p.m. After that, Ponce is exiled to homework, and Heloise and Mike go through some of those thousands of letters.

"Men have the best work-easing ideas," he says, and in a way, Heloise agrees.

"Most women make their own work," she says seriously. "And they work too hard as a result. Take the question of just reading the manufacturer's instructions — women don't, and so they do things like wax ceramic tile, which doesn't need waxing at all. That's why women need to be told how to avoid extra work, because they keep making work for themselves."

One of Heloise's simplest suggestions for avoiding work is to swap it. She hates ironing, for example, so she swaps with a neighbor who doesn't mind ironing but who hates sewing, which Heloise loves.

The work - swapping routine worked so well in Honolulu that Heloise had all her neighbors lined up as testers for column ideas. But in Arlington, she relies more on information given by government and industry bureaus.

"I haven't done too much socializing here," she explains. "It's so cold I just hate to budge. My dream of heaven is someplace warm, like Texas, and that's where were going when Mike retires."

Colonel Cruse, who holds an M.A., is taking night courses in mathematics with an eye to the future. He hopes to become a mathematics teacher when he retires from the Air Force.

When that day comes, though, both he and Heloise may be so hooked on household hints that they'll work together on that.

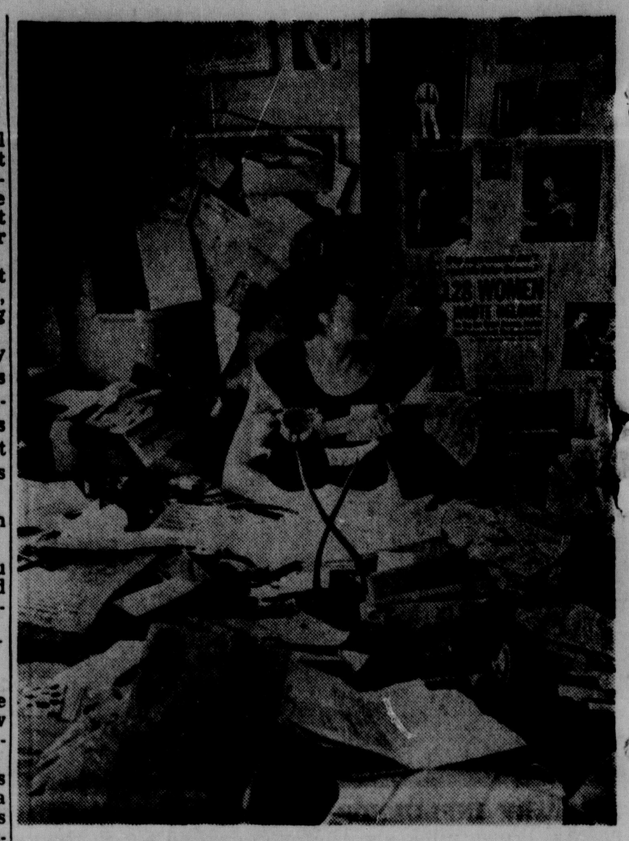
"At first I used to complain when I'd wake up at 3 a.m. and find Heloise out of bed and stitching up carpet ends to make a rug for the kitchen," Colonel Cruse says. 'But now she's got me doing it. Found myself digging out grapefruit seeds one midnight to see if they'd sprout in paper the way one reader wrote."

Such ideas as how to sprout grapefruit, interestingly enough, runs a poor second to cleaning questions in Heloise's mail.

"I get two questions every day," says Heloise. "The first is how to get spots off clothes, especially that line on a man's white shirt collar. Second most frequently asked question is what to do with burnt pans."

Heloise has only one question she'd like the answer to.

The question is, "How do you get the freckles off freckled knees?" and the knees in question belong to Heloise.



WITH GLASSES characteristically well down on her nose, Heloise goes about the business of getting out her daily column in her home-office in Washington. She has the uncanny knack of knowing where anything is amidst what she herself describes as "hopeless clutter."

MEMBERSHIP FEE

NEW YORK (AP) — The Phoenix Theater is trying a new subscription plan for its off - Broadway production season.

Instead of having supporters prebuy tickets to all shows, a flat membership fee ($4) entitles them to obtain cut-rate admission to any production during the first two weeks of its run.

Norris Houghton, codirector, said the method's value is flexibility — "we are not limited to a specific number of productions nor are we tied to a precommitted engagement of specific length."

CAMERA Angles

By IRVING DESFOR

AP Newsfeatures

Most camera fans, sooner or later are asked to photograph an awards presentation or a speaker at their club, lodge, school, business or civic organization. It sounds like a simple request but it holds many booby traps for the unitiated.

If a photographer at these affairs doesn't observe certain rules of camera etiquette, he can be an annoying distraction to officials, the speaker and to the audience. In addition his pictures may come up with a back view of the award recipient . . . or the microphone over his face . . . or the lectern hiding most or the speaker . . . or grotesque fixtures growing out of the honored guest's head.

FIRST THING

The first thing to do is to arrive well ahead of time to see the room where the speech or presentation will take place. Study it for camera angles, distances, lighting, position of lectern any possibly distracting wall fixtures, mirrors or disturbing backgrounds. Then you can plan where to shoot from and determine your exact focusing distance and exposure.

Next consult the person in charge and try to get the principal people involved to pose in advance. Most people are glad to cooperate when it is explained that this will produce better pictures. This gives you a chance to select the background carefully, to stand on a chair if necessary and to take several poses — something you cannot do during the actual proceedings.

It will be helpful to know from which direction award recipients will be coming and where they will stand so that you will be in position for the best camera angle. Ask the people beforehand to turn towards you after receiving their award so that you can get faces instead of the side or back of a head. Use a set distance for many awards so there will be no need for refocusing.

During a speech, the photographer must be unobtrusive. He should take his pictures in the first few moments when the speaker acknowledges the welcoming applause and starts his introductory remarks. He should not jump up and down during the heart of the address. Nor should he remain poised, camera aimed while he is changing focus or exposure while the speaker and the audience wonder when he is going to snap that photo! He may get up when there is a distinct break, a joke with audience reaction or if the speaker holds up an object to make a telling point. The photographer must anticipate and be instantly ready for these dramatic highlights.

BE BRIEFED

It is well to know the program of events so that you're not caught at the end of a roll of film during an important part of the proceedings. When in doubt, shoot off the last few frames of a roll of film and start a new one. Never leave your camera case with its supplies out of reach. When you need film or flashbulbs, they should be handy. Keep extra batteries, a synch cord or any necessary equipment for emergencies.

GENERAL VIEWS

Take general views early because most rooms get smoky and hazy as the evening wears on.

Avoid shooting the guests of honor while they are eating. It is far better to picture them before or after eating when they are relaxing or chatting with their table companions. Use an official seating list to get correct names and positions of guests to avoid the embarrassment of asking who they are to identify your photos. When in doubt, you can discreetly ask strangers how to spell their names correctly.

CURTAIN CALL

Work is about to start on two major additions to Strauss Playhouse. One is a workshop at the rear of the structure where set construction and painting can be carried on without interfering with activity in the stage area. The other is an office adjoining the south side of the lobby to house our addressograph and mimeograph equipment and provide adequate space for box office and the executive director.

These facilities will restore work space that was eliminated from the original plans to save money which has since been accumulated from the sale of Green Room tiles, from capital donations and from careful husbanding of income. Former board member Frank Eason has undertaken the construction which ought to be completed before Christmas.

MEETING HELD

The building and finance committee held its first meeting in several years to consider plans for these improvements. Present were Miss Lallage Feazel, Bernard W. Biedenharn, Robert H. Evans, James R. Henry, Walter W. Kellogg, Paul F. Stewart and Clifford M. Strauss. Mrs. C. H. McHenry and James A. Noe were unavoidably absent as the committee endorsed the program.

Early completion of the additions will permit their use for the musical, "Once Upon A Mattress," when they will be needed most. Plans are also afoot to enclose our costume storage space as soon as the workshop is available for items now crowding our wardrobe area.

Meanwhile, rehearsals for "The Glass Menagerie" continue nightly. The part of Amanda is in the capable hands of Eula Davenport who played Mother Burnside in "Auntie Mame." Eula has returned to Little Theatre this season after too long an absence. In the past she took lead roles in "A Doll's House," "The Ninth Guest," "The Bellamy Trial" and "George Washington Slept Here."

LONG EXPERIENCE

As the gentleman caller, Claude Fuller also draws upon long experience in "Caine Mutiny," "Sabrina Fair," "The Gazebo," "Teahouse," "Come Blow Your Horn" and "The Desperate Hours."

Pauline Varino makes her Little Theatre debut as Laura, the sensitive and misunderstood daughter, while Bob Jones plays his first major role as Tom, the rebellious son. In try-outs both showed Richard Clark their ability to handle these parts with a wealth of latent talent.

"The Glass Menagerie" takes its title from a collection of animal figurines which become an obsession with Laura. This Tennessee Williams play is considered a modern American classic which no one who enjoys great theatre should miss.

WORTH REPEATING

Along with "Our Town," it is one of two plays we have thought worth repeating in recent years. Since the previous production was in 1950, we doubt that more than 10 per cent of our present membership saw it then and the few who did will find the comparison most interesting.

Tentatively "The Glass Menagerie" is scheduled to open at the end of the month, but there will be a definite announcement later and the usual mailing to members. This reminds us that we are removing address plates for last season's members who have not joined this year. Anyone in this category unintentionally may still apply to Box 868 for membership while the remaining 180 vacancies still exist.

A lovely letter from Beryl Madison Swift accompanied her order for a tile for her role in "Up Pops The Devil." Mrs. Swift was also in "The Whole Town's Talking," our very first play, and Mrs. David I. Garrett Sr. is honoring her sister with a tile for that historic event. Louis K. Turner, president of Oklahoma Scenic Company and a former Monroyan, will receive a tile as director of "Adam and Eva."

President Judy Evans, executive director Richard M. Clark, technical director Lonny Fraze and Bob Evans Jr. viewed the children's play of the Junior League of Shreveport last week and while there paid a brief visit to the Margaret Place playhouse of the Shreveport Little Theatre where the John Wray Youngs have been the director-designer team for 26 years.

Stamp News

British colonies all over the world are honoring the centenary of the Red Cross by issuing special stamps of identical design. Each of the 34 territories is issuing two stamps with the denominations varying as to the locality. The design features the wording "International Red Cross Centenary" and a portrait of Queen Elizabeth, with the exception of Tonga which bears a portrait of Queen Salote and for Zanzibar which has a portrait of Sultan Abdulla. The Red Cross and the dates 1863-1963 are emblazoned in red in the center. Queen Elizabeth is very much interested in this particular work as she is vice president of the British Red Cross Society.

Venezuela has issued a set of four stamps honoring Dag Hammarskjold, late secretary general of the United Nations and winner of the Nobel Peace Prize. Two lower values are for regular mail and the two higher values are for air mails. Featured on the stamps is a portrait of Hammarskjold with a map in the background. The inscription on the stamp reads "Dag Hammarskjold, Winner of the Nobel Peace Prize 1961."

The recently issued United States 5 cent stamp honoring Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt is somewhat unique in that Mrs. Roosevelt was the first President's wife to be honored on a U.S. postage stamp since Martha Washington. In recent years U.S. stamps only infrequently have honored women. This year, in addition to Mrs. Roosevelt, a commemorative stamp honored Amelia Earhart.

A LABRADOR RETRIEVER, a Siamese cat and a bull terrier, lost, star in Walt Disney's "The Incredible Journey," which starts Wednesday at the Jim Theatre.

Is America selling out ?

America WILL . . . if it doesn't develop enough future leaders now. They are needed to hold our position in science, in business and jobs, in living standards.

Where do we get leaders? Higher education trains most of them. But colleges are facing higher costs. Many need classrooms, laboratories and competent teachers.

To hold our lead we must back our colleges. Either we help them meet costs or we . . . sell out.

Is America selling out ?

America WILL...if it doesn't develop enough future leaders now. They are needed to hold our position in science, in business and jobs, in living standards.

Where do we get leaders? Higher education trains most of them. But colleges are facing higher costs. Many need classrooms, laboratories and competent teachers.

To hold our lead we must back our colleges. Either we help them meet costs or we . . . sell out.

HELP THE COLLEGE OF YOUR CHOICE NOW!

To find out how the college crisis affects you, write to HIGHER EDUCATION, Box 36, Times Square Station, New York 36.

SUSAN HAYWARD IS the star of the motion picture "Stolen Hours," which opens today at the Paramount Theatre. The picture also stars Michael Craig, Diane Baker and Edward Judd.

HOUDINI PRESIDENT'S BOOK, a rare memento of the world's most famous magician who died in 1926, is passed along from president to president of the Society of American Magicians. Edward Schuman, left, Stamford, Conn., present president of the New York City Assembly, receives the treasure from his predecessor, Felix Greenfield, Rego Park, N.Y. This presentation, photographed in advance, made a better picture than the one taken of the actual event.

CAMERA Angles

By IRVING DESFOR

AP Newsfeatures

Most camera fans, sooner or later are asked to photograph an awards presentation or a speaker at their club, lodge, school, business or civic organization. It sounds like a simple request but it holds many booby traps for the unitiated.

If a photographer at these affairs doesn't observe certain rules of camera etiquette, he can be an annoying distraction to officials, the speaker and to the audience. In addition his pictures may come up with a back view of the award recipient . . . or the microphone over his face . . . or the lectern hiding most or the speaker . . . or grotesque fixtures growing out of the honored guest's head.

FIRST THING

The first thing to do is to arrive well ahead of time to see the room where the speech or presentation will take place. Study it for camera angles, distances, lighting, position of lectern any possibly distracting wall fixtures, mirrors or disturbing backgrounds. Then you can plan where to shoot from and determine your exact focusing distance and exposure.

Next consult the person in charge and try to get the principal people involved to pose in advance. Most people are glad to cooperate when it is explained that this will produce better pictures. This gives you a chance to select the background carefully, to stand on a chair if necessary and to take several poses — something you cannot do during the actual proceedings.

It will be helpful to know from which direction award recipients will be coming and where they will stand so that you will be in position for the best camera angle. Ask the people beforehand to turn towards you after receiving their award so that you can get faces instead of the side or back of a head. Use a set distance for many awards so there will be no need for refocusing.

During a speech, the photographer must be unobtrusive. He should take his pictures in the first few moments when the speaker acknowledges the welcoming applause and starts his introductory remarks. He should not jump up and down during the heart of the address. Nor should he remain poised, camera aimed while he is changing focus or exposure while the speaker and the audience wonder when he is going to snap that photo! He may get up when there is a distinct break, a joke with audience reaction or if the speaker holds up an object to make a telling point. The photographer must anticipate and be instantly ready for these dramatic highlights.

BE BRIEFED

It is well to know the program of events so that you're not caught at the end of a roll of film during an important part of the proceedings. When in doubt, shoot off the last few frames of a roll of film and start a new one. Never leave your camera case with its supplies out of reach. When you need film or flashbulbs, they should be handy. Keep extra batteries, a synch cord or any necessary equipment for emergencies.

GENERAL VIEWS

Take general views early because most rooms get smoky and hazy as the evening wears on.

Avoid shooting the guests of honor while they are eating. It is far better to picture them before or after eating when they are relaxing or chatting with their table companions. Use an official seating list to get correct names and positions of guests to avoid the embarrassment of asking who they are to identify your photos. When in doubt, you can discreetly ask strangers how to spell their names correctly.

CURTAIN CALL

Work is about to start on two major additions to Strauss Playhouse. One is a workshop at the rear of the structure where set construction and painting can be carried on without interfering with activity in the stage area. The other is an office adjoining the south side of the lobby to house our addressograph and mimeograph equipment and provide adequate space for box office and the executive director.

These facilities will restore work space that was eliminated from the original plans to save money which has since been accumulated from the sale of Green Room tiles, from capital donations and from careful husbanding of income. Former board member Frank Eason has undertaken the construction which ought to be completed before Christmas.

MEETING HELD

The building and finance committee held its first meeting in several years to consider plans for these improvements. Present were Miss Lallage Feazel, Bernard W. Biedenharn, Robert H. Evans, James R. Henry, Walter W. Kellogg, Paul F. Stewart and Clifford M. Strauss. Mrs. C. H. McHenry and James A. Noe were unavoidably absent as the committee endorsed the program.

Early completion of the additions will permit their use for the musical, "Once Upon A Mattress," when they will be needed most. Plans are also afoot to enclose our costume storage space as soon as the workshop is available for items now crowding our wardrobe area.

Meanwhile, rehearsals for "The Glass Menagerie" continue nightly. The part of Amanda is in the capable hands of Eula Davenport who played Mother Burnside in "Auntie Mame." Eula has returned to Little Theatre this season after too long an absence. In the past she took lead roles in "A Doll's House," "The Ninth Guest," "The Bellamy Trial" and "George Washington Slept Here."

LONG EXPERIENCE

As the gentleman caller, Claude Fuller also draws upon long experience in "Caine Mutiny," "Sabrina Fair," "The Gazebo," "Teahouse," "Come Blow Your Horn" and "The Desperate Hours."

Pauline Varino makes her Little Theatre debut as Laura, the sensitive and misunderstood daughter, while Bob Jones plays his first major role as Tom, the rebellious son. In try-outs both showed Richard Clark their ability to handle these parts with a wealth of latent talent.

"The Glass Menagerie" takes its title from a collection of animal figurines which become an obsession with Laura. This Tennessee Williams play is considered a modern American classic which no one who enjoys great theatre should miss.

WORTH REPEATING

Along with "Our Town," it is one of two plays we have thought worth repeating in recent years. Since the previous production was in 1950, we doubt that more than 10 per cent of our present membership saw it then and the few who did will find the comparison most interesting.

Tentatively "The Glass Menagerie" is scheduled to open at the end of the month, but there will be a definite announcement later and the usual mailing to members. This reminds us that we are removing address plates for last season's members who have not joined this year. Anyone in this category unintentionally may still apply to Box 868 for membership while the remaining 180 vacancies still exist.

A lovely letter from Beryl Madison Swift accompanied her order for a tile for her role in "Up Pops The Devil." Mrs. Swift was also in "The Whole Town's Talking," our very first play, and Mrs. David I. Garrett Sr. is honoring her sister with a tile for that historic event. Louis K. Turner, president of Oklahoma Scenic Company and a former Monroyan, will receive a tile as director of "Adam and Eva."

President Judy Evans, executive director Richard M. Clark, technical director Lonny Fraze and Bob Evans Jr. viewed the children's play of the Junior League of Shreveport last week and while there paid a brief visit to the Margaret Place playhouse of the Shreveport Little Theatre where the John Wray Youngs have been the director-designer team for 26 years.

Stamp News

British colonies all over the world are honoring the centenary of the Red Cross by issuing special stamps of identical design. Each of the 34 territories is issuing two stamps with the denominations varying as to the locality. The design features the wording "International Red Cross Centenary" and a portrait of Queen Elizabeth, with the exception of Tonga which bears a portrait of Queen Salote and for Zanzibar which has a portrait of Sultan Abdulla. The Red Cross and the dates 1863-1963 are emblazoned in red in the center. Queen Elizabeth is very much interested in this particular work as she is vice president of the British Red Cross Society.

Venezuela has issued a set of four stamps honoring Dag Hammarskjold, late secretary general of the United Nations and winner of the Nobel Peace Prize. Two lower values are for regular mail and the two higher values are for air mails. Featured on the stamps is a portrait of Hammarskjold with a map in the background. The inscription on the stamp reads "Dag Hammarskjold, Winner of the Nobel Peace Prize 1961."

The recently issued United States 5 cent stamp honoring Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt is somewhat unique in that Mrs. Roosevelt was the first President's wife to be honored on a U.S. postage stamp since Martha Washington. In recent years U.S. stamps only infrequently have honored women. This year, in addition to Mrs. Roosevelt, a commemorative stamp honored Amelia Earhart.

A LABRADOR RETRIEVER, a Siamese cat and a bull terrier, lost, star in Walt Disney's "The Incredible Journey," which starts Wednesday at the Jim Theatre.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Driftwood Motifs Seen

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

Mrs. W. R. Moseley, talented member of the Home Gardener Club of Monroe, brought "Driftwood Designs" to be featured on the T.V. and Fifth District Garden Center program last Wednesday. Each design contained driftwood or weathered wood found by her in various places.

It is fascinating to hear the different stories behind each piece. The most interesting thing about driftwood, weathered or ghost wood, is that mystery about it's origin. This alone makes it an ideal conversation piece. We are told in one of the leading driftwood books, "The Driftwood Book," by Mary E. Thompson, that the art of using driftwood in designs is not very old — perhaps 10 or 12 years ago there were very few arrangers who used it or recognized it's tremendous value in artistic designs.

But, like the beauty of natural rocks and stones discovered centuries ago by the Japanese and today valued in their gardens or homes as precious objects d'art, the beauty of wood in its natural condition has now been made visible to many floral artists.

DEDICATED ARTIST

Mrs. Moseley is one of these truly dedicated artists who shares her talent with her many friends and garden workers. This is one art that will appeal to everyone. It is indeed a favorite with the male sex. Sometimes it is called a man's type design. I suppose this is because it is a suitable design for the den or man's room. It's ruggedness reminds one of the great out-of-doors, the sea, the lake, the giant forests, and many places where man has never dared to venture. However, with it's roughness in texture it combines well with the most delicate of flowers — Roses and driftwood are sensational.

Some hobbyists seek pieces of driftwood or weathered wood that are so beautifully carved by nature that there is no need to improve it. Others find great challenge in taking a piece that is in grave need of altering and with their own skill shape it into a usuable and most interesting branch or root for arranging purposes.

CLEANING WOOD

Cleaning the wood is an art all in itself. It is always favored by the hobbyist to keep the wood in its natural state as much as possible. Therefore, warm, soapy water and a fine wire brush, careful handling while scrubbing, will do the trick. Silt and mud sometimes collect on the lake or river wood and it is very necessary to clean it thoroughly. A small amount of chlorox in the water helps to cleanse and further bleach. Of course, the sun has given the beach wood it's gray tone and if you aren't careful this can be scrubbed away. We learn from some hobbyist that this can be restored if placed in water, then into the sun again — doing this over and over again.

Most beach wood is very clean and never needs a thing except brushing off of sand and sea weed and washing with clear water.

I have tried this with my driftwood found in Florida and it has proved very successful. If you have a piece that you desire to be more of a white-gray there is a little trick you can use — simply rub in white chalk with your fingers. This works perfectly for a desired effect.

FRESH MATERIALS

Mrs. Moseley used fresh materials as well as dried and glycerinized materials in her designs. One that was most outstanding was the weathered root, grey in color, which formed a perfect container for the graceful line of pedalanthus, filled in with purple jew, green and rose grapes, around a focal interest of fresh orange-pink celosia. It would be ideal for that patio party. Another outstanding design made of a twisted root, which formed the line in a diagonal form, was combined with a cluster of oleander seed pods, wild road side daisies (dried), lichen, placed at the base of the wood on a very interesting burlwood base. The interest was created by the placement of a prancing ceramic horse in front of the wood branch, harmonizing in feeling, rhythm and form as well as color. Simplicity was the keynote in this design which made it one of distinction.

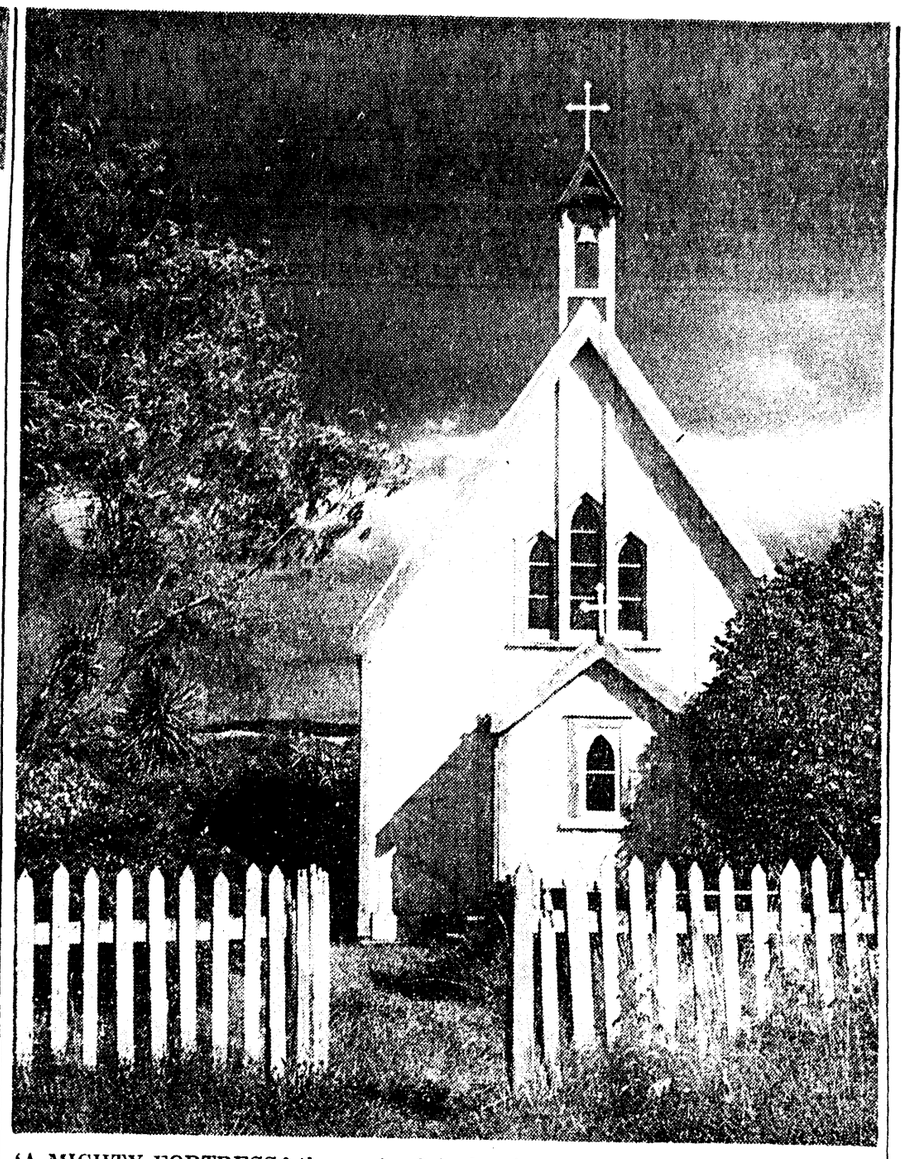
One other design was made of a swirling piece of bulky Florida driftwood, very light grey in color, placed on a dark gray base which was made of a piece of tree bark. One branch of variegated pittosporum was placed within the line of the wood. For focal interest a handmade figurine, a pair of old Chinamen sitting and chatting together, was placed in front (center) of design. These were made by Mrs. Moseley who makes quite a few of her accessories.

ANOTHER DESIGN

One other design I must tell you about was the one which contained the cypress root. This was a very unusual root which was found by Mrs. Moseley while out on a fishing trip. It forms a perfect container, with hole for plant materials. It's shape is more of a Hogarth, high at one end which gave a clue to the design made in it. A Hogarth line was made of winged elm, filled in with cedar to form a background for the yellow roses placed within the line, plus one cluster of green grapes to add contrast and balance to the design. This was placed on an oval wooden base which contained the grain and color found in the piece of cypress.

Since I can't possibly describe all the designs, I just hope you had a chance to see these lovely arrangements, either on the T.V. show or at the Garden Center in Sears. Thanks again, Mrs. Moseley, I'm sure your program has inspired many — including me.

This week — watch for our next program brought to you by The Winnsboro Garden Club. Mrs. B. T. Lanier is the president of this Federated Garden Club of LGCF.



'A MIGHTY FORTRESS,' the work of a Houston, Texas photographer, Dorothy Billups, will be on display throughout this week at the College Union Building at Northeast State College, along with a number of prints taken by photographers in six states. The showing, under sponsorship of the North Louisiana Camera Club, features pictures from the 10th annual Gulf States Camera Club Council Salon. This photograph has been accepted for showing in two international salons.

Fall Garden Cleaning Is Plant Boost

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

Cleaning your garden in the fall not only will make your spring chores easier, but it will help prevent plant diseases from surviving the winter.

Let's consider the disease aspect. Some diseases go south, a Cornell University pathologist reports, then return on air currents in the spring, emulating seasonal tourists.

Other plant diseases survive by burying themselves in seeds to withstand the cold. One kind lives as condensed fungus tissues in the soil and may come through several winters. Others may survive on the surface or inside the seed coat as fungus spores, threads of bacterial cells.

CARRY OVER

More specifically, says Prof. Arden Sherf, bean anthracnose, bean blight and some cabbage diseases carry over as fungus threads of bacterial threads in partially decayed crop residue left in the garden after the harvest.

Plant viruses often survive in flower bulbs and corms or cuttings taken from plants, or in the roots of common weeds.

Tools, machinery, bags and crates, storage bins and cellars also are havens for disease. Bins should be cleaned throughly of old stems before storing vegetables

Buying treated seed or treating it yourself is another preventative measure. Exercise care and buy from reliable seed dealers.

Fall plowing will help reduce diseases by burying and hastening rotting of plant residue.

HOUSE PLANT CARE

The wane of the outdoor planting season in much of the country permits more time for care of your potted house plants.

One of the most troublesome aspects of indoor foliage plant care is watering. Do not keep them very moist. Water when the soil is dry to the touch. Moisten the entire earth ball when you water. Because of the varying indoor conditions, a regular watering time schedule may not be satisfactory.

If you use the common clay pot with a drainage hole, let the excess water drain into a container then get rid of the standing water. Potted plants should not be permitted to stand in water for long periods.

Over - watering interrupts aeration of the soil and encourages formation of toxic material which will hurt the roots. A common sign of over - watering is a yellowing and dropping of lower leaves. It will help to lift out the plant with the earth ball, then gently set the ball back so that there will be air between the pot and soil, thus abetting new root growth

ENJOY HUMIDITY

House plants enjoy humidity, which often is lacking in buildings. To increase humidity, the pots may be set on pans of moist sand or pebbles or partially buried in moist peat moss. An occasional spraying of the foliage may be beneficial.

Plants need light for growth. If your plants receive inadequate sunlight, substitute incandescent light.

Remember also that plants with variegated leaves require more light than those with solidly green leaves.

TEXAS GOLD, a large golden-yellow tulip with a narrow edge of red on its fringed petals, is one of the eleven 1963 International Holland Bulb Selections. Parrot tulips in their unusual shapes and colors are considered as pleasing highlight flowers for the spring garden.

Tree, Shrub Setting Time

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

November is the month to begin planting trees and shrubs. Wait until a killing frost or after leaves from the deciduous shrubs and trees have fallen. Plant only after the soil has become moist from fall rains. Selections from native plants of Louisiana will prove to be most successful.

No group of plants offer more beauty than those native to Louisiana. Ask your nurseryman to point out this group before making any definite selection. Some planting points are: Allow ample space between young plants and the house or walks for natural spread of plant.

Plant trees near enough to building to provide shade in a reasonable length of time. Plant decidous type trees (those that drop their leaves in winter) for the west, east, southeast and southwest exposures to provide shade in summer and light in winter. The bold massive effect of large evergreen trees may be desired for the north.

Group trees of the same variety for harmony and unity. Too great a variety of textures, forms and colors in one area gives a spotty appearance. If poorly planted a plant will let you know in only a few weeks. Purchase at one time only those that you can adequately care for at planting and then maintain them properly for the first year.

COUNCIL MEETING

The meeting of the Parish Home Demonstration Council will be held Friday at 10 a.m. The following awards for the clubs will be given: Silver coffee service for the club chosen best of the 25 clubs for the year. Best attendance at council meeting during year will receive $10 cash award from the Ouachita Valley Fair. The best scrapbook will be announced at this meeting.

FREEZING PECANS

With a record crop of pecans in the offing, homemakers would do well to consider freezing some for the winter months ahead. Pecans are easy to freeze. Just be sure the nut meats are as clean as possible. Pack nut meats lightly in frozen food containers or polyethylene bags and store at zero degrees F.

Did You Know?

The cranberry crop is expected to be the third largest on record. That means you, Mrs. Consumer, can have your pick of cranberries — canned, strained, or whole, jellied, frozen or fresh. Your best bet will be the fresh berries though. They'll be at their peak of goodness during November and their price will be right, too.

All pie crusts shrink some, but if yours show signs of excessive shrinkage, it might be because you handled it too much or rolled it unevenly.

There's something new in Oregon area this year in the turkey. The boneless turkey rolls which have been on the market have taken new shape in Oregon. Here, they are being molded to resemble a whole turkey, and the dark and light meat tied separately. The dark meat is placed so that it resembles the turkey's legs and thighs.

Who eats the most rice in the United States? A study made by the U.S. Department of Agriculture shows that among continental states, Louisiana leads the rice race. People in Louisiana eat 30 pounds of rice a year per person. South Carolina comes in second with about 27 pounds. Hawaiians, however, eat a lot more rice than either of these states. They consumed an average of 113 pounds per person average last year.

GETTING ALONG

The ability to get along with others is essential to success in any profession, and any family is happier to the extent that its members make a special effort to get along with one another.

Check List On Housing Needs Vital

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

If your house doesn't fit family needs, no amount of money can make a good investment out of it, advises housing specialist Glenda Pifer, extension worker with the University of Illinois.

The safest way to get a reasonable facimile of what you need is to know in advance what you require, she points out. We all know people who have bought houses for impulsive reasons — the swimming pool is in a beautiful setting, there is a marvelous workroom for the man of the family, or the lady of the house has at last found her dream kitchen. But one bright gizmo doesn't make a house.

This specialist suggests that once you've determined your family's living habits, activities in the household, furniture space and future housing needs, you can sit down and list your needs under subheads: working, living, sleeping.

LIST NEEDS

List necessary things first, and look for those things, regardless of whether the kitchen is pink or blue. Other things being equal, a small paint job could change a color that is distasteful.

Miss Pifer sugests this check list:

Does the amount of available space fit the family's size, possessions and activities?

Is there circulation within spaces where it is needed? Is the space dead ending where no circulation is desired?

Is the space flexible so that the house will fit the family's needs now and later?

Will such features as heights and amounts of work spaces in the kitchen and utility room be sufficient and convenient?

Is space readily available for recreational activities?

Are bedrooms adequate — in both number and size?

Do storage spaces allow storage in terms of first use, clear visibility and accessibility?

Is natural and artificial lighting controllable and directed to put general and specific lighting where needed?

SOUTHERN GARDENER

Daffodils' Role Varied

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

Some daffodils seem to endure as garden flowers, year after year, multiplying on the spring show while other varieties, for one reason or another, seem to diminish or to play out. From your columnist's note book through the years, here are a few that seem to do well in most people's gardens in the hill country all through the South:

EARLY TRUMPETS

First in any list of dependable daffodils would have to be the common little yellow early trumpets. This one is the "lent lily" of English literature and poetry. More properly, it is narcissus pseudo - narcissus Ajax, and the form we have here in Southern gardens is the "golden" form. It is common in Southern France and northern Spain. The only source of bulbs are the market bulletins on the Southern States or your gardening friends.

The two little hoop - petticoat daffodils are not to be missed for any Southern garden. The older, commoner one is orange and does not bloom until the time of King Alfred. The lemon colored one flowers just as soon as there is even a hint of spring in January or February. The yellow one is N. bulbocodium conspicuous in catalogues and seed stores in spite of the fact that the lemon one is much more conspicuous and a finer, earlier flower. It is N. b. citrinus, and you may find even more Latin tacked on at the end, but that means that you have a special variety. Buy it because you may have one of the fall-flowering or white forms which are very exciting indeed.

February Gold does not necessarily bloom in February, but is an early permanent daffodil.

Do not fail to acquire for your garden the extremely early and superb Ada Finch. The flowers open shortly after the little early trumpets. At first, Ada Finch is the most subtle light lemony cream color, then it fades to near white almost at once. In order to enjoy the lemony phase, be sure to cut the buds just when they begin to break through their little papery coverings. Do not wait any longer.

WON AWARDS

Fortune, the famous old daffodil that won awards all over the world, comes so early that it is wise to plant it in a sheltered place and pick it for the house with Ada Finch. Except in areas where trumpets play out, King Alfred can be planted by the thousands now that it is so cheap in price. For variety, you can plant some of the lemon yellow trumpet, Lord Nelson. Van Waveran's Giant seems to be another permanent trumpet.

Among the so - called "pink" daffodils, the old variety, Mrs. Backhouse is still one of the best for performance. Pink Glory is one of the pinkest and largest, and the newer Louise de Coligny is extremely fine.

The above daffodils are discussed here as being some that are now low enough in price for everyone to have them. Daffodil fanciers will turn up their noses perhaps at this list, but they know that good daffodils soon make "fans" out of gardeners. We shall discuss still more daffodils next week for we are in daffodil planting time now.

Here's The Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

QUESTION: We need an extra medicine cabinet in our bathroom. While I know that I can buy a cabinet and then set it into the wall like the other cabinet. Can you tell me something about making the opening in the wall?

ANSWER: Our first advice is not to build the cabinet until you have first opened the wall. While the cabinet should be located between two studs, which usually are 16 inches apart on center, the distance occasionally is a little more or a little less than that. By waiting until you determine the exact distance, you can make the cabinet fit exactly without any last-minute adjusting.

After deciding where you want the cabinet to be, drill a hole into the wall and then another and another, until you locate a stud. This will enable you to start cutting in the proper place. Use a compass or similar saw after making a hole large enough for the saw. Don't worry too much about irregularities, since they will be covered by modling and the front of the cabinet.

Once the opening has been cut and the cabinet built to fit, it is a simple matter to screw the sides of the cabinet into the studs.

On The House

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Every year, thousands of houses are sold to persons who never before owned their own homes. The buyers include newlyweds, those who wait until they have saved enough money to make sizable down payments, those whose expanding families force them to find more spacious quarters and, in some cases, retirement couples who have spent all their married lives in apartments.

There are many solid advantages to owning a home. But one thing a home owner discovers is that he must learn to do certain things himself. He can't call up the superintendent when something goes wrong. In an emergency, he has to make his own decision on what should be done and sometimes carry it out himself.

MORE COMPLEX

It's easy enough to telephone for a repair specialist. But even if money had no bearing on the situation, which it does for most persons, telephoning for aid and getting it in a hurry is another matter. As almost everyone who owns a house can tell you, you can't always get a repair man when you want him, especially if you need him over a weekend. And it is over a weekend when, sad to relate, so many house troubles have a curious way of occurring.

One way to avoid serious trouble in this area is to learn a little something about your house. If you know the location of the shut-off water valves, for instance, you can prevent a leak from turning into a flood. It's a good idea not only to know which valves handle which water lines, but to mark them with tags so that other members of the family will know, too. If there is a leak, shutting off the proper valve will stop the water from doing further damage and yet not interfere with the movement of water to other parts of the house.

FUSE SUPPLIES

The same thing holds true in the matter of electric fuses. Spare fuses of the proper amperage should always be kept on hand. But the fuse box should be so marked that you know precisely which fuse handles which circuit in the house. Then you won't have to guess or test which fuse to change when the lights in one part of the house go out.

CLOGGED DRAINS

Clogged drains or plumbing lines can be a major headache if they occur at an inopportune time. A first-time home owner is wise to invest in a plunger or "plumber's friend," a snake and some chemical drain cleaner. Sometimes the use of one or all three of these can bring about indefinite relief when there is a drain stoppage and sometimes there will be temporary relief until a plumber can be obtained.

Mrs. Moseley used fresh materials as well as dried and glycerinized materials in her designs. One that was most outstanding was the weathered root, grey in color, which formed a perfect container for the graceful line of pedalanthus, filled in with purple jew, green and rose grapes, around a focal interest of fresh orange-pink celosia. It would be ideal for that patio party. Another outstanding design made of a twisted root, which formed the line in a diagonal form, was combined with a cluster of oleander seed pods, wild road side daisies (dried), lichen, placed at the base of the wood on a very interesting burlwood base. The interest was created by the placement of a prancing ceramic horse in front of the wood branch, harmonizing in feeling, rhythm and form as well as color. Simplicity was the keynote in this design which made it one of distinction.

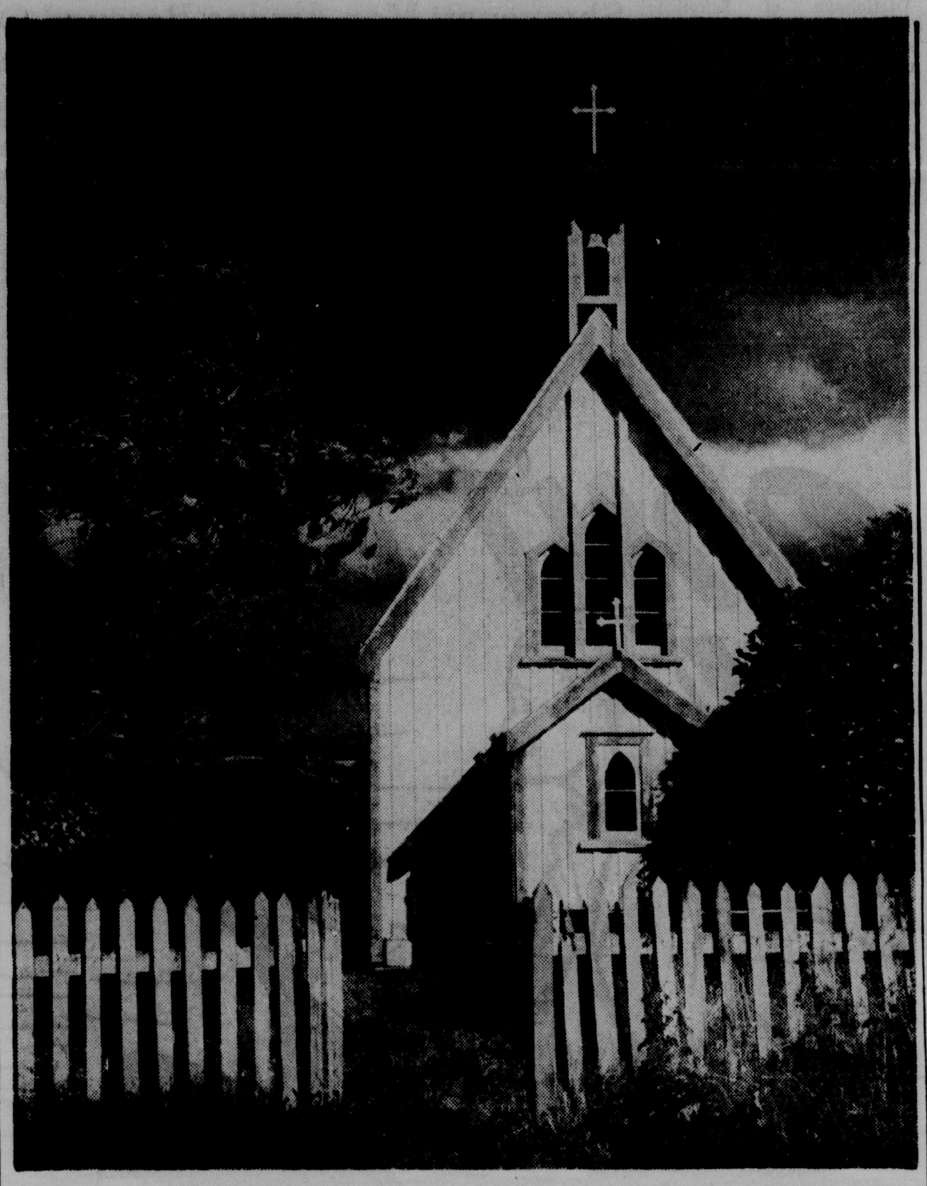
One other design was made of a swirling piece of bulky Florida driftwood, very light grey in color, placed on a dark gray base which was made of a piece of tree bark. One branch of variegated pittosporum was placed within the line of the wood. For focal interest a handmade figurine, a pair of old Chinamen sitting and chatting together, was placed in front (center) of design. These were made by Mrs. Moseley who makes quite a few of her accessories.

ANOTHER DESIGN

One other design I must tell you about was the one which contained the cypress root. This was a very unusual root which was found by Mrs. Moseley while out on a fishing trip. It forms a perfect container, with hole for plant materials. It's shape is more of a Hogarth, high at one end which gave a clue to the design made in it. A Hogarth line was made of winged elm, filled in with cedar to form a background for the yellow roses placed within the line, plus one cluster of green grapes to add contrast and balance to the design. This was placed on an oval wooden base which contained the grain and color found in the piece of cypress.

Since I can't possibly describe all the designs, I just hope you had a chance to see these lovely arrangements, either on the T.V. show or at the Garden Center in Sears. Thanks again, Mrs. Moseley, I'm sure your program has inspired many — including me.

This week — watch for our next program brought to you by The Winnsboro Garden Club. Mrs. B. T. Lanier is the president of this Federated Garden Club of LGCF.



'A MIGHTY FORTRESS,' the work of a Houston, Texas photographer, Dorothy Billups, will be on display throughout this week at the College Union Building at Northeast State College, along with a number of prints taken by photographers in six states. The showing, under sponsorship of the North Louisiana Camera Club, features pictures from the 10th annual Gulf States Camera Club Council Salon. This photograph has been accepted for showing in two international salons.

Check List On Housing Needs Vital

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

If your house doesn't fit family needs, no amount of money can make a good investment out of it, advises housing specialist Glenda Pifer, extension worker with the University of Illinois.

The safest way to get a reasonable facimile of what you need is to know in advance what you require, she points out. We all know people who have bought houses for impulsive reasons — the swimming pool is in a beautiful setting, there is a marvelous workroom for the man of the family, or the lady of the house has at last found her dream kitchen. But one bright gizmo doesn't make a house.

This specialist suggests that once you've determined your family's living habits, activities in the household, furniture space and future housing needs, you can sit down and list your needs under subheads: working, living, sleeping.

LIST NEEDS

List necessary things first, and look for those things, regardless of whether the kitchen is pink or blue. Other things being equal, a small paint job could change a color that is distasteful.

Miss Pifer sugests this check list:

Does the amount of available space fit the family's size, possessions and activities?

Is there circulation within spaces where it is needed? Is the space dead ending where no circulation is desired?

Is the space flexible so that the house will fit the family's needs now and later?

Will such features as heights and amounts of work spaces in the kitchen and utility room be sufficient and convenient?

Is space readily available for recreational activities?

Are bedrooms adequate — in both number and size?

Do storage spaces allow storage in terms of first use, clear visibility and accessibility?

Is natural and artificial lighting controllable and directed to put general and specific lighting where needed?

SOUTHERN GARDENER

Daffodils' Role Varied

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

Some daffodils seem to endure as garden flowers, year after year, multiplying on the spring show while other varieties, for one reason or another, seem to diminish or to play out. From your columnist's note book through the years, here are a few that seem to do well in most people's gardens in the hill country all through the South:

EARLY TRUMPETS

First in any list of dependable daffodils would have to be the common little yellow early trumpets. This one is the "lent lily" of English literature and poetry. More properly, it is narcissus pseudo - narcissus Ajax, and the form we have here in Southern gardens is the "golden" form. It is common in Southern France and northern Spain. The only source of bulbs are the market bulletins on the Southern States or your gardening friends.

The two little hoop - petticoat daffodils are not to be missed for any Southern garden. The older, commoner one is orange and does not bloom until the time of King Alfred. The lemon colored one flowers just as soon as there is even a hint of spring in January or February. The yellow one is N. bulbocodium conspicuous in catalogues and seed stores in spite of the fact that the lemon one is much more conspicuous and a finer, earlier flower. It is N. b. citrinus, and you may find even more Latin tacked on at the end, but that means that you have a special variety. Buy it because you may have one of the fall-flowering or white forms which are very exciting indeed.

February Gold does not necessarily bloom in February, but is an early permanent daffodil.

Do not fail to acquire for your garden the extremely early and superb Ada Finch. The flowers open shortly after the little early trumpets. At first, Ada Finch is the most subtle light lemony cream color, then it fades to near white almost at once. In order to enjoy the lemony phase, be sure to cut the buds just when they begin to break through their little papery coverings. Do not wait any longer.

WON AWARDS

Fortune, the famous old daffodil that won awards all over the world, comes so early that it is wise to plant it in a sheltered place and pick it for the house with Ada Finch. Except in areas where trumpets play out, King Alfred can be planted by the thousands now that it is so cheap in price. For variety, you can plant some of the lemon yellow trumpet, Lord Nelson. Van Waveran's Giant seems to be another permanent trumpet.

Among the so - called "pink" daffodils, the old variety, Mrs. Backhouse is still one of the best for performance. Pink Glory is one of the pinkest and largest, and the newer Louise de Coligny is extremely fine.

The above daffodils are discussed here as being some that are now low enough in price for everyone to have them. Daffodil fanciers will turn up their noses perhaps at this list, but they know that good daffodils soon make "fans" out of gardeners. We shall discuss still more daffodils next week for we are in daffodil planting time now.

Here's The Answer

QUESTION: We need an extra medicine cabinet in our bathroom. While I know that I can buy a cabinet and then set it into the wall like the other cabinet. Can you tell me something about making the opening in the wall?

ANSWER: Our first advice is not to build the cabinet until you have first opened the wall. While the cabinet should be located between two studs, which usually are 16 inches apart on center, the distance occasionally is a little more or a little less than that. By waiting until you determine the exact distance, you can make the cabinet fit exactly without any last-minute adjusting.

After deciding where you want the cabinet to be, drill a hole into the wall and then another and another, until you locate a stud. This will enable you to start cutting in the proper place. Use a compass or similar saw after making a hole large enough for the saw. Don't worry too much about irregularities, since they will be covered by modling and the front of the cabinet.

Once the opening has been cut and the cabinet built to fit, it is a simple matter to screw the sides of the cabinet into the studs.

On The House

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Every year, thousands of houses are sold to persons who never before owned their own homes. The buyers include newlyweds, those who wait until they have saved enough money to make sizable down payments, those whose expanding families force them to find more spacious quarters and, in some cases, retirement couples who have spent all their married lives in apartments.

There are many solid advantages to owning a home. But one thing a home owner discovers is that he must learn to do certain things himself. He can't call up the superintendent when something goes wrong. In an emergency, he has to make his own decision on what should be done and sometimes carry it out himself.

MORE COMPLEX

It's easy enough to telephone for a repair specialist. But even if money had no bearing on the situation, which it does for most persons, telephoning for aid and getting it in a hurry is another matter. As almost everyone who owns a house can tell you, you can't always get a repair man when you want him, especially if you need him over a weekend. And it is over a weekend when, sad to relate, so many house troubles have a curious way of occurring.

One way to avoid serious trouble in this area is to learn a little something about your house. If you know the location of the shut-off water valves, for instance, you can prevent a leak from turning into a flood. It's a good idea not only to know which valves handle which water lines, but to mark them with tags so that other members of the family will know, too. If there is a leak, shutting off the proper valve will stop the water from doing further damage and yet not interfere with the movement of water to other parts of the house.

FUSE SUPPLIES

The same thing holds true in the matter of electric fuses. Spare fuses of the proper amperage should always be kept on hand. But the fuse box should be so marked that you know precisely which fuse handles which circuit in the house. Then you won't have to guess or test which fuse to change when the lights in one part of the house go out.

CLOGGED DRAINS

Clogged drains or plumbing lines can be a major headache if they occur at an inopportune time. A first-time home owner is wise to invest in a plunger or "plumber's friend," a snake and some chemical drain cleaner. Sometimes the use of one or all three of these can bring about indefinite relief when there is a drain stoppage and sometimes there will be temporary relief until a plumber can be obtained.

Fall Garden Cleaning Is Plant Boost

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

Cleaning your garden in the fall not only will make your spring chores easier, but it will help prevent plant diseases from surviving the winter.

Let's consider the disease aspect. Some diseases go south, a Cornell University pathologist reports, then return on air currents in the spring, emulating seasonal tourists.

Other plant diseases survive by burying themselves in seeds to withstand the cold. One kind lives as condensed fungus tissues in the soil and may come through several winters. Others may survive on the surface or inside the seed coat as fungus spores, threads of bacterial cells.

CARRY OVER

More specifically, says Prof. Arden Sherf, bean anthracnose, bean blight and some cabbage diseases carry over as fungus threads of bacterial threads in partially decayed crop residue left in the garden after the harvest.

Plant viruses often survive in flower bulbs and corms or cuttings taken from plants, or in the roots of common weeds.

Tools, machinery, bags and crates, storage bins and cellars also are havens for disease. Bins should be cleaned throughly of old stems before storing vegetables

Buying treated seed or treating it yourself is another preventative measure. Exercise care and buy from reliable seed dealers.

Fall plowing will help reduce diseases by burying and hastening rotting of plant residue.

HOUSE PLANT CARE

The wane of the outdoor planting season in much of the country permits more time for care of your potted house plants.

One of the most troublesome aspects of indoor foliage plant care is watering. Do not keep them very moist. Water when the soil is dry to the touch. Moisten the entire earth ball when you water. Because of the varying indoor conditions, a regular watering time schedule may not be satisfactory.

If you use the common clay pot with a drainage hole, let the excess water drain into a container then get rid of the standing water. Potted plants should not be permitted to stand in water for long periods.

Over - watering interrupts aeration of the soil and encourages formation of toxic material which will hurt the roots. A common sign of over - watering is a yellowing and dropping of lower leaves. It will help to lift out the plant with the earth ball, then gently set the ball back so that there will be air between the pot and soil, thus abetting new root growth.

ENJOY HUMIDITY

House plants enjoy humidity, which often is lacking in buildings. To increase humidity, the pots may be set on pans of moist sand or pebbles or partially buried in moist peat moss. An occasional spraying of the foliage may be beneficial.

Plants need light for growth. If your plants receive inadequate sunlight, substitute incandescent light.

Remember also that plants with variegated leaves require more light than those with solidly green leaves.

TEXAS GOLD, a large golden-yellow tulip with a narrow edge of red on its fringed petals, is one of the eleven 1963 International Holland Bulb Selections. Parrot tulips in their unusual shapes and colors are considered as pleasing highlight flowers for the spring garden.

Tree, Shrub Setting Time

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

November is the month to begin planting trees and shrubs. Wait until a killing frost or after leaves from the deciduous shrubs and trees have fallen. Plant only after the soil has become moist from fall rains. Selections from native plants of Louisiana will prove to be most successful.

No group of plants offer more beauty than those native to Louisiana. Ask your nurseryman to point out this group before making any definite selection. Some planting points are: Allow ample space between young plants and the house or walks for natural spread of plant.

Plant trees near enough to building to provide shade in a reasonable length of time. Plant decidous type trees (those that drop their leaves in winter) for the west, east, southeast and southwest exposures to provide shade in summer and light in winter. The bold massive effect of large evergreen trees may be desired for the north.

Group trees of the same variety for harmony and unity. Too great a variety of textures, forms and colors in one area gives a spotty appearance. If poorly planted a plant will let you know in only a few weeks. Purchase at one time only those that you can adequately care for at planting and then maintain them properly for the first year.

COUNCIL MEETING

The meeting of the Parish Home Demonstration Council will be held Friday at 10 a.m. The following awards for the clubs will be given: Silver coffee service for the club chosen best of the 25 clubs for the year. Best attendance at council meeting during year will receive $10 cash award from the Ouachita Valley Fair. The best scrapbook will be announced at this meeting.

FREEZING PECANS

With a record crop of pecans in the offing, homemakers would do well to consider freezing some for the winter months ahead. Pecans are easy to freeze. Just be sure the nut meats are as clean as possible. Pack nut meats lightly in frozen food containers or polyethylene bags and store at zero degrees F.

Did You Know?

The cranberry crop is expected to be the third largest on record. That means you, Mrs. Consumer, can have your pick of cranberries — canned, strained, or whole, jellied, frozen or fresh. Your best bet will be the fresh berries though. They'll be at their peak of goodness during November and their price will be right, too.

All pie crusts shrink some, but if yours show signs of excessive shrinkage, it might be because you handled it too much or rolled it unevenly.

There's something new in Oregon area this year in the turkey. The boneless turkey rolls which have been on the market have taken new shape in Oregon. Here, they are being molded to resemble a whole turkey, and the dark and light meat tied separately. The dark meat is placed so that it resembles the turkey's legs and thighs.

Who eats the most rice in the United States? A study made by the U.S. Department of Agriculture shows that among continental states, Louisiana leads the rice race. People in Louisiana eat 30 pounds of rice a year per person. South Carolina comes in second with about 27 pounds. Hawaiians, however, eat a lot more rice than either of these states. They consumed an average of 113 pounds per person average last year.

GETTING ALONG

The ability to get along with others is essential to success in any profession, and any family is happier to the extent that its members make a special effort to get along with one another.

90,000-Book Goal Set By Library

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

The Ouachita Parish Public Library is rapidly approaching it's goal of 90,000 books by January first. During the month of October a total of 1,403 books were added to the collection and 142 were withdrawn. This gives the library a total of 88,921 books and we have two more months left in the year. We will probably exceed the goal, which will make it easier for us to reach the goal for January first 1965, which is 101,663 books. Of the books added in October 596 were adult books and 807 were juvenile books. With two Bookmobiles in operation, it has been essential that we add more children's books in order to meet the demand, but we now have that collection stabilized. The circulation of books for the month of October was the largest October circulation in the history of the Library, with a total of 44,532 books loaned by the different agencies of the Library. Of this number 11,828 were loaned at the main library, 6,513 at the West Monroe Library, 15,577 from Bookmobile I, 7,613 from Bookmobile II, 2,481 at Ana Meyer and 520 at Carver.

New books added in the past week offer an interesting variety of material. "The Land of Rumbelow" by Carlos Baker is an interesting modern fable, written in the form of a novel. "Black Cloud, White cloud" by Ellen Douglas consists of four stories with a southern setting. "Beyond the Atlas" is a story of suspense and international intrigue, written by John Trench. It will appeal to all who enjoy mystery stories. Another story of intrigue is "The Mind Benders" by James Kennaaway. This book explores many of the modern methods of intimidation of prisoners and is a well-written, although frightening book.

In the non - fiction category there are a variety of new books available. "The Social Responsibility of the Press" by J. Edward Gerald should be of great interest to everyone in the newspaper field. Extremely useful to students is "What Is Democracy?" written by Richard M. Ketchum. Student teachers will welcome the book "Educational Psychology" written by Arthur I. Gates. "The Consumer's Union Report on Smoking And The Public Interest" compiled by Ruth Brecher is a timely and informative book. A new cookbook containing interesting recipes is "Mediterranean Specialties For The Modern Cook" written by Esther Cory.

"How To Get An Executive Job After 40" should be of interest to many men. A fascinating and unusual book in the field of architecture is "New Architecture In Africa" written by Udo Kulturmann. There is a revival of interest in books on needlework and a very lively new book is "Woman's Day Book of American Needlework" written by Rose Wilder Lane. "Crusades and Crinolines" by Ishbel Ross is an interesting book about politics and social reform in New York City at the turn of the century. "The Lovely Sergeant" by Alan Burgess is an exciting story of World War II dealing with the adventures of a lady who posed as a man. Paul McClelland Angle has written an account of the year 1913 in American history. The title of the book is "Crossroads; 1913" and is must reading for all who want to know how our country started on it's present path. "The Flowering of The Cumberland" by Harriette Arnow is a very interesting account of early life in Eastern Tennessee. A distinct addition to our knowledge of Louisiana history and early life in Natchitoches Parish has been prepared by Louis R. Nartini. The title of the book is "My Historic Natchitoches, Louisiana and It's Environment."

"When All Is Said and Done" is the autobiography of Rose Franken, the author of the Claudia and David books.

In the field of reference there are several additions to the Library collection. "American Colonists in English Records" compiled by George Sherwood should be most useful to those doing research in genealogy. "A Dictionary of Scientific Terms" by Isabella Henderson will have great value to many people. "The Statesman Yearbook, 1963 - 64 Edition" contains a great deal of valuable and concise information about every country in the world. "J.F.K. the Man and the Myth" by Victor Lasky has been in great demand and we are glad that the library now has copies of this title.

Shreveport Man Among Rescued On Sinking Boat

SABINE PASS, Tex. (AP) — Two shrimp boats sank and another was towed to safety by a Coast Guard cutter during stormy weather along the Texas coast Friday night.

All aboard the boats were rescued.

One boat, the Princess from Freeport, was pitched over the jetty near the Coast Guard station at Sabine Pass by 15-foot waves kicked up by 50 mile an hour wind.

The Coast Guard rescued Russell MacCheramine, 35, of Cut Off, La., the skipper, and Russell Scully, 30, of Shreveport, La.

The other boat sunk by the tall waves was the Kathy Jean from Orange. It sank in six feet of water near the same spot where the Freeport boat was lost.

The third shrimper, Miss Caroline with three persons aboard, was towed into Galveston harbor Saturday after radioing last it was sinking 15 miles southwest of Sabine Pass.

ON A QUEST

Bell directs the Singing Knights, a choral group at St. Michael's College.

He wants the armor for a stage prop for the Knights' appearance.

Running the Scales

By JOHN CALE

It's opera this afternoon, a matinee performance of "Tosca" to be exact, which will open the Northeast State Concerts series for the 1963-64 season.

The Boris Goldovsky production is set for 3 p.m. at Neville Auditorium and admission is for membership holders and possessors of Northeast ID cards.

We've had occasion in the past to attend Goldovsky's production of Mozart's "Don Giovanni," and he carries out faithfully a philosophy of opera which he has worked into his New England Opera Theatre — a school of the noble if confused art form which he established in Boston in 1946.

PHILOSOPHY

How can one have a philosophy of opera? It would appear that you'd either like it or hate it and leave philosophy to other fields where there was some middle ground.

But the attitudes of operatic performers over the years have reached some extremes which have helped Goldovsky and others look for a more balanced presentation. With this in mind, we can better understand why today's performance will be in English, why the singers strive for a blend of good theatre as well as good singing, and why it would be most unlikely that one of the cast should begin to vent private emotions, at least while the curtain was open and the performance in progress.

Opera of former years never functioned on such a well - rounded philosophy. There was the feeling among those who sang leading roles tha teach was vying against the other for acclaim and his or her share of the box office proceeds.

Vocalizing became a prima donna business — at the expense of any story or drama that might be attached to the opera. In fact, there must have been times when all the sheaves of an entire operatic production had to bow toward a soprano's "A" above high "C" or she'd throw her weight — sometimes literally—right where it would hurt the company the most.

Well, is opera a sequence of virtuoso songs by conceited singers or a drama set to music? Goldovsky appears to shoot for the latter ideal. He says the masterworks of Puccini (who wrote the musical score for today's opera, by the way) as well as those of Mozart and Verdi should be valid and absorbing theatre rather than mere displays of vocal pyrotechnics.

DEPENDABLE

This makes for good musical as well as business sense. In the long run, a troupe schooled in such a philosophy will hold the attention of the audience and finish a very high percentage of the operas it contracts to perform.

There may have been a spirit of adventure and exciting uncertainty back in the days when the top diva could walk off the stage in a huff during the second act when the audience took a shine to a contralto billed down in the fine print somewhere. But was this real opera?

In many cases, the answer was and still is, "yes." The form defies logic and reason, which gives us some sort of an answer as to why it has survived, even though it could have been as dead in 1900 as the silent movies are today.

CELLO RECITAL

Elizabeth Martin, cellist, of Monroe, and Helen Tucker Wooldridge, pianist, of the Louisiana Tech faculty, will air a program over Shreveport's channel 12 at 4 p.m. November 24. Works programmed include portions of the Brams Concerto for Cello in E Minor, the Boccherini and Dvorak cello concertos, and "Requiebros," by the Spanish composer, Cassado.

Further reports from the northwest Louisiana city tell us that a music reviewer came forward with a few constructive remarks about the Centenary College Choir's "Rhapsody in View" presentation. Here's the way he did it:

"Of the 14 numbers the choir performed Monday evening, six were arrangements. The most questionable of these was a Mozart "Alleluia," arranged, totally superfluously as far as I'm concerned, for choir and soprano, whereas Mozart wrote for soprano voice alone."

Such remarks were balanced with praise for the choir's impeccable showmanship and due note of the audience's favorable response. But who, besides another occasional critic, can support a writer who dares to hold up a mirror to spots in a program or production that might need attention?

Also from Shreveport — the city's Civic Opera Production of Verdi's "Il Trovatore" will open the organization's 15th season Tuesday, November 26.

Starring in the production will be Daniele Barioni of the Metropolitan Opera Company as Manrico; Anselmo Colzani, Met baritone, as Count di Luna; Eleanor Ross, dramatic soprano, as Leonora, and contralto Irene Kramarich as Azucena, the gypsy.

The title of the book is "My Historic Natchitoches, Louisiana and It's Environment."

"When All Is Said and Done" is the autobiography of Rose Franken, the author of the Claudia and David books.

In the field of reference there are several additions to the Library collection. "American Colonists in English Records" compiled by George Sherwood should be most useful to those doing research in genealogy. "A Dictionary of Scientific Terms" by Isabella Henderson will have great value to many people. "The Statesman Yearbook, 1963 - 64 Edition" contains a great deal of valuable and concise information about every country in the world. "J.F.K. the Man and the Myth" by Victor Lasky has been in great demand and we are glad that the library now has copies of this title.

Shreveport Man Among Rescued On Sinking Boat

SABINE PASS, Tex. (AP) — Two shrimp boats sank and another was towed to safety by a Coast Guard cutter during stormy weather along the Texas coast Friday night.

All aboard the boats were rescued.

One boat, the Princess from Freeport, was pitched over the jetty near the Coast Guard station at Sabine Pass by 15-foot waves kicked up by 50 mile an hour wind.

The Coast Guard rescud Russell MacCheramine, 35, of Cut Off, La., the skipper, and Russell Scully, 30, of Shreveport, La.

The other boat sunk by the tall waves was the Kathy Jean from Orange. It sank in six feet of water near the same spot where the Freeport boat was lost.

The third shrimper, Miss Caroline with three persons aboard, was towed into Galveston harbor Saturday after radioing last it was sinking 15 miles southwest of Sabine Pass.

ON A QUEST

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — A suit of armor is being sought by Norman Russell Bell of Albuquerque.

Bell directs the Singing Knights, a choral group at St. Michael's College.

He wants the armor for a stage prop for the Knights' appearance.

Running the Scales

By JOHN CALE

It's opera this afternoon, a matinee performance of "Tosca" to be exact, which will open the Northeast State Concerts series for the 1963-64 season.

The Boris Goldovsky production is set for 3 p.m. at Neville Auditorium and admission is for membership holders and possessors of Northeast ID cards.

We've had occasion in the past to attend Goldovsky's production of Mozart's "Don Giovanni," and he carries out faithfully a philosophy of opera which he has worked into his New England Opera Theatre — a school of the noble if confused art form which he established in Boston in 1946.

PHILOSOPHY

How can one have a philosophy of opera? It would appear that you'd either like it or hate it and leave philosophy to other fields where there was some middle ground.

But the attitudes of operatic performers over the years have reached some extremes which have helped Goldovsky and others look for a more balanced presentation. With this in mind, we can better understand why today's performance will be in English, why the singers strive for a blend of good theatre as well as good singing, and why it would be most unlikely that one of the cast should begin to vent private emotions, at least while the curtain was open and the performance in progress.

Opera of former years never functioned on such a well - rounded philosophy. There was the feeling among those who sang leading roles tha teach was vying against the other for acclaim and his or her share of the box office proceeds.

Vocalizing became a prima donna business — at the expense of any story or drama that might be attached to the opera. In fact, there must have been times when all the sheaves of an entire operatic production had to bow toward a soprano's "A" above high "C" or she'd throw her weight — sometimes literally—right where it would hurt the company the most.

Well, is opera a sequence of virtuoso songs by conceited singers or a drama set to music? Goldovsky appears to shoot for the latter ideal. He says the masterworks of Puccini (who wrote the musical score for today's opera, by the way) as well as those of Mozart and Verdi should be valid and absorbing theatre rather than mere displays of vocal pyrotechnics.

DEPENDABLE

This makes for good musical as well as business sense. In the long run, a troupe schooled in such a philosophy will hold the attention of the audience and finish a very high percentage of the operas it contracts to perform.

There may have been a spirit of adventure and exciting uncertainty back in the days when the top diva could walk off the stage in a huff during the second act when the audience took a shine to a contralto billed down in the fine print somewhere. But was this real opera?

In many cases, the answer was and still is, "yes." The form defies logic and reason, which gives us some sort of an answer as to why it has survived, even though it could have been as dead in 1900 as the silent movies are today.

CELLO RECITAL

Elizabeth Martin, cellist, of Monroe, and Helen Tucker Wooldridge, pianist, of the Louisiana Tech faculty, will air a program over Shreveport's channel 12 at 4 p.m. November 24. Works programmed include portions of the Brams Concerto for Cello in E Minor, the Bocchereini and Dvorak cello concertos, and "Requiebros," by the Spanish composer, Cassado.

Further reports from the northwest Louisiana city tell us that a music reviewer came forward with a few constructive remarks about the Centenary College Choir's "Rhapsody in View" presentation. Here's the way he did it:

"Of the 14 numbers the choir performed Monday evening, six were arrangements. The most questionable of these was a Mozart "Alleluia," arranged, totally superfluously as far as I'm concerned, for choir and soprano, whereas Mozart wrote for soprano voice alone."

Such remarks were balanced with praise for the choir's impeccable showmanship and due note of the audience's favorable response. But who, besides another occasional critic, can support a writer who dares to hold up a mirror to spots in a program or production that might need attention?

Also from Shreveport — the city's Civic Opera Production of Verdi's "Il Trovatore" will open the organization's 15th season Tuesday, November 26.

Starring in the production will be Daniele Barioni of the Metropolitan Opera Company as Manrico; Anselmo Colzani, Met baritone, as Count di Luna; Eleanor Ross, dramatic soprano, as Leonora, and contralto Irene Kramarich as Azucena, the gypsy.

Election Ends Annual Meet Of Students

Election results and the installation of new officers highlighted the close Saturday morning of the 29th annual conference of the Southern Association of Student Councils being held at Neville High School.

The conference, hosting some 435 students from 14 surrounding states and 127 sponsors, was entertained by the 96-member Northeast State College concert band at the opening of Saturday's sessions. The band, under the direction of Joe Barry Mullins, gave a 30-minute concert with Richard I. Steff, new directors of the Jazz Ensemble, as featured trumpet soloist.

Following the concert, outgoing President Danny Davis, W. B. Ray High School of Corpus Christi, Tex., handed over the gavel of office to Fayetteville High School representatives from Fayetteville, Ark.

Schools, rather than individuals, are nominated to the offices and the winning institution then names the person to serve in the official capacity.

Holdenville High School, Holdenville, Okla. walked off with the vice-presidency of SASC while Jefferson High School, Roanoke, Va., landed the parliamentarian position. Fletcher High School, Jacksonville Beach, Fla., will serve as secretary and host the conference next year. West Monroe High School will once again be publisher of the journal, a spot they have held for the past two years.

The sponsors announced the results of their elections at the closing general session. Mrs. Oneta Cummings, Corpus Christi, Tex., was re-elected head sponsor, while John S. Weems, Jackson, Miss., was re-elected sponsor east of the Mississippi. However, Miss Agnes Shaw, West Monroe, was elected sponsor west of the Mississippi, replacing Julia McKemie, of Hughes, Ark.

Dr. Ethel Trice, former faculty member at NLSC and now with the physical education department at the University of Arkansas, made the final address to the conference, speaking on the topic, "To Think or Not to Think." She warned the youths that they must fully develop their capacities of thinking in order to be able to cope with the future.

The entire meeting was rated "a great success" by attending high school delegates and faculty sponsors.

DISCUSSING PLANS for the coming year are three of the newly elected officers of the Southern Association of Student Councils at the close of the 29th annual convention Saturday at Neville High School. Left to right, they are Alan Mitchell and Linda Blackwell, both of Fletcher High School at Jacksonville Beach, Fla., to serve as co-secretaries; and Billy Craig, from Jefferson High School in Roanoke, Va., whose school will serve as parliamentarian. Other schools elected to serve as officers whose delegates aren't shown include Fayetteville High School, Fayetteville, Ark., president; Holdenville High School, Holdenville, Okla., vice president; and West Monroe High School, publisher of the journal. Pennsylvania Drive For Barry Slated

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A drive sparked by Philadelphia and Pittsburgh industrialists to win Pennsylvania's delegation to the 1964 Republican National Convention for Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., will be launched next week, the Philadelphia Bulletin said Saturday.

The drive would threaten the Pennsylvania GOP with an April 28 primary battle for convention delegates. It also would upset plans by leaders close to Gov. William W. Scranton to send an uncommitted delegation to the San Francisco convention with Scranton as a dark-horse candidate.

In Harrisburg, William Keisling, administrative assistant to the governor, said Scranton was not aware of any major Goldwater - for - president drive in Pennsylvania.

Keisling added, however, that the governor believed Pennsylvania Republicans should be free to support any candidate they choose.

The aide noted that Scranton has said in the past he would go to the convention as a favorite son candidate to hold the state's delegation together unless one of two conditions existed.

Those conditions are that a candidate has the necessary preconvention delegate votes to assure him the nomination or that the majority of Pennsylvania's delegates express a desire to support a candidate other than Scranton.

A statewide Goldwater organization is expected to be announced Friday when Goldwater will be in Pittsburgh to address alumni of the Harvard Business School, the Bulletin said.

Bennett S. Chapple Jr., administrative vice president of the U.S. Steel Corp., was reported to have accepted the post of Western Pennsylvania campaign manager for Goldwater. He was not available for comment on the report.

A statewide drive for Goldwater campaign funds already is under way.

OPEN HOUSE TODAY

Ridgecrest Nursing Home Is Expanded

Dedication of a new chapel and tours of new facilities which have doubled the size of the Ridgecrest Nursing Home, located at the corner of Splane and Landrum in West Monroe, will be features of an open house program from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. today.

The home, opened June 15, 1962, is owned by Jeff Caldwell Jr. and Jerry Hibbard, and is operated by Mrs. Vera Caldwell. Mrs. Louise Camp, a registered nurse, is supervisor of nurses.

In the expansion of the home, a new wing was added, and a separate building constructed to house laundry facilities. In the new wing are 10 rooms for patients, a beauty shop, barber shop, pharmacy for use of pharmacist who comes to the home daily, nurses lounge, and a chapel with pulpit and seating accomodations for worship services.

Kitchen facilities have been expanded and all-new electric facilities installed. The nursing home has a pink brick front and the remainder of the structure is of concrete block. The laundry building is also of brick and concrete block construction.

Sunday school and church services are held regularly at the home which is located on a 12-acre, tree shaded plot three blocks north of Glenwood Hospital. The home has a program of planned recreation.

It also features 24 hour a day nursing care and is staffed by 30 employees. It is licensed for 68 residents, has an intercom call system to every bed, air conditioning and heating systems which are electrically powered and background music.

The home is approved for welfare patients.

Agents Warned On Advertising

Real estate brokers and salesmen have been reminded that they may not advertise property for sale by using a telephone number alone.

John Wesley Glover, director of the department of occupational standards, has stated that it is against the rules and regulations of the Louisiana Real Estate Commission for a broker or salesman to advertise by telephone number alone.

"All licensed real estate brokers must advertise in the name or manner in which they are bonded and licensed," Glover stated. "Salesmen cannot advertise in their names unless the name of their broker is shown."

Welcome!

We cordially join the management of Ridgecrest Nursing Home in inviting you to attend Open House this afternoon.

Dr. Price Gives Girls Tip About Selecting Mate

LINVILLE (Special) — A Northeast Louisiana State College professor gave a large audience of Union Parish Future Homemakers a special tip on selecting a husband here Friday.

Speaking at the morning session held in the Linville High School gymnasium, acting dean L. L. Price of the college's Division of Pure and Applied Sciences advised his audience of high school girls to pick their husband not according to the kind of work he does, but how well he is prepared to do that work.

"Many of our young people will plan careers that will not require college, but training of training of some sort is necessary," he said. "Girls, be careful of that young man that makes promises but will not prepare himself."

REAR ECHELONS REMOVED

'Big Lift' Arouses Cutback Questions

Editor's Note — Was "exercise Big Lift a prelude to major withdrawals of U.S. forces from Europe, as many in West Germany feared? What changes in the makeup of overseas forces will result from changing military technology? These questions are explored in this comprehensive story by an Associated Press reporter, a veteran of the Pentagon, who flew to Europe in the vanguard of the "Big Lift" maneuver.

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Next year's military budget will provide for "nibbling around the edges" of huge U.S. forces posted overseas but no significant troop reductions in Western Europe or the Far East, informed sources said Saturday.

These sources told a reporter that whatever reductions are contemplated will involve a further cutback in rear echelon support elements and probably some trimming of tactical air units in Europe.

But they said they expect few, if any, combat ground force cuts abroad at least through the fiscal year which starts next July and runs to mid-1965.

The new budget, now in the final stages of preparation, takes into account the costs involved in maintaining forces at planned levels in various places.

Speculation about impending big-scale U.S. troops withdrawals, especially from Germany, was stoked by the recent "exercise Big Lift." This operation saw Air Force transports carry more than 15,000 soldiers of the 2nd Armored Division to West Germany from Ft. Hood, Tex., in less than three days.

Deputy Secretary of Defense Roswell L. Gilpatric appeared to give foundation to the speculation. In a speech on the eve of Big Lift, the Pentagon's second in command said that capability should enable the United States to make "useful reductions in its heavy overseas military expenditures."

The Germans immediately recoiled and chose to regard Big Life as a prelude to a slash in the strong U.S. ground forces arrayed in their country to protect them and the rest of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization from enormous Soviet power on the other side of the Iron Curtain.

There are many who believe the Gilpatric speech was a trial balloon, although some of his associates deny this.

If it was a trial balloon, it was shot full of holes quickly and the Kennedy administration swiftly reeled in the line holding it aloft.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Secretary of the Army Cyrus R. Vance went to Germany and sought to reassure the Germans.

It was stressed that Big Lift was a demonstration of U.S. ability to reinforce the North Atlantic Treaty Organization promptly in a period of tension, not a forerunner to slimming down the U.S. military presence in West Germany.

And at his news conference on Oct. 31, President Kennedy declared "we intend to keep our combat forces in Germany as they are today, and that's more than six combat divisions."

But Kennedy used the term "as long as they are required." This, it was noted, could be an escape hatch if a decision is made later that a pullback would be in the national interest.

Recent Soviet harassment of U.S. military convoys along the autobahn connecting West Germany with West Berlin would seem to make less likely any such decision for some time to come.

The uneasiness in Germany, quieted at least temporarily by the Kennedy - Rusk - Vance assurances, may revive in the wake of an action the Pentagon announced Friday.

Nearly 20 per cent of the 100 B47 medium jet nuclear bombers based in Britain and Spain are to be brought home from England by next July.

This move should come as no surprise — it has been in the works for better than a year and much has been said publicly about it.

In essence, the B47s are being withdrawn from Europe because the United States now has a growing arsenal of intercontinental ballistic missiles able to hit Russian targets from the United States, and a fleet of Polaris missile - firing submarines. These advanced weapons more than make up the striking power of the 13-year-old bombers.

The Air Force refuses to acknowledge that the B47 is obsolescent, but in fact it has been retiring such planes since 1959. By the end of 1965, the B47 will be a thing of the past.

The Defense Department says "we now have more than 500 ICBM's operational in the United States and 10 Polaris submarines deployed, each with 16 missiles." Also ready to strike are about 600 B52 heavy jet bombers.

The advance of technology has brought other changes in the U.S. military stance in Europe. Sixty intermediate range Thor missiles supplied to Britain and 45 Jupiter IRBM's given to Italy and Turkey have been removed because they stood vulnerable on above - ground pads and because better weapons have come along to replace their firepower.

Also, Polaris subs are now roaming the Mediterranean and this may mean that one of two U.S. carriers assigned there may be pulled back. This prospect bothers some NATO officials and many U.S. navy advocates of the carrier.

Somewhat overlooked in the attention paid to the dramatic airlift of a full armored division to Europe in "Big Lift" was the performance of a composite air strike force of Tactical jet fighters, fighter-bombers, reconnaissance planes and transports.

These 117 planes, including three squadrons of F100 Super Sabres jets and F105 Thunderchiefs, spanned the Atlantic within nine hours to provide support for the division in war games. They were stationed temporarily at bases which have been kept on standby in France.

The thinking now is that longer range fighters and other tactical planes need not be based forward in Europe on long-term tours. Instead, squadrons may be sent overseas on three-month or so rotation.

This rotation system has been in use for some time in fulfilling U.S. air commitments to NATO in Italy and Turkey. It also is used by Strategic Air Command B47 bombers in Britain and Spain.

If this "multibase" approach is broadened, as appears likely, it would mean a reduction in the 110,000 Air Force men stationed in Europe—and a reduction, too, in the 120,000 wives and children of these men abroad with them.

One result: savings in dollar spending outside the country and an easing of the gold dollar drain.

As a matter of fact, the United States has gradually been scaling down its ground forces in Europe which reached a peak of about 272,000 during the Berlin crisis.

4 In Superintendent's Race

By JAMES MCLEAN

BATON ROUGE (AP) — The six-way race for state superintendent of education falls short of fireworks in the campaign for governor, but the outcome means a lot in Louisiana's future.

The rising cost of government is a big issue in every state election. Education always consumes a major portion of state income.

For the first time in 16 years, Louisiana voters will turn toward a new state superintendent in the Dec. 7 Democratic primary.

State Supt. Shelby M. Jackson, now in his fourth term and an easy winner in past contests for re-election, jumped into the campaign for governor this time.

A constitutional State Board of Education operates as the policy-making agency for public education, nine state universities and colleges, trade schools and special schools.

But the elected, constitutional office of the state superintendent, under Jackson, became a powerful part of the state's educational structure.

Four rivals for state superintendent are on leave from the State Department of Education. They are Charles J. Perilloux Sr., department supervisor of college plants; Archie E. Robinson, assistant superintendent for vocational education; Raphiel Teagle, state director of high schools since 1956, and Miss Evelyn Terrell, state supervisor of the school lunch program.

The two other candidates are President William J. Dodd of the State Education Board, Twice a candidate for governor and a past president of the Louisiana Teachers' Association, and Supt. F. F. (Doak) Wimberly of Iberia Parish schools, for years top leader of teachers in pushing legislation they want —including pay raises.

Dodd, backed by the Louisiana AFL-CIO, drew critical fire of Teagle and Wimberly. They emphasized the need for a top-grade educator rather than what they called a professional politician.

Dodd has served as state legislator, lieutenant governor, state comptroller and member of the State Board of Education.

He is the only candidate with the background and know-how to gain the money education needs, Dodd countered.

Traditionally, the superintendent of education post has been held by a man with strong personality and political influences.

OPEN HOUSE TODAY

Ridgecrest Nursing Home Is Expanded

Dedication of a new chapel and tours of new facilities which have doubled the size of the Ridgecrest Nursing Home, located at the corner of Splane and Landrum in West Monroe, will be features of an open house program from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. today.

The home, opened June 15, 1962, is owned by Jeff Caldwell Jr. and Jerry Hibbard, and is operated by Mrs. Vera Caldwell. Mrs. Louise Camp, a registered nurse, is supervisor of nurses.

In the expansion of the home, a new wing was added, and a separate building constructed to house laundry facilities. In the new wing are 10 rooms for patients, a beauty shop, barber shop, pharmacy for use of pharmacist who comes to the home daily, nurses lounge, and a chapel with pulpit and seating accomodations for worship services.

Kitchen facilities have been expanded and all-new electric facilities installed. The nursing home has a pink brick front and the remainder of the structure is of concrete block. The laundry building is also of brick and concrete block construction.

Sunday school and church services are held regularly at the home which is located on a 12-acre, tree shaded plot three blocks north of Glenwood Hospital. The home has a program of planned recreation.

It also features 24 hour a day nursing care and is staffed by 30 employees. It is licensed for 68 residents, has an intercom call system to every bed, air conditioning and heating systems which are electrically powered and background music.

The home is approved for welfare patients.

Agents Warned On Advertising

Real estate brokers and salesmen have been reminded that they may not advertise property for sale by using a telephone number alone.

John Wesley Glover, director of the department of occupational standards, has stated that it is against the rules and regulations of the Louisiana Real Estate Commission for a broker or salesman to advertise by telephone number alone.

"All licensed real estate brokers must advertise in the name or manner in which they are bonded and licensed," Glover stated. "Salesmen cannot advertise in their names unless the name of their broker is shown."

Dr. Price Gives Girls Tip About Selecting Mate

LINVILLE (Special) — A Northeast Louisiana State College professor gave a large audience of Union Parish Future Homemakers a special tip on selecting a husband here Friday.

Speaking at the morning session held in the Linville High School gymnasium, acting dean L. L. Price of the college's Division of Pure and Applied Sciences advised his audience of high school girls to pick their husband not according to the kind of work he does, but how well he is prepared to do that work.

"Many of our young people will plan careers that will not require college, but training of training of some sort is necessary," he said. "Girls, be careful of that young man that makes promises but will not prepare himself."

REAR ECHELONS REMOVED

'Big Lift' Arouses Cutback Questions

Editor's Note — Was "exercise Big Lift a prelude to major withdrawals of U.S. forces from Europe, as many in West Germany feared? What changes in the makeup of overseas forces will result from changing military technology? These questions are explored in this comprehensive story by an Associated Press reporter, a veteran of the Pentagon, who flew to Europe in the vanguard of the "Big Lift" maneuver.

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Next year's military budget will provide for "nibbling around the edges" of huge U.S. forces posted overseas but no significant troop reductions in Western Europe or the Far East, informed sources said Saturday.

These sources told a reporter that whatever reductions are contemplated will involve a further cutback in rear echelon support elements and probably some trimming of tactical air units in Europe.

But they said they expect few, if any, combat ground force cuts abroad at least through the fiscal year which starts next July and runs to mid-1965.

The new budget, now in the final stages of preparation, takes into account the costs involved in maintaining forces at planned levels in various places.

Speculation about impending big-scale U.S. troops withdrawals, especially from Germany, was stoked by the recent "exercise Big Lift." This operation saw Air Force transports carry more than 15,000 soldiers of the 2nd Armored Division to West Germany from Ft. Hood, Tex., in less than three days.

Deputy Secretary of Defense Roswell L. Gilpatric appeared to give foundation to the speculation. In a speech on the eve of Big Lift, the Pentagon's second in command said that capability should enable the United States to make "useful reductions in its heavy overseas military expenditures."

The Germans immediately recoiled and chose to regard Big Life as a prelude to a slash in the strong U.S. ground forces arrayed in their country to protect them and the rest of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization from enormous Soviet power on the other side of the Iron Curtain.

There are many who believe the Gilpatric speech was a trial balloon, although some of his associates deny this.

If it was a trial balloon, it was shot full of holes quickly and the Kennedy administration swiftly reeled in the line holding it aloft.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Secretary of the Army Cyrus R. Vance went to Germany and sought to reassure the Germans.

It was stressed that Big Lift was a demonstration of U.S. ability to reinforce the North Atlantic Treaty Organization promptly in a period of tension, not a forerunner to slimming down the U.S. military presence in West Germany.

And at his news conference on Oct. 31, President Kennedy declared "we intend to keep our combat forces in Germany as they are today, and that's more than six combat divisions."

But Kennedy used the term "as long as they are required." This, it was noted, could be an escape hatch if a decision is made later that a pullback would be in the national interest.

Recent Soviet harassment of U.S. military convoys along the autobahn connecting West Germany with West Berlin would seem to make less likely any such decision for some time to come.

The uneasiness in Germany, quieted at least temporarily by the Kennedy - Rusk - Vance assurances, may revive in the wake of an action the Pentagon announced Friday.

Nearly 20 per cent of the 100 B47 medium jet nuclear bombers based in Britain and Spain are to be brought home from England by next July.

This move should come as no surprise — it has been in the works for better than a year and much has been said publicly about it.

In essence, the B47s are being withdrawn from Europe because the United States now has a growing arsenal of intercontinental ballistic missiles able to hit Russian targets from the United States, and a fleet of Polaris missile - firing submarines. These advanced weapons more than make up the striking power of the 13-year-old bombers.

The Air Force refuses to acknowledge that the B47 is obsolescent, but in fact it has been retiring such planes since 1959. By the end of 1965, the B47 will be a thing of the past.

The Defense Department says "we now have more than 500 ICBM's operational in the United States and 10 Polaris submarines deployed, each with 16 missiles." Also ready to strike are about 600 B52 heavy jet bombers.

The advance of technology has brought other changes in the U.S. military stance in Europe. Sixty intermediate range Thor missiles supplied to Britain and 45 Jupiter IRBM's given to Italy and Turkey have been removed because they stood vulnerable on above - ground pads and because better weapons have come along to replace their firepower.

Also, Polaris subs are now roaming the Mediterranean and this may mean that one of two U.S. carriers assigned there may be pulled back. This prospect bothers some NATO officials and many U.S. navy advocates of the carrier.

Somewhat overlooked in the attention paid to the dramatic airlift of a full armored division to Europe in "Big Lift" was the performance of a composite air strike force of Tactical jet fighters, fighter-bombers, reconnaissance planes and transports.

These 117 planes, including three squadrons of F100 Super Sabres jets and F105 Thunderchiefs, spanned the Atlantic within nine hours to provide support for the division in war games. They were stationed temporarily at bases which have been kept on standby in France.

The thinking now is that longer range fighters and other tactical planes need not be based forward in Europe on long-term tours. Instead, squadrons may be sent overseas on three-month or so rotation.

This rotation system has been in use for some time in fulfilling U.S. air commitments to NATO in Italy and Turkey. It also is used by Strategic Air Command B47 bombers in Britain and Spain.

If this "multibase" approach is broadened, as appears likely, it would mean a reduction in the 110,000 Air Force men stationed in Europe—and a reduction, too, in the 120,000 wives and children of these men abroad with them.

THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK

Dramatic Living Room Gives Split A Lift

IMPRESSIVE SPLIT LEVEL: This home contains up to five bedrooms in a basic area of only 1,553 square feet. The main entrance is framed by vertical posts with a flat roof which extends around the side. Decorative wall of concrete blocks adds to the contemporary look.

A new twist to split level design, aimed at giving the living room added formality, is but one of many luxurious touches in this modest four-bedroom home.

The large living room in effect is at an intermediate level — a step up from the foyer, a step down from the dining room.

The combination raised and sunken treatment not only adds a dramatic dimension to the room, but also clearly defines its perimeter. It makes a separate platform of the approach to the bedroom stair, for example, giving the room an added sense of privacy.

Another clever as well as functional feature is the vanity room in the master bedroom. Actually it is a part of the bedroom; a private dressing area with closet nearby. But when the interior bedroom door is closed it becomes a powder room for guests, ideally located adjoining the main bath.

A 4' by 6' private balcony with extended solid walls provides additional glamor for the main bedroom: a secluded spot for coffee and the Sunday paper, or for a final cigarette before retiring.

For all its glamorous innovations the house remains a medium sized home of 1,553 square feet on the living and bedroom levels, the basic area, within comfortable dimensions of 56' 1" wide by 30'8" deep. It was designed by architect Rudolph A. Matern as H-2 in the House of the Week series.

The house has a crisp, contemporary look from the outside. Its front entrance is framed by vertical posts with a flat roof which extends around the side as a three-foot covering over the garage doors.

The flat roofline combines with a decorative concrete block wall which extends nearly eight feet beyond the corner of the house to give an added appearance of width.

A low planter beneath the living room bow window extends similarly beyong the opposite wall.

ADDITIONAL DETAILS

A large and impressive foyer distributes traffic effectively to all the levels of the house. Even the garage connects with the foyer rather than to some lower-level room. A large coat closet is flanked by planters for a decorative touch.

A broad staircase with one end dramatically curved leads to the formal living room, nicely proportioned at 21' by 13'6". A large bow window and corner fireplace offer excellent opportunities for creative furniture arrangements.

The dining room is up one step and it, too, is well sized for a family of five, six, or seven. Sliding glass doors lead to the terrace porch.

The kitchen and breakfast room combined offer more than 15' of width across the back, enough to accommodate the whole family without anybody getting under the housewife's feet. The efficient U-shape of the work area further assures this as well as providing a maximum of counter top and cabinets in a minimum amount of space.

The breakfast area has a wrought iron balcony and planter overlooking the family room.

From the work area, a mother can keep an eye on both the family room and the backyard, the latter by virture of six-feet of glass over the double sink.

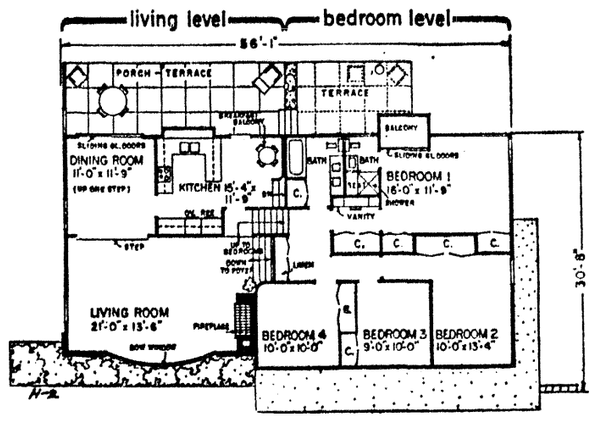
All three family bedrooms are located across the front. Note the abundance of closet space in all the rooms, especially the master bedroom and front corner bedroom.

Downstairs, on the level directly below, is a possible fifth bedroom with an adjoining lavatory. The lavatory also serves the family room and adjacent terrace.

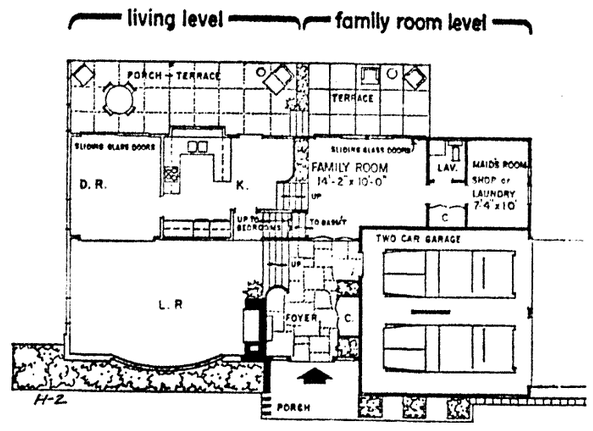
H-2 STATISTICS

A four-level split with living breakfast room, foyer, family room, 2½ baths, four bedrooms plus extra room which could become fifth bedroom or maid's room. Living and bedroom levels contain 1,553 square feet not including porch; family room level contains 433 square feet not including garage. Over-all dimensions are 56'1" wide by 30'8" deep.

A full study of this architect-designed House of the Week may be obtained by writing THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK c-o the Monroe Morning World, Monroe, La. and enclosing 50 cents to cover cost of handling and mailing. Please specify House Plan H-2.



FLOOR PLANS: The living room and bedroom levels contain 1,553 square feet not including the porch. The family room level, not including the garage, adds 433 square feet of bonus space. Over-all dimensions are 30'8" deep by 56'1" wide.



Private Interest Gets Money For Tank Raisings

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The New Orleans States-Item reported Saturday that a tugboat donated to civil defense by the federal government later cost the government $34,320 in helping raise sunken chlorine tanks from the Mississippi.

The newspaper said U.S. engineers records showed that $34,320 was paid by the Army to private interests for services of the towboat C-Horse.

Chlorine gas on a sunken barge in the Mississippi River near Natchez, Miss., was recovered in October 1962.

A Morgan City man, one of the private principals involved, told the newspaper he obtained the tug from the greater Krotz Springs Port Commission to make repairs on it and that it was in Natchez on a test run.

Federal regulations forbid use of government surplus equipment is requisitioned.

Solons' Waiter Attends Paris NATO Meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head waiter of the House of Representatives restaurant accompanied the U.S. delegation to a NATO parliamentarians meeting in Paris, it was learned Saturday.

Ernest Petinaud, who has been waiting on tables at the House since 1922, was taken along by Rep. Wayne L. Hays, D-Ohio, chairman of the U.S. delegation.

Hays' office was unable to say in what capacity Petinaud went to Paris for the week-long session, which opened Monday. The delegation included 10 members of the House and made the trip in an Air Force plane.

The supervisor of the House restaurant said Petinaud told him earlier in the year that he had been invited by Hays to go to Europe. Petinaud saved his vacation time and had three weeks accumulated when he left for Paris on Nov. 1.

Mock Air Battle Over India City Shows Alertness

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—Attacking bombers got the nod over defending fighters in the opening phase of British, Indian and Australian air maneuvers Saturday.

British Royal Air Force Javedian Hunter jets scrambled aloft from a field near Calcutta to try to protect that city from intruding Indian and Australian bombers.

Officials judged the bombers came out ahead.

"A few were intercepted but a large number were not," Air Vice Marshal Arjan Singh told newsmen in New Delhi.

Nevertheless, he pronounced himself satisfied with the day's operations. He said radar and communications equipment supplied to India by the United States and Britain last summer worked well.

The exercise showed what Indain air force training on this new equipment has accomplished and what remains to be done, he said.

British and Indian fighters will have a second and final workout in the Calcutta area next Wednesday and Thursday.

A U. S. F100 squadron and Indian interceptors will hold exercises in the New Delhi area Nov. 14-19.

The Indian marshal, in response to questions declared India had no particular country in mind as the enemy in conducting the exercises. He said they were designed simply to train the Indian air force in new techniques with new equipment.

The exercises are viewed in unofficial quarters as giving experience in Indian operations to Western air forces and serving notice on Peking of their possible intervention in case of any Chinese Communist air attack on India.

The breakfast area has a wrought iron balcony and planter overlooking the family room.

From the work area, a mother can keep an eye on both the family room and the backyard, the latter by virture of six-feet of glass over the double sink.

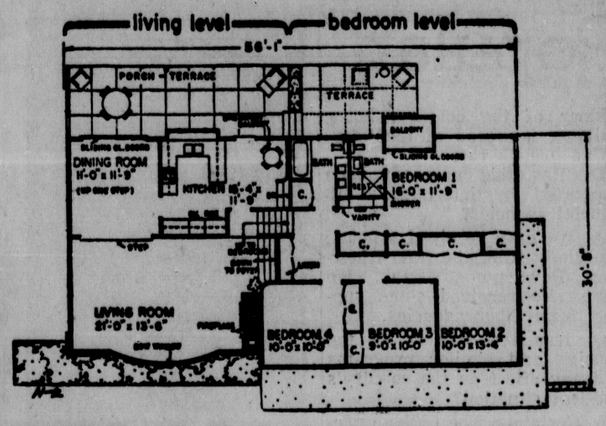
All three family bedrooms are located across the front. Note the abundance of closet space in all the rooms, especially the master bedroom and front corner bedroom.

Downstairs, on the level directly below, is a possible fifth bedroom with an adjoining lavatory. The lavatory also serves the family room and adjacent terrace.

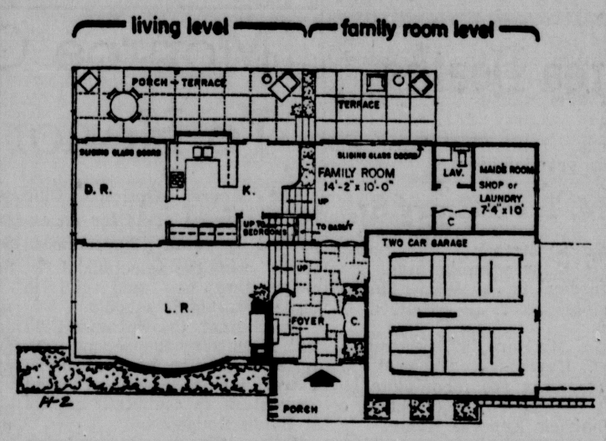
H-2 STATISTICS

A four-level split with living breakfast room, foyer, family room, 2½ baths, four bedrooms plus extra room which could become fifth bedroom or maid's room. Living and bedroom levels contain 1,553 square feet not including porch; family room level contains 433 square feet not including garage. Overall dimensions are 56'1" wide by 30'8" deep.

A full study of this architect-designed House of the Week may be obtained by writing THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK c-o the Monroe Morning World, Monroe, La. and enclosing 50 cents to cover cost of handling and mailing. Please specify House Plan H-2.



FLOOR PLANS: The living room and bedroom levels contain 1,553 square feet not including the porch. The family room level, not including the garage, adds 433 square feet of bonus space. Over-all dimensions are 30'8" deep by 56'1" wide.



Mock Air Battle Over India City Shows Alertness

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—Attacking bombers got the nod over defending fighters in the opening phase of British, Indian and Australian air maneuvers Saturday.

British Royal Air Force Javedian Hunter jets scrambled aloft from a field near Calcutta to try to protect that city from intruding Indian and Australian bombers.

Officials judged the bombers came out ahead.

"A few were intercepted but a large number were not," Air Vice Marshal Arjan Singh told newsmen in New Delhi.

Nevertheless, he pronounced himself satisfied with the day's operations. He said radar and communications equipment supplied to India by the United States and Britain last summer worked well.

The exercise showed what Indain air force training on this new equipment has accomplished and what remains to be done, he said.

British and Indian fighters will have a second and final workout in the Calcutta area next Wednesday and Thursday.

A U. S. F100 squadron and Indian interceptors will hold exercises in the New Delhi area Nov. 14-19.

The Indian marshal, in response to questions declared India had no particular country in mind as the enemy in conducting the exercises. He said they were designed simply to train the Indian air force in new techniques with new equipment.

The exercises are viewed in unofficial quarters as giving experience in Indian operations to Western air forces and serving notice on Peking of their possible intervention in case of any Chinese Communist air attack on India.

Private Interest Gets Money For Tank Raisings

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The New Orleans States-Item reported Saturday that a tugboat donated to civil defense by the federal government later cost the government $34,320 in helping raise sunken chlorine tanks from the Mississippi.

The newspaper said U.S. engineers records showed that $34,320 was paid by the Army to private interests for services of the towboat C-Horse.

Chlorine gas on a sunken barge in the Mississippi River near Natchez, Miss., was recovered in October 1962.

A Morgan City man, one of the private principals involved, told the newspaper he obtained the tug from the greater Krotz Springs Port Commission to make repairs on it and that it was in Natchez on a test run.

Federal regulations forbid use of government surplus equipment is requisitioned.

Solons' Waiter Attends Paris NATO Meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head waiter of the House of Representatives restaurant accompanied the U.S. delegation to a NATO parliamentarians meeting in Paris, it was learned Saturday.

Ernest Petinaud, who has been waiting on tables at the House since 1922, was taken along by Rep. Wayne L. Hays, D-Ohio, chairman of the U.S. delegation.

Hays' office was unable to say in what capacity Petinaud went to Paris for the week-long session, which opened Monday. The delegation included 10 members of the House and made the trip in an Air Force plane.

The supervisor of the House restaurant said Petinaud told him earlier in the year that he had been invited by Hays to go to Europe. Petinaud saved his vacation time and had three weeks accumulated when he left for Paris on Nov. 1.

President Of Chile Remains Popular

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP)—Every morning around 10:30 the president of Chile strides out of his apartment house, waves to any citizens who happen to notice, and walks, unguarded, to his office 10 blocks away.

Frequently Jorge Alessandri Rodriguez finds 20 or 30 people gathered on the sidewalk to applaud him as he sets out. Others greet him at street corners where he waits for lights to turn green.

Despite all of Chile's problems—the same kind of problems which have created anti-government violence in other Latin lands—Alessandri is an immensely popular figure and he presides over a peaceful country. What makes the difference in Chile?

Alessandri's answer to that question was developed in an interview with The Associated Press. Though he spoke strictly in terms of Chilean interests his words had a broader significance.

He had found, he said, that "the country is tired of old-fashioned, sterile politics and is hungry for a healthy political approach to basic national problems.

"I have ruled for five years," he said, "with complete public order without having to resort to decrees or repressive measures to maintain peace and tranquility. This has been a result of popular satisfaction with the drastic policies for improvement and progress put into effect by my government."

These reforms have included periods of austerity in his constant battle with inflation, extensive road construction, a housing program that has finally begun to reduce appalling city slum areas, and agricultural improvement projects.

Moscow-linked communism is a problem in Chile and may be a serious threat in the future. It was not one of the problems Alessandri chose to discuss. Presidential elections are coming late next year and the country is getting steamed up. Presumably he did not want to talk about specific domestic political matters; in Chile the Communist party is legal.

The importance he attaches to tackling Chile's basic problems makes it apparent that Alessandri believes the kind of reform program he has followed gives the best answer to communism.

Though he is known for having run a "businessman's government," he is regarded by other Chilean leaders and by diplomats as a master politician. If he is, his politics seems to have consisted mainly in getting done a great many things that a majority of this country's 2½ million voters thought should be done.

The bachelor president lives with a simplicity as rare for chiefs of state as his daily walks through the streets. He usually dines with a married sister whose apartment is in the same building. He does not smoke or take alcoholic drinks and he avoids fancy dinners and cocktail parties.

Alessandri, 67, is the son of one of Chile's greatest presidents of a generation ago. He was trained as a civil engineer and spent most of his mature life in business, running a paper manufacturing enterprise. His first important government post was that of minister of finance, 1948 to 1950.

In 1958 he ran for president as an independent. His cabinets usually have been composed of men skilled in policy or administration.

In La Moneda palace his desk is piled with books and papers and has the comfortable, cluttered look reflecting a man who enjoys his job.

Alessandri is barred by the constitution from re-election. He has said that even if the prohibition were removed he would not take a second term. Nevertheless there is a move afoot to make the change and, in effect, draft him.

Here are excerpts from The Associated Press interview with the Chilean president:

Q. Do you consider the present state of U.S.-Chilean relations satisfactory, especially with respect to the Alliance for Progress?

A. I consider that relations are very satisfactory. At times we have had differences with their financial agencies and also over the implementation of the Alliance for Progress, but I realize that Presidnet Kennedy's administration faces difficulties in getting foreign aid funds approved.

Q. Do you think any changes should be made in the policies or operations of the Alliance for Progress?

A. I believe the United States should agree to a greater independent use of foreign aid resources by those countries which have proved their willingness and ability to carry out effective reforms for development in the economic, social, and political fields, and which have demonstrated that they make good use of these resources. But this does not mean in any way that controls over these resources should be eliminated.

Q. One of the first impressions gained by a visitor is that Chile is actually putting into effect many reforms which the United States would like to see throughout Latin America. Is this correct?

A. Yes. That is true because my government is striving to improve the living standards of the people. Since I took over five years ago all available resources have been devoted to building houses, improving the road system, expanding education, and supporting all other measures which may result in progress for the country.

Q. Does your program equal the population growth rate?

A. For the first time in the history of the country, house building is ahead of the population growth rate.

Q. Has this program been supported by international financial agencies?

A. We have received support, especially from the Inter-American Development Bank. We have also received some support from other agencies.

Q. Has the success of the housing and similar programs had any effect on the country's political situation?

A. Certainly. The Chilean people greatly appreciate what the government has been able to do. It is a remarkable phenomenon that after five years in the presidency I still enjoy great support throughout the country.

Tunisia—Once Carthage Boasts Rich Past, Future

TUNIS, Tunisia (UPI) — A city that stood here was once described as "after Rome, the busiest and most corrupt center of the West."

The city was Carthage and it was a Roman governor, who so described it almost 1,200 years ago. Carthage was already 1,600 years old.

Modern buildings rise now from the Roman baths to look over the Mediterranean towards Italy. Freighters and oilers push through nearby waters, once the domain of the Barbary Coast pirates.

The Phoenicians, sailing west from what now is Lebanon founded Carthage about 800 B.C. Through the next 2,700 years Romans, rabs, Turks and French mans, Arabs, Turks and French claimed the area. Spain made a pass at it in the 16th Century and the British controlled the seas around it 300 years later.

The Allies drove the German army from Tunisia into the Mediterranean in World War II.

From this battering of cultures a predominantly Arab state arose to independence in 1957. A poor country by American and European standards, Tunisia is neutral, pro-West and proud.

Tunisia is an agricultural country. Much of the land, though fertile, is underdeveloped.

The country covers 48,332 square miles, a little less than North Carolina and a little more than Indiana. It is half-way between the Straits of Gibraltar and the Suez Canal and, with Sicily, forms the barrier between the eastern and western Mediterranean. Tunisia's 900 miles of coastline gave it economic and political importance hundreds of years ago.

Tunisia is the smallest of the north African states in area, sandwiched between the Mediterranean on the north and east, Libya to the south and Algeria to the west.

There are 4,255,000 persons living in Tunisia, about the same number as in Missouri. About 4 million of these are Tunisian Moslems. The remainder are Europeans, mostly French and Italians, Jews and "foreign" Moslems.

The native Tunisian is either Arab or Berber, a fairer people than the Arabs.

The country became autonomous March 20, 1956, after receiving increasing self-government measures from France since 1947. She became a full-fledged republic one year later under President Habib Bourguiba.

Bourguiba was re-elected president in 1959 for a five-year term.

The president's Neo-Destour or "new constitution" party is the only one in the country since the Communists were banned Jan. 1, 1963.

Internationally, Tunisia belongs to the growing group of "neutralist" or non-aligned nations—the young emerging countries of Africa and Asia who put their respective developments before membership in either of the world's power blocs.

North Africans, particularly, with their history of colonial domination, see identification with the Communists or the West as submitting to "neo - colonialism."

Tunisia is a "young" country. More than half its population is under 19 years of age.

Arabic is the national and official language although most educated Tunisians also speak French. Schooling is obligatory up to the equivalent of the ninth grade.

For higher education, there is the Moslem University of Zitouna in Tunis and the Institute of Advanced Studies. These will be incorporated into a new Tunisian university within six years.

Students wishing to study abroad are encouraged by government grants. Many of the civil servants were educated in France, for instance.

Geographically, Tunisia is mountainous, fertile and fairly well watered. On the coast, the climate is temperate. Inland, in the Atlas Mountains, soft Mediterranean breezes give way to whipping winds, like Upper Michigan on a November day.

The Tunsian Sahara occupies the whole of the southern division of Tunisia. But it is not all desert. Mountains, in the southeast, reach more than 4,000 feet and vegetation is abundant.

Rainfall averages about 22 inches a year compared to slightly more than seven inches in Arizona and 43 in New York. In the Tunisian Sahara rainfall is uneven. Two or three years may pass with none, then there may be violent floods and storms.

Besides agriculture, which employs more than 80 per cent of the work force, Tunisia also has minerals — lead, phosphates and zinc. Since independence her light industry, most fertilizers, carpets and shoes, has increased. So have her tourists.

But the country is poor. More than one-third of her population earns less than $37 annually.

People at this level would be farm laborers and peasants living in primitive conditions in the country on a diet of bread and dishes made from rice, oats and barley.

At a higher level there are people like Amer Ben Khaimas, a railway office clerk, who earns about $1,200 a year. He represents the growing lower middle class as Tunisia becomes industrialized.

Amer, 37, his wife Lallah and their three children share a three room apartment with a kitchen and bathroom overlooking the sea in Tunis.

The apartment is immaculate, but lightly furnished like most homes in hot countries. It has a small patio where the family often sits after the evening meal.

Amer and Lallah pay six dinars a month for rent. Most of the rest of his salary goes for clothes for himself and food. He is also buying a German-made radio on time and putting some money away. A national health program pays doctor and hospital bills.

As the world shrinks in the air age, Tunisia is discovering her potential as a tourist attraction.

Hotels rise above spectacular stretches of white sand. Their Moorish arches, patios, fountains and mosaics blend with the surf, palm tree and cactus.

Fifty miles southeast of Tunis is Hammamet, the best-developed holiday spot in the country. The ornate houses and swimming pools of European colonial officials have been replaced by hotels and motels against the background of orange and lemon groves.

Tunisia is encouraging foreign firms to build hotels and is already developing tourist regions itself.

According to Dr. John L. Mero of the University of California at Berkeley there is enough manganese, copper, cobalt and nickel in the ocean depths to meet man's needs for a million years at present consumption rates.

The Bureau of Mines this year asked $1.8 million for a study of deep sea mining prospects. The Budget Bureau trimmed the request to $412,000, which the House threw out. The Senate restored $228,000.

This, if it survives the legislative process, will be enough to start the survey. The bureau would use a ship loaned by the Maritime Commission from its reserve fleet and would base the operation in government - owned surplus facilities in the San Francisco Bay area.

HER SIXTH SENSE

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) —Earl D. Davis has acquired a lot of confidence in his wife's intuition. He left his billfold in his trouser pocket before retiring. The billfold contained considerable cash from a business sale made after the bank had closed.

When he awoke the following morning the billfold was gone. But the money was safe. Davis' wife had gotten worried and taken the money out of the billfold to hide it in a safe place. The thief just got an empty wallet.

SEN. JOHN TOWER

Sen. Tower To Speak Here

John G. Tower, Republican U.S. Senator from Texas will speak here Monday night at the invitation of the Monroe Junior Chamber of Commerce.

According to Chairman Luke Daniel, the senator will talk at 8 p.m. at the Ouachita Parish High School auditorium. He will be introduced by Monroe Mayor W. L. Howard.

Mayor Howard, together with several Jaycees, will meet Sen. Tower when he arrives at Selman Field at 5 p.m. Monday.

Sen. Tower is the first Republican to be elected to the Senate from Texas since 1870. He is the only Republican senator ever elected by popular vote from any of the former Confederate States.

An outspoken critic of the Kennedy administration, Sen. Tower will speak on "The ABC's of Conservatism."

He is assigned to two major Senate committees — Banking and Currency and Labor and Public Welfare. He is now second ranking Republican on the B & C Committee and ranking Republican on the Housing subcommittee. Sen. Tower is also ranking GOP solon on the Migratory Labor Subcommittee.

The Texas lawmaker led a field of 71 candidates in a special Senate election held in April, 1961, to fill the seat vacated by the then Sen. Lyndon Johnson.

Tower, now 38, was the youngest senator in the 87th Congress at the time of his election.

AWARDS TO BE GIVEN

Monroe Optimists To Honor Youths

The Monroe Optimist Club has announced plans for an expanded "Youth Appreciation Week" with the selection of the outstanding boy and girl in three local high schools.

In addition, the Optimist Club will repeat for the second consecutive year its sponsorship of a trip for a group of local youngsters to the state capitol at Baton Rouge.

With "Youth Appreciation Week" November 11-17th, Sheldon Ray, boys work chairman, explained, "We are attempting to put the emphasis on the fact that a great majority of our young people are good citizens."

He said because of this effort the Optimist Club would present awards to the outstanding boy and girl at Neville High School, Ouachita Parish High School and St. Matthews.

Principals and faculty members at the schools selected the students on the basis of all-around leadership," Ray explained.

The Ouachita awards will be made Tuesday, St. Matthews on Wednesday and Neville on Friday. George Brian, associate professor of speech, at Northeast State College will address the student bodies at Ouachita and St. Matthews.

Meantime, about 30 youngsters from Ouachita Parish High School will leave here early Thursday morning on a tour to Baton Rouge. The students will tour the Esso oil refinery, the governor's mansion and the capitol.

Last year the Optimist Club sent a group from Neville on the tour.

"We feel that a group of youngsters can learn much on this tour of the oil refinery and our state government facilities," Ray added.

He noted that public attention had been directed to the juvenile delinquency problem while the "normal, good youngsters are too often overlooked."

"That's the purpose of our 'Youth Appreciation Week' this year," the chairman stated.

I believe the United States should agree to a greater independent use of foreign aid resources by those countries which have proved their willingness and ability to carry out effective reforms for development in the economic, social, and political fields, and which have demonstrated that they make good use of these resources. But this does not mean in any way that controls over these resources should be eliminated.

Q. One of the first impressions gained by a visitor is that Chile is actually putting into effect many reforms which the United States would like to see throughout Latin America. Is this correct?

A. Yes. That is true because my government is striving to improve the living standards of the people. Since I took over five years ago all available resources have been devoted to building houses, improving the road system, expanding education, and supporting all other measures which may result in progress for the country.

Q. Does your program equal the population growth rate?

A. For the first time in the history of the country, house building is ahead of the population growth rate.

Q. Has this program been supported by international financial agencies?

A. We have received support, especially from the Inter-American Development Bank. We have also received some support from other agencies.

Q. Has the success of the housing and similar programs had any effect on the country's political situation?

A. Certainly. The Chilean people greatly appreciate what the government has been able to do. It is a remarkable phenomenon that after five years in the presidency I still enjoy great support throughout the country.

SEN. JOHN TOWER

Sen. Tower To Speak Here

John G. Tower, Republican U.S. Senator from Texas will speak here Monday night at the invitation of the Monroe Junior Chamber of Commerce.

According to Chairman Luke Daniel, the senator will talk at 8 p.m. at the Ouachita Parish High School auditorium. He will be introduced by Monroe Mayor W. L. Howard.

Mayor Howard, together with several Jaycees, will meet Sen. Tower when he arrives at Selman Field at 5 p.m. Monday.

Sen. Tower is the first Republican to be elected to the Senate from Texas since 1870. He is the only Republican senator ever elected by popular vote from any of the former Confederate States.

An outspoken critic of the Kennedy administration, Sen. Tower will speak on "The ABC's of Conservatism."

He is assigned to two major Senate committees — Banking and Currency and Labor and Public Welfare. He is now second ranking Republican on the B & C Committee and ranking Republican on the Housing subcommittee. Sen. Tower is also ranking GOP solon on the Migratory Labor Subcommittee.

The Texas lawmaker led a field of 71 candidates in a special Senate election held in April, 1961, to fill the seat vacated by the then Sen. Lyndon Johnson.

Tower, now 38, was the youngest senator in the 87th Congress at the time of his election.

AWARDS TO BE GIVEN

Monroe Optimists To Honor Youths

The Monroe Optimist Club has announced plans for an expanded "Youth Appreciation Week" with the selection of the outstanding boy and girl in three local high schools.

In addition, the Optimist Club will repeat for the second consecutive year its sponsorship of a trip for a group of local youngsters to the state capitol at Baton Rouge.

With "Youth Appreciation Week" November 11-17th, Sheldon Ray, boys work chairman, explained, "We are attempting to put the emphasis on the fact that a great majority of our young people are good citizens."

He said because of this effort the Optimist Club would present awards to the outstanding boy and girl at Neville High School, Ouachita Parish High School and St. Matthews.

Principals and faculty members at the schools selected the students on the basis of all-around leadership," Ray explained.

The Ouachita awards will be made Tuesday, St. Matthews on Wednesday and Neville on Friday. George Brian, associate professor of speech, at Northeast State College will address the student bodies at Ouachita and St. Matthews.

Meantime, about 30 youngsters from Ouachita Parish High School will leave here early Thursday morning on a tour to Baton Rouge. The students will tour the Esso oil refinery, the governor's mansion and the capitol.

Last year the Optimist Club sent a group from Neville on the tour.

"We feel that a group of youngsters can learn much on this tour of the oil refinery and our state government facilities," Ray added.

He noted that public attention had been directed to the juvenile delinquency problem while the "normal, good youngsters are too often overlooked."

"That's the purpose of our 'Youth Appreciation Week' this year," the chairman stated.

Tunisia—Once Carthage Boasts Rich Past, Future

TUNIS, Tunisia (UPI) — A city that stood here was once described as "after Rome, the busiest and most corrupt center of the West."

The city was Carthage and it was a Roman governor, who so described it almost 1,200 years ago. Carthage was already 1,600 years old.

Modern buildings rise now from the Roman baths to look over the Mediterranean towards Italy. Freighters and oilers push through nearby waters, once the domain of the Barbary Coast pirates.

The Phoenicians, sailing west from what now is Lebanon founded Carthage about 800 B.C. Through the next 2,700 years Romans, rabs, Turks and French mans, Arabs, Turks and French claimed the area. Spain made a pass at it in the 16th Century and the British controlled the seas around it 300 years later.

The Allies drove the German army from Tunisia into the Mediterranean in World War II.

From this battering of cultures a predominantly Arab state arose to independence in 1957. A poor country by American and European standards, Tunisia is neutral, pro-West and proud.

Tunisia is an agricultural country. Much of the land, though fertile, is underdeveloped.

The country covers 48,332 square miles, a little less than North Carolina and a little more than Indiana. It is half-way between the Straits of Gibraltar and the Suez Canal and, with Sicily, forms the barrier between the eastern and western Mediterranean. Tunisia's 900 miles of coastline gave it economic and political importance hundreds of years ago.

Tunisia is the smallest of the north African states in area, sandwiched between the Mediterranean on the north and east, Libya to the south and Algeria to the west.

There are 4,255,000 persons living in Tunisia, about the same number as in Missouri. About 4 million of these are Tunisian Moslems. The remainder are Europeans, mostly French and Italians, Jews and "foreign" Moslems.

The native Tunisian is either Arab or Berber, a fairer people than the Arabs.

The country became autonomous March 20, 1956, after receiving increasing self-government measures from France since 1947. She became a full-fledged republic one year later under President Habib Bourguiba.

Bourguiba was re-elected president in 1959 for a five-year term.

The president's Neo-Destour or "new constitution" party is the only one in the country since the Communists were banned Jan. 1, 1963.

Internationally, Tunisia belongs to the growing group of "neutralist" or non-aligned nations—the young emerging countries of Africa and Asia who put their respective developments before membership in either of the world's power blocs.

North Africans, particularly, with their history of colonial domination, see identification with the Communists or the West as submitting to "neo - colonialism."

Tunisia is a "young" country. More than half its population is under 19 years of age.

Arabic is the national and official language although most educated Tunisians also speak French. Schooling is obligatory up to the equivalent of the ninth grade.

For higher education, there is the Moslem University of Zitouna in Tunis and the Institute of Advanced Studies. These will be incorporated into a new Tunisian university within six years.

Students wishing to study abroad are encouraged by government grants. Many of the civil servants were educated in France, for instance.

Geographically, Tunisia is mountainous, fertile and fairly well watered. On the coast, the climate is temperate. Inland, in the Atlas Mountains, soft Mediterranean breezes give way to whipping winds, like Upper Michigan on a November day.

The Tunsian Sahara occupies the whole of the southern division of Tunisia. But it is not all desert. Mountains, in the southeast, reach more than 4,000 feet and vegetation is abundant.

Rainfall averages about 22 inches a year compared to slightly more than seven inches in Arizona and 43 in New York. In the Tunisian Sahara rainfall is uneven. Two or three years may pass with none, then there may be violent floods and storms.

Besides agriculture, which employs more than 80 per cent of the work force, Tunisia also has minerals — lead, phosphates and zinc. Since independence her light industry, most fertilizers, carpets and shoes, has increased. So have her tourists.

But the country is poor. More than one-third of her population earns less than $37 annually.

People at this level would be farm laborers and peasants living in primitive conditions in the country on a diet of bread and dishes made from rice, oats and barley.

At a higher level there are people like Amer Ben Khaimas, a railway office clerk, who earns about $1,200 a year. He represents the growing lower middle class as Tunisia becomes industrialized.

Amer, 37, his wife Lallah and their three children share a three room apartment with a kitchen and bathroom overlooking the sea in Tunis.

The apartment is immaculate, but lightly furnished like most homes in hot countries. It has a small patio where the family often sits after the evening meal.

Amer and Lallah pay six dinars a month for rent. Most of the rest of his salary goes for clothes for himself and food. He is also buying a German-made radio on time and putting some money away. A national health program pays doctor and hospital bills.

As the world shrinks in the air age, Tunisia is discovering her potential as a tourist attraction.

Hotels rise above spectacular stretches of white sand. Their Moorish arches, patios, fountains and mosaics blend with the surf, palm tree and cactus.

Fifty miles southeast of Tunis is Hammamet, the best-developed holiday spot in the country. The ornate houses and swimming pools of European colonial officials have been replaced by hotels and motels against the background of orange and lemon groves.

Tunisia is encouraging foreign firms to build hotels and is already developing tourist regions itself.

According to Dr. John L. Mero of the University of California at Berkeley there is enough manganese, copper, cobalt and nickel in the ocean depths to meet man's needs for a million years at present consumption rates.

The Bureau of Mines this year asked $1.8 million for a study of deep sea mining prospects. The Budget Bureau trimmed the request to $412,000, which the House threw out. The Senate restored $228,000.

This, if it survives the legislative process, will be enough to start the survey. The bureau would use a ship loaned by the Maritime Commission from its reserve fleet and would base the operation in government - owned surplus facilities in the San Francisco Bay area.

HER SIXTH SENSE

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) —Earl D. Davis has acquired a lot of confidence in his wife's intuition. He left his billfold in his trouser pocket before retiring. The billfold contained considerable cash from a business sale made after the bank had closed.

When he awoke the following morning the billfold was gone. But the money was safe. Davis' wife had gotten worried and taken the money out of the billfold to hide it in a safe place. The thief just got an empty wallet.

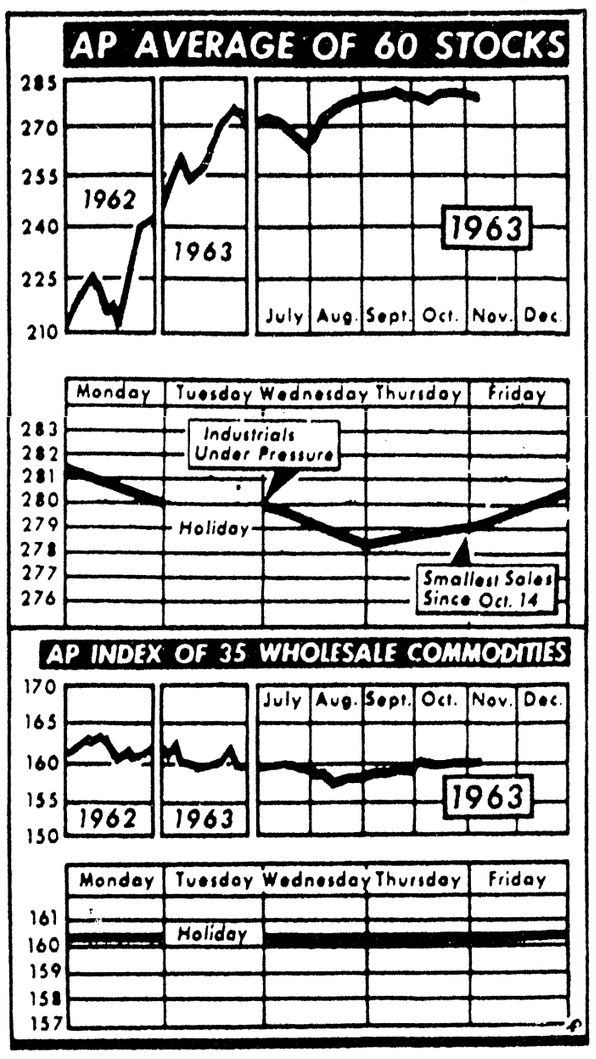
Ebbing Stocks Renew Gains In Last Bout



THE ASSOCIATED PRESS average of 60 stocks declined for the second straight week when it closed at 280.4 from 281.2 a week ago. The commodity index closed slightly higher at 160.2, up from 160.1 a week earlier. (AP Wirephoto)

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market last week took its second straight weekly decline on average but showed an impressive renewal of strength in its final session.

In the course of the week, Wall Street had to reckon with a surprise increase in margin requirements by the Federal Reserve Board. This raised to 70 per cent from 50 per cent the amount of "down payment" required in the purchase of stocks.

Stocks were already in a downtrend before the news came and this provided an excuse for further selling on Wednesday which brought about the sharpest one-day decline in more than a month.

Two sharp declines were followed by a moderate recovery on Thursday and a fairly strong rally on Friday.

The Dow Jones industrial average took a net loss of 2.92 at 750.81, but ended the week well above its Wednesday low of 744.03.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks declined .8 to 280.4 —a small loss, but its second straight weekly decline

The trading week was cut to four days by the election day holiday on Tuesday. Volume was 19,883,410 shares compared with 28,722,840 for the full, five-day trading week preceding.

In the bond market, prices drifted lower for both U.S government and corporate issues. It was the first time in two months that the two classes of securities moved in the same direction. The decline was attributed to a feeling that overall interest rates are headed upward.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange for last week totaled $25,758,000 par value. The previous week's total was $28,722,840.

TO BUY STOCKS

Investors Need Cash Increase

NEW YORK (AP)—Investors found out during the week that they are going to have to dig deeper into their pockets for hard cash to buy stocks.

And giant General Motors Corp. added some sweet icing to the economic cake by boosting its year-end dividend, a move hailed widely as indicating a strong business trend.

The Federal Reserve Board raised the down-payment requirement for purchasing stocks to 70 per cent from 50 per cent. This meant that an investor, to buy $1,000 worth of stocks must put up $700 cash instead of the $500 under the previous rate.

The board said it acted to restrain the excessive use of credit for speculative purposes.

Both the New York and American stock exchanges objected to this line of reasoning. They issued statements expressing the opinion that the rise in brokers' credits stemmed from an increase in the number and value of listed stocks and reflected the demands of an expanding economy.

The stock market fell sharply on Wednesday, the first day of trading after the Federal Reserve announcement, but brokers generally said they expected such a reaction to be only temporary and that they looked for higher prices in the months to come.

However, some said they anticipated a reduction in trading volume as a result of the margin hike.

General Motors, biggest of the automakers, aroused enthusiasm by declaring a $1.50-a-share year-end dividend in addition to its regular 50-cent quarterly payment. This brought total dividends to $4 for 1963, a year in which GM broke all records for profits and sales, compared with $3 in 1962.

GM's action was reflection of excellent times in the automobile industry although there was some disappointment in Wall Street that the regular dividend wasn't raised and the stock wasn't split.

The industry turned out an estimated 188,900 passenger cars, the highest ever for a week. This compares with 175,560 the previous week, 166,112 a year ago and the previous record of 184,000 in April 1955.

Car sales continued high with dealers delivering a record 769,000 units in October, a gain of 5 per cent over October 1962.

Demand for steel from the auto industry picked up steam and as a result steel production during the week showed a 1.5 per cent gain over the previous week. Output totaled 1,944,000 tons against 1,915,000 the prior week.

In addition to auto demand the steel market was supported by the appliance industry, railroad freight car builders and steel warehouses, which service small users of steel.

Taking a look ahead, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York said "prospects (of the economy) for the fourth quarter as a whole appear encouraging."

The bank found satisfaction with retail sales, the prospects for business spending and a sharp recovery in housing starts.

New contract demands of Teamsters Union President James R. Hoffa cast a cloud on the business horizon.

Business Briefs

ATTEND MEETING

Leon G. Sugar, president of Monroe Wholesale Drug Co., Inc., and Mrs. Sugar, 14 Deborah Dr. in Monroe, attended the 89th annual meeting of the National Wholesale Druggists' Association in Bal Harbour, Fla., Nov. 2-6.

APPOINTED

Crain Chemical Co., a Dallas, Tex., based firm, has announced the appointment of Edward J. Magee, West Monroe, as sales representative for the Northeast Louisiana and Southern Arkansas area.

Magee, recently in Dallas, took part in the firm's extensive sales training program and assumed his duties in the territory following a general sales convention November 1 and 2.

Crain is a manufacturer and distributor of sanitary chemicals and maintenance materials for institutional, industrial and commercial use, with representation in a 25 state area and foreign markets. The appointment of Magee is part of an over-all expansion program of the firm.

ASSETS RISE

American National Insurance Co. has reached the billion dollar mark in assets, company officials said Saturday.

It is credited with being the first Texas life insurance company to achieve the billion dollars in assets category and places it among only approximately 20 major companies, out of more than 1500 in the country, boasting of such a financial factor.

The assets figure, officials said, as of Sept. 30, was $1,025,752,669.33.

MANAGER

The reappointment of Louis F. Roberts as Memphis district sales manager of the General Tire & Rubber Co. was announced by Morgan J. Morgan, national manager, replacement tire sales.

Roberts, a General Tire sales executive since 1945, served as the Memphis district sales manager from 1949 through 1951. He is replacing Richey I. Brunskill, who has been promoted to manager, passenger tire sales, with headquarters in Akron, Ohio. Since 1954, Roberts has been Chicago district sales manager of General Tire. He served from 1951 through April, 1954, as Richmond, Va., district sales manager.

Toledo Bend Dam Bids Slated

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — The Louisiana and Texas Sabine River authorities have agreed on Jan. 3 as the date they will call for bids on a master contract for the Toledo Bend Dam power plant and related facilities.

The date was set at a Friday meeting of Toledo Bend project joint operation representatives and officials of three private electric utility companies which will buy the power to be generated at the dam.

Construction on the $60 million project is expected to start by May 1, the announcement said.

Before that date, the authorities must award the master contract and put $30 million in revenue bonds on the market to finance half the cost of the construction.

The remaining $30 million will be split between the states of Louisiana and Texas.

Ecumenical Council To Debate Issue

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A great debate is developing in the Roman Catholic Ecumenical Council on the structure of the Church's government. The exchange could expand this week but already sharp words have been used, unusual in such a conference.

Arguments in St. Peter's Friday about the Holy Office touched on but one phase of a controversy involving the whole Vatican curia, the central administration assisting the Pope.

Reformers are demanding a shakeup of historic proportions.

Pope Paul VI himself has called for a change.

Conservatives of the curia, whose 1,000-man staff is predominantly Italian, are resisting. They clearly are not prepared for the basic alterations some progressive leaders are seeking.

Debate among the cardinals, partriarchs, archbishops, bishops and other prelates has brought statements that would have been surprising a few years ago.

One cardinal denounced the Holy Office, the centuries-old guardian of Catholic doctrine, as unfair and a scandal. Another cardinal suggested a fellow prince of the Church was speaking out of ignorance. An archbishop claimed a council minority is trying to frustrate reforms.

It was an assembly of religious men and the discussion moved them profoundly, for in a way it was like a gathering summoned to amend an ancient constitution.

For centuries the curia has built up its power as the central administration assisting the Pope. Bishops outside of Rome have had to deal with the Pontiff through the curia.

Its 12 congregations — ministries—three tribunals and six special offices, including the Vatican Secretariat of State, date from the Middle Ages. The curia had its beginnings in the 13th century in the Congregation of the Inquisition to fight heresy. This congregation later became the Holy Office.

Of the 31 cardinals on the curia staff, 21 are Italians. Fifty-nine cardinals serve as diocesan bishops and archbishops in the rest of the world.

Non-Catholics often have criticized the curia as an example of over-concentrated authority.

In recent years, many Catholics likewise have called for curia reforms. There have been suggestions such reforms were needed to aid contacts between Catholics and other Christians.

Pope Paul suggested reform and internationalization of the curia before his election to the papacy last June. Then, on Sept. 21, he told the curia he intends to reform whatever is archaic or superfluous.

Progressive prelates are seeking in the council to put the reforms into writing.

They also advocate a concept of shared power between Pope and bishops that could put them in direct contact, without the intervention of the curia.

As part of the idea of shared papal - episcopal power, there have been increasing proposals in the council for the creation of a permanent body of bishops—a sort of senate or college—to meet regularly with the Pope. The creation of such a body obviously would reduce curia powers.

ADVISES TOUGH STAND

Wall Street Chief Against Grain Sale

BERLIN (AP) — Keith Funston, president of the New York Stock Exchange, said Saturday his latest encounter with Soviet Premier Khrushchev convinced him the United States should not sell wheat or any other goods to the Russians.

"In dealing with the Soviets, we must be as difficult and mean as they are," Funston said in an interview. "We must obstruct them as much as possible and we must not concede anything."

Funston was one of 21 American businessmen who met with Khrushchev in Moscow Wednesday and saw him again Thursday.

"What shocked me most about the meeting was the complete disregard for facts," Funston said. "I went away with a sense of frustration. How do you deal with people who lie to you and to whom facts mean nothing?"

Among other things, Khrushchev told the Americans the U.S. Army convoy blockade on the Berlin autobahn earlier in the week was the fault of the Americans for failing to adhere to "established procedures." He said the incident almost caused total war. Khrushchev refused to say what he meant by "established procedures" but Funston questioned Deputy Foreign Minister Valerian A. Zorin about it.

"Zorin told me that the trouble occurred because the Americans tried to move a convoy of more than five vehicles over the autobahn to West Berlin," Funston said.

The reason for the holdup, however, was that the Americans refused a Soviet demand to line up the troops on the road to be counted by the Russians.

Funston said he had no doubt the Russians "are out to deny us free access to Berlin."

"The Western powers must now resolve not to give them an inch anywhere. If necessary, we must take the rish of shooting. Let the chips fall where they may. We won't have any incidents if we do this."

The businessmen went to Moscow on invitation of Time magazine. They are paying their own expenses but Time provided all services and made all arrangements for interviews and meetings with statesmen.

The group reached West Berlin Friday. Saturday they toured East Berlin with American reporters as their guides.

Henry R. Roberts, president of Connecticut General Life Insurance Co. of Hartford, said his feeling after the Moscow meeting was that Khrushchev was in trouble with his party.

"He acted like a corporation president who is in trouble with his board of directors and is trying to get out of his dilemma by making aggressive and boastful statements," Roberts said.

Roberts said he relayed this impression to a high - ranking Soviet Communist.

"I was amazed that this man agreed with me," he added.

Roberts compared the Soviet Union with Nazi Germany.

"I was in Germany in 1937 and the Nazis had the same degree of control over the people as the Communists have," he said.

In general, several of the travelers thought Khrushchev was stating far too strong a case for Soviet economic power. He said the Soviet Union would pass the United States in seven years.

COMPLETIONS CLIMB

Pace In Drilling Drops In Area

Drillers slowed the pace last week in the Monroe Oil & Gas District, losing the momentum of big advances the week before, despite a slight climb in the number of completions in the 15 parishes.

District Manager Duncan S. Cook's report yesterday listed 14 completed wells in eight eight parishes — Ouachita, LaSalle, Tensas, Union, Caldwell, Catahoula, Concordia and Morehouse. The figure compared with the previous week's 12 finals in seven parishes.

LaSalle Parish continued to be the center of the heaviest activity, being location of five of the completions, as well as 10 of the week's 33 rigs actively drilling or testing.

The other completions included two each in Tensas and Union Parishes, one in the Monroe Gas Field in Ouachita Parish, and one each in Caldwell, Catahoula, Concordia and Morehouse.

The active rigs, scattered in nine parishes besides LaSalle, also included five in Avoyelles, four each in Catahoula and Concordia, two each in Ouachita, Rapides and Union, three in Tensas, and one each in Franklin and Madison. The Ouachita units, both wildcats, were drilling at 9721 and 7771 feet.

The activity compared with a total of 42 rigs the week before.

In new sites, Concordia Parish led the district with eight new locatoins. There were 28 altogether in 10 of the district's 15 parishes, where there were 44 a week ago.

Rounding out the total were five new locations in Union Parish, four in Tensas, three in LaSalle, two each in Ouachita and Catahoula, and one each in Avoyelles, Rapides, Richland and Winn Parishes.

Two recompletions during the week were:

In LaSalle Parish, the Olla Field, section 35-10-2E—Placid Oil's Louisiana Central No. 58, 2415 feet.

In Rapides Parish, the North Big Island Field, section 27-5-3E— Crow-Gulf Coast Venture's Eota SU; Eota No. 6, 5610 feet.

The report showed 15 wells plugged and abondoned, makin the inactive total 88, while locations, numbered 83, with 50 listed as drilling.

These other facts appeared, concerning the week's completions, active rigs and new locations:

Space Exhibition To Be Held In LSU Coliseum

BATON ROUGE — (Special) — Scale models of spacecraft, satellites and missiles will highlight the Space Age exhibition to be staged November 19-24 at Louisiana State University in conjunction with the regional Aerospace Education Symposium.

The symposium will be held November 20-22 in the LSU Gym-Auditorium.

The Space Age exhibit will be housed in the LSU Coliseum. Viewing hours will be from 9:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily. No admission will be charged.

Displays from several NASA centers, the Atomic Energy Commission, the armed forces and numerous private industries will be shown. A gigantic display, covering more than 3,000 square feet, will be sent by the NASA Manned Spacecraft Center in Houston, Tex. The George C. Marshall Space Flight Center (NASA) in Huntsville, Ala. and NASA headquarters in Washington, D. C., will contribute displays.

The NASA exhibit from Washington will include nine scale models and 26 panels. Models (built to one-eighth scale) will include the Relay communication satellite; an orbiting solar observatory; the Explorer XII spacecraft; the Canadian satellite "Alouette;" the Ranger III-V spacecraft.

The Nimbus weather satellite; an orbiting geophysical observatory; the Surveyor, designed for controlled soft landing on the moon and lunar analysis; and the Mariner, which last year made temperature and magnetic measurements of Venus and will later be sent to Venus and Mars.

A display sent by the Fourth Air Division (SAC) USAF Orientation Group from Barksdale Air Force Base in Shreveport will cover missile attack warning systems, manned bombers, and models of the Atlas, Titan, C-141 and Minuteman missiles.

Among other exhibitors and their displays will be: General Dynamics, models of the Atlas space launch vehicle and the Atlas Agena; the Martin Company, Space Age career posters; Wright - Patterson Air Force Base, Ohio, Mercury capsule model; Norton Air Force Base, Calif., one-third scale model of the Titan III and Southern Bell Telphone Co., panels on satellite communications.

Other exhibits will be announced later.

Building Permits Here Past Week Drop To $49,335

Monroe's building permits accumulated very little, amountwise, during the past week, although the total stayed the same as the previous week.

According to Dale Martha, coordinator of the City of Monroe inspector's department, some 28 permits were issued during the week of November 4-8, amounting to $49,335. Total for the week before was $72,315, the smallest amount in the past two and one-half months.

Additions greatly surpassed any other type of permit in the breakdown, numbering 12. Five persons applied for moves, four for demolitions, four for remodeling and three for new structures.

A permit issued to W. H. Brown for a new $27,500 brick veneer residence to be located at 2500 Indian Mound Blvd., was the largest single grant.

Second largest permit went to Louis Elias, also for a new brick veneer residence, at 2319 Amalie, amounting to $10,000.

The other new structure permitted was a $200 frame playhouse, to be constructed by Edward C. Cascio.

Lou Craig was issued a grant to remodel his frame residence at 1001 S. 2nd St., for $135. Others permitted to remodel frame residences were Clyde Webb, 2023 Valencia, for $800; Dr. T. D. Boaz, 1303 Emerson, $4,000; and Sam Jones, 3902 Pippin, $850.

Receiving a permit to demolish a service station at 321 N. 4th St. was B. O. Shandy. Other demolishing orders went to Lugene Wesley, 602 Wood; Jimmie Jordan, 600 Wood; and Ruby Lewis, 122½ Wallace.

The five houses to be moved belonged to Marvin Spangler, from 209 9th St., to 2602 Railroad Ave.; William C. Hines Jr., from 710 Wood to 4001 Dunlop; Johnny Hutton, from 211 9th St., outside city; G. W. Welch, from 701½ Oak to outside city; and J. E. Waters, from Sterlington and Loop Roads to Swartz.

Additions to frame residence permits were as follows: Nellie H. Breithaupt, 1013 Mississippi, $900; Bryan H. Myers, 2903 Gordan, $600; Jay G. Todd, 808 Louise Ann, $200; Cornelius Mickle, 3805 Wiley, $500; Frank Scario, 114 Smith, $1,200; Louis Napoleon, 503 Rose, $100; James Whaley, 2701 Calypso, $500; C. B. Moore, 416 Egan, $100; Mary Cascio, 303 Wilson, $600; Eddie Dye, 1501 Georgia, $200; and John West, 2410 Wood, $500.

Little Flower Church plans a $450 addition to the frame building located at 616 S. 16th St.

MILITARY PARADE

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (UPI)—Chief of State Prince Norodum Sinhanouk Saturday reviewed a military parade in the climax of 10th anniversary celebrations of the independence of Cambodia.

Small Child Found Slain In Montana

HARDIN, Mont. (AP) — A partially burned car seat and a bloody bedspread were the only clues Saturday in the sex slaying of blonde, blue-eyed Signe (Stormy) Timberman, 8, of Hardin.

Her body, stabbed seven times in the chest and head, was found face down in a roadside ditch Friday after she had been missing for four hours from the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Timberman.

She was the second girl abducted in Hardin in four days. Julie Ann Hagadone, 3, was missing from her home 17 hours until she was found crying in a grain field six miles from Hardin on Tuesday.

The body of the Timberman girl was found about three miles from town.

Neither child was raped.

Bif Horn County Sheriff Roy Riley said the incidents have "shook up this town like nothing ever has before."

Roadblocks set up in eastern Montana and northern Wyoming, turned up no clues. The Federal Bureau of Investigation was called in and police broadcast a statewide alert for a 1963 light tan Plymouth automobile.

It was believed to be driven by a man 25 to 35 years old. A bloodstained, partially burned car seat was found on a road, not far from the girl's body.

Robert Hamilton, Hardin police chief, said the killer was undoubtedly insane and responsible for both abductions.

"He killed once and he won't hesitate to kill again," Hamilton said.

A house-by-house search of garbage cans and incinerators turned up no murder weapon although a bloody bedspread was found in a garbage can. It was being checked.

Cotton Futures Make Advances Over Past Week

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures in the domestic market moved into firmer ground at the New York Cotton Exchange in the past week, closing 35 cents to $1.75 higher.

A week ago, the market closed off 35 cents to up 45 cents for the week.

Prospects for new cotton support legislation appeared brighter as the weeek opened, but trading soon was affected by indication action wouldn't come until next month. This stimulated short covering and scattered new buying, gviing prices a boost that was only partly dampened by profit-taking on Friday.

Another factor depressing Friday prices was the higher-than-before crop forecast from the Agriculture Department. The report indicated a crop of 15,332,000 bales, 475,000 bales larger than last month's estimate. Such a crop would be the biggest since 1953.

Exports for the week were estimated by the Exchange Service Bureau at 56,000 bales, against 87,000 a week earlier and 84,000 a year ago. For the season so far, exports are estimated at 717,000 against 513,000 at this point a year ago.

The girls lived within four blocks of each other and both were picked up at about 4 p.m.

OTA Will Hear Shelby Jackson

Shelby Jackson, state superintendent of education and a candidate for governor, will be featured speaker at the Tuesday meeting of the Ouachita Parish Teachers Association.

Mrs. Oreatha Luttrell, president of the OTA said Jackson would discuss the United School Committee report.

The meeting will be held at 3:45 p.m. at the West Monroe Junior High School. Miss Elaine Canady is program chairman.

Terzia Barracks Meeting Monday

The Leo Terzia Barracks No. 3279 of Veterans of World War I will hold its regular meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday at the Marine League Hut at Bernstein Park.

Marion E. Dupont, who is National Deputy Chief of Staff of the organization, announced the meeting. He said such topics as pensions, additional hospital benefits, increase in widows and dependents benefits, and home nursing care allowance would be discussed.

Grain Futures End Moderately

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain futures prices shifted over some broad daily ranges last week but finished with only moderate net changes on the Board of Trade.

Major factors in the trade all week were the on-again, off-again reports on negotiations with Russia on the sale of about 150 million bushels of wheat.

Twice during the week, old crop wheat contracts reached their highest levels of the season.

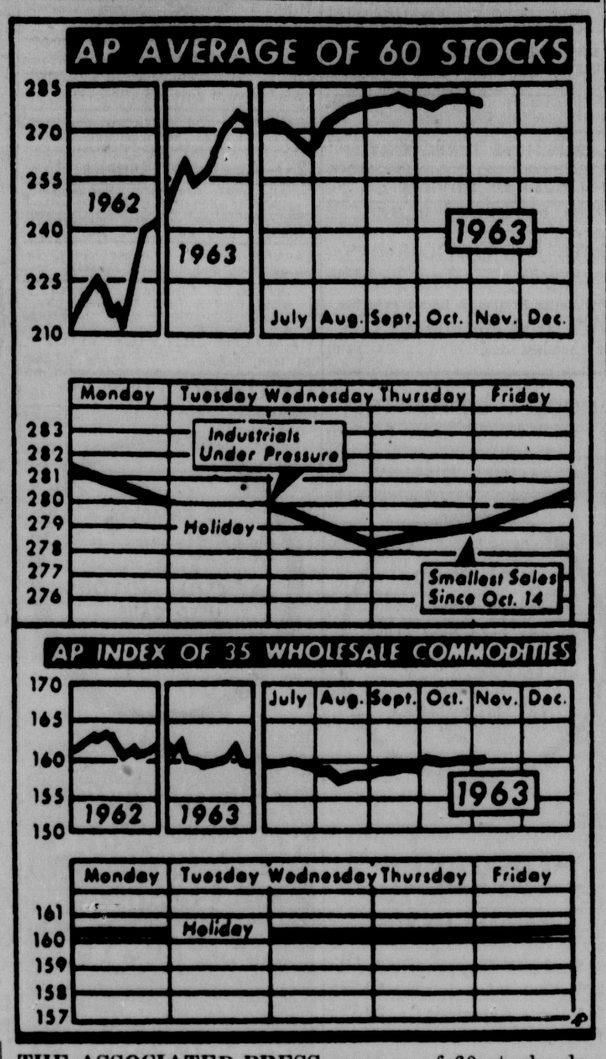
Ebbing Stocks Renew Gains In Last Bout



THE ASSOCIATED PRESS average of 60 stocks declined for the second straight week when it closed at 280.4 from 281.2 a week ago. The commodity index closed slightly higher at 160.2, up from 160.1 a week earlier. (AP Wirephoto)

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market last week took its second straight weekly decline on average but showed an impressive renewal of strength in its final session.

In the course of the week, Wall Street had to reckon with a surprise increase in margin requirements by the Federal Reserve Board. This raised to 70 per cent from 50 per cent the amount of "down payment" required in the purchase of stocks.

Stocks were already in a downtrend before the news came and this provided an excuse for further selling on Wednesday which brought about the sharpest one-day decline in more than a month.

Two sharp declines were followed by a moderate recovery on Thursday and a fairly strong rally on Friday.

The Dow Jones industrial average took a net loss of 2.92 at 750.81, but ended the week well above its Wednesday low of 744.03.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks declined .8 to 280.4 —a small loss, but its second straight weekly decline

The trading week was cut to four days by the election day holiday on Tuesday. Volume was 19,883,410 shares compared with 28,722,840 for the full, five-day trading week preceding.

In the bond market, prices drifted lower for both U.S government and corporate issues. It was the first time in two months that the two classes of securities moved in the same direction. The decline was attributed to a feeling that overall interest rates are headed upward.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange for last week totaled $25,758,000 par value. The previous week's total was $28,722,840.

Toledo Bend Dam Bids Slated

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — The Louisiana and Texas Sabine River authorities have agreed on Jan. 3 as the date they will call for bids on a master contract for the Toledo Bend Dam power plant and related facilities.

The date was set at a Friday meeting of Toledo Bend project joint operation representatives and officials of three private electric utility companies which will buy the power to be generated at the dam.

Construction on the $60 million project is expected to start by May 1, the announcement said.

Before that date, the authorities must award the master contract and put $30 million in revenue bonds on the market to finance half the cost of the construction.

The remaining $30 million will be split between the states of Louisiana and Texas.

TO BUY STOCKS

Investors Need Cash Increase

NEW YORK (AP)—Investors found out during the week that they are going to have to dig deeper into their pockets for hard cash to buy stocks.

And giant General Motors Corp. added some sweet icing to the economic cake by boosting its year-end dividend, a move hailed widely as indicating a strong business trend.

The Federal Reserve Board raised the down-payment requirement for purchasing stocks to 70 per cent from 50 per cent. This meant that an investor, to buy $1,000 worth of stocks must put up $700 cash instead of the $500 under the previous rate.

The board said it acted to restrain the excessive use of credit for speculative purposes.

Both the New York and American stock exchanges objected to this line of reasoning. They issued statements expressing the opinion that the rise in brokers' credits stemmed from an increase in the number and value of listed stocks and reflected the demands of an expanding economy.

The stock market fell sharply on Wednesday, the first day of trading after the Federal Reserve announcement, but brokers generally said they expected such a reaction to be only temporary and that they looked for higher prices in the months to come.

However, some said they anticipated a reduction in trading volume as a result of the margin hike.

General Motors, biggest of the automakers, aroused enthusiasm by declaring a $1.50-a-share year-end dividend in addition to its regular 50-cent quarterly payment. This brought total dividends to $4 for 1963, a year in which GM broke all records for profits and sales, compared with $3 in 1962.

GM's action was reflection of excellent times in the automobile industry although there was some disappointment in Wall Street that the regular dividend wasn't raised and the stock wasn't split.

The industry turned out an estimated 188,900 passenger cars, the highest ever for a week. This compares with 175,560 the previous week, 166,112 a year ago and the previous record of 184,000 in April 1955.

Car sales continued high with dealers delivering a record 769,-000 units in October, a gain of 5 per cent over October 1962.

Demand for steel from the auto industry picked up steam and as a result steel production during the week showed a 1.5 per cent gain over the previous week. Output totaled 1,944,000 tons against 1,915,000 the prior week.

In addition to auto demand the steel market was supported by the appliance industry, railroad freight car builders and steel warehouses, which service small users of steel.

Taking a look ahead, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York said "prospects (of the economy) for the fourth quarter as a whole appear encouraging."

The bank found satisfaction with retail sales, the prospects for business spending and a sharp recovery in housing starts.

New contract demands of Teamsters Union President James R. Hoffa cast a cloud on the business horizon.

ATTEND MEETING

Leon G. Sugar, president of Monroe Wholesale Drug Co., Inc., and Mrs. Sugar, 14 Deborah Dr. in Monroe, attended the 89th annual meeting of the National Wholesale Druggists' Association in Bal Harbour, Fla., Nov. 2-6.

APPOINTED

Crain Chemical Co., a Dallas, Tex., based firm, has announced the appointment of Edward J. Magee, West Monroe, as sales representative for the Northeast Louisiana and Southern Arkansas area.

Magee, recently in Dallas, took part in the firm's extensive sales training program and assumed his duties in the territory following a general sales convention November 1 and 2.

Crain is a manufacturer and distributor of sanitary chemicals and maintenance materials for institutional, industrial and commercial use, with representation in a 25 state area and foreign markets. The appointment of Magee is part of an over-all expansion program of the firm.

ASSETS RISE

American National Insurance Co. has reached the billion dollar mark in assets, company officials said Saturday.

It is credited with being the first Texas life insurance company to achieve the billion dollars in assets category and places it among only approximately 20 major companies, out of more than 1500 in the country, boasting of such a financial factor.

The assets figure, officials said, as of Sept. 30, was $1,025,-752,669.33.

MANAGER

The reappointment of Louis F. Roberts as Memphis district sales manager of the General Tire & Rubber Co. was announced by Morgan J. Morgan, national manager, replacement tire sales.

Roberts, a General Tire sales executive since 1945, served as the Memphis district sales manager from 1949 through 1951. He is replacing Richey I. Brunskill, who has been promoted to manager, passenger tire sales, with headquarters in Akron, Ohio. Since 1954, Roberts has been Chicago district sales manager of General Tire. He served from 1951 through April, 1954, as Richmond, Va., district sales manager.

Ecumenical Council To Debate Issue

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A great debate is developing in the Roman Catholic Ecumenical Council on the structure of the Church's government. The exchange could expand this week but already sharp words have been used, unusual in such a conference.

Arguments in St. Peter's Friday about the Holy Office touched on but one phase of a controversy involving the whole Vatican curia, the central administration assisting the Pope.

Reformers are demanding a shakeup of historic proportions.

Pope Paul VI himself has called for a change.

Conservatives of the curia, whose 1,000-man staff is predominantly Italian, are resisting. They clearly are not prepared for the basic alterations some progressive leaders are seeking.

Debate among the cardinals, partriarchs, archbishops, bishops and other prelates has brought statements that would have been surprising a few years ago.

One cardinal denounced the Holy Office, the centuries-old guardian of Catholic doctrine, as unfair and a scandal. Another cardinal suggested a fellow prince of the Church was speaking out of ignorance. An archbishop claimed a council minority is trying to frustrate reforms.

It was an assembly of religious men and the discussion moved them profoundly, for in a way it was like a gathering summoned to amend an ancient constitution.

For centuries the curia has built up its power as the central administration assisting the Pope. Bishops outside of Rome have had to deal with the Pontiff through the curia.

Its 12 congregations — ministries—three tribunals and six special offices, including the Vatican Secretariat of State, date from the Middle Ages. The curia had its beginnings in the 13th century in the Congregation of the Inquisition to fight heresy. This congregation later became the Holy Office.

Of the 31 cardinals on the curia staff, 21 are Italians. Fifty-nine cardinals serve as diocesan bishops and archbishops in the rest of the world.

Non-Catholics often have criticized the curia as an example of over-concentrated authority.

In recent years, many Catholics likewise have called for curia reforms. There have been suggestions such reforms were needed to aid contacts between Catholics and other Christians.

Pope Paul suggested reform and internationalization of the curia before his election to the papacy last June. Then, on Sept. 21, he told the curia he intends to reform whatever is archaic or superfluous.

Progressive prelates are seeking in the council to put the reforms into writing.

They also advocate a concept of shared power between Pope and bishops that could put them in direct contact, without the intervention of the curia.

As part of the idea of shared papal - episcopal power, there have been increasing proposals in the council for the creation of a permanent body of bishops —a sort of senate or college— to meet regularly with the Pope. The creation of such a body obviously would reduce curia powers.

COMPLETIONS CLIMB

Pace In Drilling Drops In Area

Drillers slowed the pace last week in the Monroe Oil & Gas District, losing the momentum of big advances the week before, despite a slight climb in the number of completions in the 15 parishes.

District Manager Duncan S. Cook's report yesterday listed 14 completed wells in eight eight parishes — Ouachita, LaSalle, Tensas, Union, Caldwell, Catahoula, Concordia and Morehouse. The figure compared with the previous week's 12 finals in seven parishes.

LaSalle Parish continued to be the center of the heaviest activity, being location of five of the completions, as well as 10 of the week's 33 rigs actively drilling or testing.

The other completions included two each in Tensas and Union Parishes, one in the Monroe Gas Field in Ouachita Parish, and one each in Caldwell, Catahoula, Concordia and Morehouse.

The active rigs, scattered in nine parishes besides LaSalle, also included five in Avoyelles, four each in Catahoula and Concordia, two each in Ouachita, Rapides and Union, three in Tensas, and one each in Franklin and Madison. The Ouachita units, both wildcats, were drilling at 9721 and 7771 feet.

The activity compared with a total of 42 rigs the week before.

In new sites, Concordia Parish led the district with eight new locatoins. There were 28 altogether in 10 of the district's 15 parishes, where there were 44 a week ago.

Rounding out the total were five new locations in Union Parish, four in Tensas, three in LaSalle, two each in Ouachita and Catahoula, and one each in Avoyelles, Rapides, Richland and Winn Parishes.

Two recompletions during the week were:

In LaSalle Parish, the Olla Field, section 35-10-2E—Placid Oil's Louisiana Central No. 58, 2415 feet.

In Rapides Parish, the North Big Island Field, section 27-5-3E— Crow-Gulf Coast Venture's Eota SU; Eota No. 6, 5610 feet.

The report showed 15 wells plugged and abondoned, makin the inactive total 88, while locations, numbered 83, with 50 listed as drilling.

These other facts appeared, concerning the week's completions, active rigs and new locations:

ADVISES TOUGH STAND

Wall Street Chief Against Grain Sale

BERLIN (AP) — Keith Funston, president of the New York Stock Exchange, said Saturday his latest encounter with Soviet Premier Khrushchev convinced him the United States should not sell wheat or any other goods to the Russians.

"In dealing with the Soviets, we must be as difficult and mean as they are," Funston said in an interview. "We must obstruct them as much as possible and we must not concede anything."

Funston was one of 21 American businessmen who met with Khrushchev in Moscow Wednesday and saw him again Thursday.

"What shocked me most about the meeting was the complete disregard for facts," Funston said. "I went away with a sense of frustration. How do you deal with people who lie to you and to whom facts mean nothing?"

Among other things, Khrushchev told the Americans the U.S. Army convoy blockade on the Berlin autobahn earlier in the week was the fault of the Americans for failing to adhere to "established procedures." He said the incident almose caused total war. Khrushchev refused to say what he meant by "established procedures" but Funston questioned Deputy Foreign Minister Valerian A. Zorin about it.

"Zorin told me that the trouble occurred because the Americans tried to move a convoy of more than five vehicles over the autobahn to West Berlin," Funston said.

The reason for the holdup, however, was that the Americans refused a Soviet demand to line up the troops on the road to be counted by the Russians.

Funston said he had no doubt the Russians "are out to deny us free access to Berlin."

"The Western powers must now resolve not to give them an inch anywhere. If necessary, we must take the rish of shooting. Let the chips fall where they may. We won't have any incidents if we do this."

The businessmen went to Moscow on invitation of Time magazine. They are paying their own expenses but Time provided all services and made all arrangements for interviews and meetings with statesmen.

The group reached West Berlin Friday. Saturday they toured East Berlin with American reporters as their guides.

Henry R. Roberts, president of Connecticut General Life Insurance Co. of Hartford, said his feeling after the Moscow meeting was that Khrushchev was in trouble with his party.

"He acted like a corporation president who is in trouble with his board of directors and is trying to get out of his dilemma by making aggressive and boastful statements," Roberts said.

Roberts said he relayed this impression to a high - ranking Soviet Communist.

"I was amazed that this man agreed with me," he added.

Roberts compared the Soviet Union with Nazi Germany.

"I was in Germany in 1937 and the Nazis had the same degree of control over the people as the Communists have," he said.

In general, several of the travelers thought Khrushchev was stating far too strong a case for Soviet economic power. He said the Soviet Union would pass the United States in seven years.

Space Exhibition To Be Held In LSU Coliseum

BATON ROUGE — (Special) — Scale models of spacecraft, satellites and missiles will highlight the Space Age exhibition to be staged November 19-24 at Louisiana State University in conjunction with the regional Aerospace Education Symposium.

The symposium will be held November 20-22 in the LSU Gym-Auditorium.

The Space Age exhibit will be housed in the LSU Coliseum. Viewing hours will be from 9:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily. No admission will be charged.

Displays from several NASA centers, the Atomic Energy Commission, the armed forces and numerous private industries will be shown. A gigantic display, covering more than 3,000 square feet, will be sent by the NASA Manned Spacecraft Center in Houston, Tex. The George C. Marshall Space Flight Center (NASA) in Huntsville, Ala. and NASA headquarters in Washington, D. C., will contribute displays.

The NASA exhibit from Washington will include nine scale models and 26 panels. Models (built to one-eighth scale) will include the Relay communication satellite; an orbiting solar observatory; the Explorer XII spacecraft; the Canadian satellite "Alouette;" the Ranger III-V spacecraft.

The Nimbus weather satellite; an orbiting geophysical observatory; the Surveyor, designed for controlled soft landing on the moon and lunar analysis; and the Mariner, which last year made temperature and magnetic measurements of Venus and will later be sent to Venus and Mars.

A display sent by the Fourth Air Division (SAC) USAF Orientation Group from Barksdale Air Force Base in Shreveport will cover missile attack warning systems, manned bombers, and models of the Atlas, Titan, C-141 and Minuteman missiles.

Among other exhibitors and their displays will be: General Dynamics, models of the Atlas space launch vehicle and the Atlas Agena; the Martin Company, Space Age career posters; Wright - Patterson Air Force Base, Ohio, Mercury capsule model; Norton Air Force Base, Calif., one-third scale model of the Titan III and Southern Bell Telphone Co., panels on satellite communications.

Other exhibits will be announced later.

Building Permits Here Past Week Drop To $49,335

Monroe's building permits accumulated very little, amountwise, during the past week, although the total stayed the same as the previous week.

According to Dale Martha, coordinator of the City of Monroe inspector's department, some 28 permits were issued during the week of November 4-8, amounting to $49,335. Total for the week before was $72,315, the smallest amount in the past two and one-half months.

Additions greatly surpassed any other type of permit in the breakdown, numbering 12. Five persons applied for moves, four for demolitions, four for remodeling and three for new structures.

A permit issued to W. H. Brown for a new $27,500 brick veneer residence to be located at 2500 Indian Mound Blvd., was the largest single grant.

Second largest permit went to Louis Elias, also for a new brick veneer residence, at 2319 Amalie, amounting to $10,000.

The other new structure permitted was a $200 frame playhouse, to be constructed by Edward C. Cascio.

Lou Craig was issued a grant to remodel his frame residence at 1001 S. 2nd St., for $135. Others permitted to remodel frame residences were Clyde Webb, 2023 Valencia, for $800; Dr. T. D. Boaz, 1303 Emerson, $4,000; and Sam Jones, 3902 Pippin, $850.

Receiving a permit to demolish a service station at 321 N. 4th St. was B. O. Shandy. Other demolishing orders went to Lugene Wesley, 602 Wood; Jimmie Jordan, 600 Wood; and Ruby Lewis, 122½ Wallace.

The five houses to be moved belonged to Marvin Spangler, from 209 9th St., to 2602 Railroad Ave.; William C. Hines Jr., from 710 Wood to 4001 Dunlop; Johnny Hutton, from 211 9th St., outside city; G. W. Welch, from 701½ Oak to outside city; and J. E. Waters, from Sterlington and Loop Roads to Swartz.

Additions to frame residence permits were as follows: Nellie H. Breithaupt, 1013 Mississippi, $900; Bryan H. Myers, 2903 Gordan, $600; Jay G. Todd, 808 Louise Ann, $200; Cornelius Mickle, 3805 Wiley, $500; Frank Scario, 114 Smith, $1,200; Louis Napoleon, 503 Rose, $100; James Whaley, 2701 Calypso, $500; C. B. Moore, 416 Egan, $100; Mary Cascio, 303 Wilson, $600; Eddie Dye, 1501 Georgia, $200; and John West, 2410 Wood, $500.

Little Flower Church plans a $450 addition to the frame building located at 616 S. 16th St.

MILITARY PARADE

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (UPI)—Chief of State Prince Norodum Sinhanouk Saturday reviewed a military parade in the climax of 10th anniversary celebrations of the independence of Cambodia.

Small Child Found Slain In Montana

HARDIN, Mont. (AP) — A partially burned car seat and a bloody bedspread were the only clues Saturday in the sex slaying of blonde, blue-eyed Signe (Stormy) Timberman, 8, of Hardin.

Her body, stabbed seven times in the chest and head, was found face down in a roadside ditch Friday after she had been missing for four hours from the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Timberman.

She was the second girl abducted in Hardin in four days. Julie Ann Hagadone, 3, was missing from her home 17 hours until she was found crying in a grain field six miles from Hardin on Tuesday.

The body of the Timberman girl was found about three miles from town.

Neither child was raped.

Bif Horn County Sheriff Roy Riley said the incidents have "shook up this town like nothing ever has before."

Roadblocks set up in eastern Montana and northern Wyoming, turned up no clues. The Federal Bureau of Investigation was called in and police broadcast a statewide alert for a 1963 light tan Plymouth automobile.

It was believed to be driven by a man 25 to 35 years old. A bloodstained, partially burned car seat was found on a road, not far from the girl's body.

Robert Hamilton, Hardin police chief, said the killer was undoubtedly insane and responsible for both abductions.

"He killed once and he won't hesitate to kill again," Hamilton said.

A house-by-house search of garbage cans and incinerators turned up no murder weapon although a bloody bedspread was found in a garbage can. It was being checked.

Cotton Futures Make Advances Over Past Week

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures in the domestic market moved into firmer ground at the New York Cotton Exchange in the past week, closing 35 cents to $1.75 higher.

A week ago, the market closed off 35 cents to up 45 cents for the week.

Prospects for new cotton support legislation appeared brighter as the weeek opened, but trading soon was affected by indication action wouldn't come until next month. This stimulated short covering and scattered new buying, gviing prices a boost that was only partly dampened by profit-taking on Friday.

Another factor depressing Friday prices was the higher-than-before crop forecast from the Agriculture Department. The report indicated a crop of 15,-332,000 bales, 475,000 bales larger than last month's estimate. Such a crop would be the biggest since 1953.

Exports for the week were estimated by the Exchange Service Bureau at 56,000 bales, against 87,000 a week earlier and 84,000 a year ago. For the season so far, exports are estimated at 717,000 against 513,000 at this point a year ago.

The girls lived within four blocks of each other and both were picked up at about 4 p.m.

OTA Will Hear Shelby Jackson

Shelby Jackson, state superintendent of education and a candidate for governor, will be featured speaker at the Tuesday meeting of the Ouachita Parish Teachers Association.

Mrs. Oreatha Luttrell, president of the OTA said Jackson would discuss the United School Committee report.

The meeting will be held at 3:45 p.m. at the West Monroe Junior High School. Miss Elaine Canady is program chairman.

Terzia Barracks Meeting Monday

The Leo Terzia Barracks No. 3279 of Veterans of World War I will hold its regular meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday at the Marine League Hut at Bernstein Park.

Marion E. Dupont, who is National Deputy Chief of Staff of the organization, announced the meeting. He said such topics as pensions, additional hospital benefits, increase in widows and dependents benefits, and home nursing care allowance would be discussed.

Grain Futures End Moderately

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain futures prices shifted over some broad daily ranges last week but finished with only moderate net changes on the Board of Trade.

Major factors in the trade all week were the on-again, off-again reports on negotiations with Russia on the sale of about 150 million bushels of wheat.

Twice during the week, old crop wheat contracts reached their highest levels of the season.

Type Of Man Diem Was Is Described

EDITOR'S NOTE — Many words have been written in the last week about Ngo Dinh Diem. Still the question lingers: What sort of man was he? Here is an insight by a correspondent who reported Diem's rise to power in 1944-45 and met him on many occasions.

By JOHN RODERICK

TOKYO (AP)—"But yesterday the word of Caesar might have stood against the world; now lies he there and none so poor to do him reverence."

These words of Shakespeare's Marc Antony could be written about a little man named Ngo Dinh Diem, creator and once president of the Republic of Viet Nam, whose crumpled body lay in a secret place in Saigon, shunned by millions he once led.

Blindness to reality, suspicion a touch of arrogance and an inability to brook opposition brought him down. Yet, as of Caesar, it could be said, "You all did love him once, not without cause."

Even his enemies will admit, in a calmer moment, that had it not been for the stubbornness and courage of this diffidently shy aristocrat, South Viet Nam today might be under the iron rule of communism.

In the summer of 1954, the whole of Viet Nam was in a state of chaos. The French had lost the battle of Dien Bien Phu. The great and little powers at Geneva were carving the country into a Communist north and a free south. It seemed only a matter of weeks before the wispy-bearded Red chieftain Ho Chi Minh, newly installed in his capital at Hanoi, would gather the tattered pieces left in the south into a united Communist people's republic.

Diem, respected for his wartime opposition to both the French and the Communists, was called out of self-imposed exile in the United States by Emperor Bao Dai and made premier of the dissolving south. Perhaps Bao Dai, holding that the job was impossible, sought with this gesture to eliminate Diem from the political scene of Viet Nam.

Tongue-tied, bereft of friends, looking uncomfortable in his white, sharkskin suit, Diem seemed incapable of action, indecisive of manner and unable to cope with the problems thrust upon him. Even his few sympathizers gave him no more than three months in office—after that, compromise and unification of Viet Nam under Ho Chi Minh.

The United States hoped his past reputation for integrity and anticommunism might salvage the situation. Soon, even Americans became disillusioned by Diem's seeming helplessness.

Aligned against him was France, the once-proud colonial power that still wanted to hold onto the tattered strands of power that had bound the French for a century to Indochina. In Diem the French saw, and feared, a man who would refuse to play their game. And because he had U.S. backing they were alarmed at the prospect of being supplanted by Americans in lucrative trade.

So, instead of supporting this devout Catholic with strongly anti-Communist, pro-West leanings, they almost openly backed the powerful Vietnamese who coveted the country for themselves—the Binh Xuyen, lords of the Saigon-Cholon prostitution, gambling and opium rackets; and the strange Cao Dai and Hoa Hao religious sects, all willing to play ball with France and to seek a compromise with the Communist Ho Chi Minh.

The Binh Xuyen controlled the country's police forces. The religious sects had private armies of their own. It seemed for a time that they would have their way as they strangled every attempt Diem made to unify the south.

But in the months that followed, a curious thing happened. Diem grew stronger as the menace increased. Slowly, he won the support of wavering sectors of the army. With their help he put down with coolness and courage the first major threat to his rule, an uprising of pro-Bao Dai, pro-French military officers.

Then, he did what the French had always said was impossible. His Vietnamese army rooted out and destroyed river pirates and private armies long believed unconquerable in their mountain and swamp fastnesses.

Having established his authority and pacified his sector, Diem set about winning popular support. He traveled into the countryside frequently, and though his indifferent oratorical style could not compare with that of Ho Chi Minh, his earnestness got through to the farmers he met.

Voting in a free referendum, the Vietnamese ousted Bao Dai, who was spending his days on the French Riviera, and accepted the republic which Diem created.

Diem toiled in his palace and in the countryside. After countless difficulties, he restored communications, built up the economy, cleaned up the cities, and laid down a moral code for his people to follow in the fight against communism.

PTA At Swartz To Hear Pastor

SWARTZ (Special) — Dr. W. W. Hatcher, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church of Monroe, will be the featured speaker at a Parent-Teachers Association meeting here Nov. 12 in the Swartz Elementary School cafeteria.

According to Mrs. Rachael Hart, co-chairman of publicity for the group, the speaker will talk about parent's responsibility to the school.

Mrs. Hart stated that the regularly - scheduled meeting will begin at 2:30 p.m. and urged all interested parents to attend.

Type Of Man Diem Was Is Described

EDITOR'S NOTE — Many words have been written in the last week about Ngo Dinh Diem. Still the question lingers: What sort of man was he? Here is an insight by a correspondent who reported Diem's rise to power in 1944-45 and met him on many occasions.

By JOHN RODERICK

TOKYO (AP)—"But yesterday the word of Caesar might have stood against the world; now lies he there and none so poor to do him reverence."

These words of Shakespeare's Marc Antony could be written about a little man named Ngo Dinh Diem, creator and once president of the Republic of Viet Nam, whose crumpled body lay in a secret place in Saigon, shunned by millions he once led.

Blindness to reality, suspicion a touch of arrogance and an inability to brook opposition brought him down. Yet, as of Caesar, it could be said, "You all did love him once, not without cause."

Even his enemies will admit, in a calmer moment, that had it not been for the stubbornness and courage of this diffidently shy aristocrat, South Viet Nam today might be under the iron rule of communism.

In the summer of 1954, the whole of Viet Nam was in a state of chaos. The French had lost the battle of Dien Bien Phu. The great and little powers at Geneva were carving the country into a Communist north and a free south. It seemed only a matter of weeks before the wispy-bearded Red chieftain Ho Chi Minh, newly installed in his capital at Hanoi, would gather the tattered pieces left in the south into a united Communist people's republic.

Diem, respected for his wartime opposition to both the French and the Communists, was called out of self-imposed exile in the United States by Emperor Bao Dai and made premier of the dissolving south. Perhaps Bao Dai, holding that the job was impossible, sought with this gesture to eliminate Diem from the political scene of Viet Nam.

Tongue-tied, bereft of friends, looking uncomfortable in his white, sharkskin suit, Diem seemed incapable of action, indecisive of manner and unable to cope with the problems thrust upon him. Even his few sympathizers gave him no more than three months in office—after that, compromise and unification of Viet Nam under Ho Chi Minh.

The United States hoped his past reputation for integrity and anticommunism might salvage the situation. Soon, even Americans became disillusioned by Diem's seeming helplessness.

Aligned against him was France, the once-proud colonial power that still wanted to hold onto the tattered strands of power that had bound the French for a century to Indochina. In Diem the French saw, and feared, a man who would refuse to play their game. And because he had U.S. backing they were alarmed at the prospect of being supplanted by Americans in lucrative trade.

So, instead of supporting this devout Catholic with strongly anti-Communist, pro-West leanings, they almost openly backed the powerful Vietnamese who coveted the country for themselves—the Binh Xuyen, lords of the Saigon-Cholon prostitution, gambling and opium rackets; and the strange Cao Dai and Hoa Hao religious sects, all willing to play ball with France and to seek a compromise with the Communist Ho Chi Minh.

The Binh Xuyen controlled the country's police forces. The religious sects had private armies of their own. It seemed for a time that they would have their way as they strangled every attempt Diem made to unify the south.

But in the months that followed, a curious thing happened. Diem grew stronger as the menace increased. Slowly, he won the support of wavering sectors of the army. With their help he put down with coolness and courage the first major threat to his rule, an uprising of pro-Bao Dai, pro-French military officers.

Then, he did what the French had always said was impossible. His Vietnamese army rooted out and destroyed river pirates and private armies long believed unconquerable in their mountain and swamp fastnesses.

Having established his authority and pacified his sector, Diem set about winning popular support. He traveled into the countryside frequently, and though his indifferent oratorical style could not compare with that of Ho Chi Minh, his earnestness got through to the farmers he met.

Voting in a free referendum, the Vietnamese ousted Bao Dai, who was spending his days on the French Riviera, and accepted the republic which Diem created.

Diem toiled in his palace and in the countryside. After countless difficulties, he restored communications, built up the economy, cleaned up the cities, and laid down a moral code for his people to follow in the fight against communism.

HOW TO PARTICIPATE in Piggly Wiggly's BIG CASH JACKPOT

To Be Given Away Each Saturday At 4:00 P.M.

HERE IS HOW IT WORKS:

QUESTION and ANSWER:

Q—How do I participate?
A—Fill in and deposit Registration Card and then sign and punch your Jackpot Card for first jackpot which is $50.00. Use ink.

Q—How do I continue to participate?
A—Punch your Jackpot Card at our store each week thereafter for each new jackpot. CARD MUST BE PUNCHED IN THE PRESENCE OF A CASHIER.

Q—How big is JACKPOT?
A—Never below $50.00. JACKPOT increases $100.00 each Jackpot Day until won then reverts back to $50.00.

Q—How many times can I register?
A—One time. Your Registration Card remains in our JACKPOT container.

Q—Who is qualified to register and obtain a Jackpot Card?
A—Any adult person or married person.

Q—When and where will drawings be held?
A—At our store - every Saturday at 4:00 p.m. Monroe and W. Monroe stores will alternate in holding the drawings. Both store mgrs. will be present for each drawing.

Q—If my name is drawn and my card is punched for week before but not for week of drawing, can I win?
A—No. Your CARD MUST BE PUNCHED FOR WEEK YOUR NAME IS DRAWN. The qualification deadline is 12:00 noon Sat.

Q—Can one person punch Jackpot Card for another person?
A—No. Each person MUST punch his own card. The signature on the registration card and the signature on the Jack Pot Card must be the same.

Q—Who does the drawing?
A—Some disinterested party not registered.

Q—If I lose my card, or if it gets ruined, can I get another one?
A—Yes, but it is not necessary to register again. We do not pay on card that has been punched ahead or name erased.

Q—Is this program a secret?
A—NO - Please tell everyone.

Each name drawn will be posted in our window and in our advertising. Permission must be granted by winner.

Thanking you for this moment of your time — We hope you enjoy participating in this "CASH" promotion.

We hope to serve you better as the days go by.

Respectfully

AFTER TAKEOFF, STEVE'S PASSENGERS MOVE FORWARD...

STUPID AMERICAN! DID YOU THINK WE WOULD NOT PERCEIVE THROUGH YOUR CHILDISH TRICK?

YOU WILL STOP IN YUCATAN AS DECLARED ON YOUR FLIGHT PLAN, BUT YOU WILL REFUEL ONLY— AND NOT LEAVE THE COCKPIT...

MEANWHILE = JAYDEE DYSK'S WIFE HAS NOT ONLY BAILED HIM OUT OF JAIL, BUT RENTED AN AIRPLANE TO INTERCEPT STEVE

I WOULD NOT HAVE THOUGHT THE CORONEL CANYON WOULD DO SUCH FOR REVENGE--

NADA, I TOLD YOU HE IS JUST ANOTHER AIR-FORCE RAT!

OF COURSE DYSK HAS NOT TOLD HIS MEXICAN WIFE OF HIS REAL JOB— SO HE MUST PLAY IT COSY...

WE'RE IN JUST AHEAD OF THEM!

DEAR, STAY IN THE AIRCRAFT! I MUST TAKE CANYON BY SURPRISE

STEVE DOES NOT SEE DYSK AS HE APPROACHES THE PLANE.. BUT THE CHINESE REDS IN THE CARGO AREA HAVE A PHOTO OF THE CASHIERED U.S.A.F. PILOT...SO THEY OPEN THE MAIN DOOR FROM THE INSIDE...

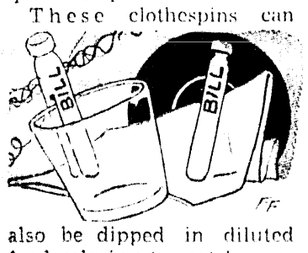
HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

DEAR HELOISE:

Do you know those old wooden clothespins that our mothers used? They are absolutely darling when giving a party and each guest's glass or place card must be marked!

I bought a felt marker and labeled each pin with the guest's name and put them on the edge of each glass. At the same time I made a duplicate clothespin and put it on the table napkins. This serves as a beautiful place card and is quite unique!



These clothespins can also be dipped in diluted food coloring to match your table decorations.

Marian Wood

SOCK-EROO

DEAR HELOISE:

For all the people who have a problem washing socks . . . remind them to turn ALL their socks inside out before washing. This will eliminate fuzz and residue. I am sure they will be surprised at how much cleaner the socks will look.

Phil.

TUB TIME

DEAR HELOISE:

For mothers who have small infants to bathe . . . place a piece of foam rubber in the bottom of the baby's bathtub and it will prevent him slipping and sliding!

A. R.

A GOOD PATTERN

DEAR HELOISE:

For those who sew a lot and like to keep their sewing machines clean . . . instead of putting the machine back in its cabinet each time, I just cover it with a plastic clothes bag from the cleaners! My machine is always handy, yet free from lint and dust.

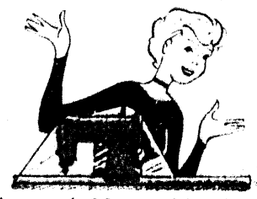

I also put a little sewing machine oil on my pinking shears when they start to "chew" instead of cut. Work them open and shut a few times, then wipe them carefully. It will clean the teeth from lint and dust and they cut like new again.

Mrs. Roy Lichtenberger

SOLVED AT LAST!

DEAR HELOISE:

Those who are plagued by "wiggly" dust ruffles on their beds . . . take a worn (or patched) fitted sheet and sew your dust ruffle to the edge of this! Fit this over your box spring and you're all set. Naturally put your mattress back on the bed . . .

Make sure the sheet is fitted to the BOX spring and not the mattress, or you will not be able to tuck the sheets in when making the bed. No more unsightly, crooked dust ruffles hanging on your bed.

THE SHELL GAME

DEAR FOLKS:

Recently a woman wrote to us that she drew "funny-faces" on the hard-boiled eggs that she put in her husband's lunch box.

I tried it in my daughter's lunch box.

It caused so much laughter at school that now I make notes on the egg shell such as . . . "Take your pill," or "Don't forget to bring the spoon home . . . it's ours," or just plain "I Love You!"

I found that those magic felt markers are wonderful too. Or have you ever tried a crayon? Color lends a little variety in the lunch sack.

Heloise

SPRAY AND STAY

DEAR HELOISE:

What good is an empty spray bottle? The finger type with a plunger . . .

After combing a little girl's fly-away hair, try a spray or two of clear water from the spray bottle . . . her hair will stay put!

For little boys who need water on their hair to make it stay in the correct place, spray clear water from this bottle, rub into the scalp, and his hair combs into place and the child goes off with sprayed hair which dries quickly.

I keep this bottle of spray water handy in our bathroom.

Housewife

FOIL HANDLE

DEAR HELOISE:

When you are using that good old outside barbecue pit . . . if you will take your long fork, tear off a piece of foil, and crinkle it just below the handle, it will keep the heat and sparks from your hand when cooking hamburgers or those weenies!

This will look like a homemade umbrella! But you have no idea how satisfactory it is until you try it. Leave the foil opened up—like the top of an umbrella—and crinkle it to a point around the main part of the fork just below the handle.

Henry

LACE WORK

DEAR HELOISE:

Most children love to tie and untie their shoe laces. Mothers can save time and lost laces if they will tie a knot at the first eyelet of the shoe nearest the toe, and then lace the shoe. Baby can't possibly lose a lace this way!

Joan Beaulieu

READY TO WEAR

DEAR HELOISE:

When I iron my little girls' school dresses, I pin the matching socks and handkerchief to the dress. This saves time searching for them when getting children off to school early.

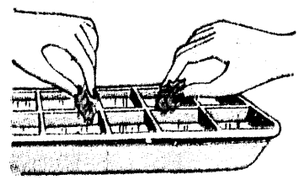
Mother

ICE CUBE ART

DEAR HELOISE:

To make fruit ice cubes for your punch bowl or parties—fill your ice cube trays half full of water.

When the cubes are partially frozen insert a fresh strawberry, a slice of lemon or orange rind or a colored cherry! You can even add a bit of mint leaves to the cubes.



Add some more water to fill the ice tray up and continue freezing. The leaves are a surprise as they are in the exact center of the ice cube!

Terry

* * *

And folks, did you know that you could even tint the ice cubes with cake coloring such as green when you put in mint, and these are beautiful when used in lemonade or lime juice . . . use red cake coloring for iced tea, etc.

If you don't have the time to insert the decorations just try coloring the ice anyway. It's real perk.

Heloise

This feature is written for you . . . the housewife and homemaker. If you have a hint, problem or suggestion you'd like to share . . . write to Heloise today in care of this newspaper.

GUESS Y'FIGGERED WE'D BE COMIN' AROUND FOR A LITTLE TALK, EH?

NATURALLY!

GUESS Y'HEARD ON TH' RADIO! CAR AN' FOUR O' OUR BOYS BLOWED INTO FOUR MILLION PIECES! THE COPS SAY IT WAS THEM SLOBS FROM TH' WEST SIDE HIT 'EM. TH' F. B. I. GENIUSES SAY I SET 'EM UP!

SO?

"SO"! THAT ALL Y'GOT T'SAY? YOU MADE THAT BOMB FOR US! NOW YOU TALK, AND IT BETTER BE GOOD!

JUST CLUMSY CURIOSITY!

WE BOMBERS ARE LIKE A GUILD: WE KEEP OUR SECRETS. YOUR BOYS WERE TOLD WHERE TO PLACE THE BOMB; THE LITTLE SWITCH TO TURN! THEY WERE TOLD NOT TO FOOL WITH IT!

BUT THEY HAD TO SEE HOW I MADE THE THING. SO-O, ONE OF THEM TAMPERED WITH IT! NOBODY TAMPERS WITH ONE OF MY BOMBS AND LIVES!

YEAH! THAT FIGGERS! Y'KNOW WE HAD AN AWFUL GOOD REPORT ON YOU, MAX, FROM OUR BOYS, FROM WHEN YOU WAS WORKIN' IN SERBIA! AS FOR THEM FOUR MUSCLE-HEADS, THEY CAN BE REPLACED!

THEY WAS GETTIN' TOO BIGMOUTH, ANYWAY! HA! ALWAYS A BRIGHT SIDE, EH? GOTTA MEET TH' TOAD NOW! DON'T WORRY, MAX! I'LL GIVE HIM A GOOD REPORT ON YOU! C'M'ON, BOYS!

Solons Express Confidence In Economy

No Downturn In Sight Claim 2 Party Leaders

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sens. Everett M. Dirksen and George A. Smathers are confident the economy will continue operating in high gear even if there is no tax cut until 1964.

Dirksen, Senate Republican leader, and Smathers, Floridian who is secretary of the Democratic conference, agreed in an interview that there is no economic downturn in sight.

President Kennedy has been pressing for Senate action on the House-passed $11-billion tax reduction bill to spur business. Smathers remained hopeful there could be action this year but Dirksen said it won't come until 1964.

The Republican leader said he thought it was rather thi and tenuous to contend that tax reduction would have an immediate effect on the economy. He indicated he is not worried by the delay in action.

NOT DONE

Smathers said he doesn't believe there will be an economic downturn this year. But he said business leaders and economists remained concerned that if taxes are not cut soon "we would begin to experience a downturn in the early part of next year."

Their views, in brief, on other issues in connection with the tax bill now in the hands of the Senate Finance Committee, of which both are members:

Tying spending limitation to bill—

Dirksen—Exactly how you will enforce it? How do you set it up in order to give it real effect? My experience with ceilings over a long period of time leads me to believe that you have some difficulty there.

Smathers—We are the ones here in the Congress who will determine the amount of appropriations. It's not done in the executive branch of the government.

Is the measure a rich man's bill?

Smathers—This is not true. The highest percentage of tax reduction is in that lowest group of income taxpayers.

GOP Takes Aim At Old District Of Lyndon Johnson

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas' 10th Congressional District — which Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson represented for many years—will be the target of a Republican drive to gain another seat in the U.S. House of Representatives.

In the mid-December runoff election Republican Jim Dobbs, 38, will face Democrat J. J. (Jake) Pickle, 49, for the seat vacated by Homer Thornberry, a Democrat, who resigned to accept a federal judgeship.

Unofficial tabulations in Saturday's special election gave Pickle, a moderate Democrat and former aide to Johnson, 14,493 votes.

Dobbs, who quit his job as an announcer for the conservative radio program "Life Line" to make the race, received 13,720. Jack Ritter, a liberal Democrat, garnered 13,112 votes in the close three-man race.

WILL WRITE

Two of Texas' 22 representatives and one of its senators are Republicans.

Dobbs will be facing an uphill fight in the runoff. The district is traditionally Democratic.

"We are very pleased that a Goldwater Republican like Jim Dobbs has made a runoff against the hand-picked candidate of Lyndon Johnson," said Peter O'Donnell, state GOP chairman and head of a national movement to draft Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., for the Republican presidential nomination.

Pickle, who served as a secretary to Johnson and assisted in several of his campaigns, said, "Democrats are in the vast majority in our district and I am certain they will unite and work together for an overwhelming victory next month."

Republicans won special elections in Dallas County for two seats in the state House to bring their total to 11 in the 181-member body.

Texas voters in Saturday's election rejected, 303,763 to 237,524, a constitutional amendment that would have abolished the poll tax as a prerequisite for voting.

Steaming Debate Looms Over Latin Alliance Proposal

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — A hot ministerial debate is looming over a proposal to give Latin members of the Alliance for Progress a bigger voice in the administration of Washington's multibillion-dollar program. The plan, already approved by U.S. and Latin technical experts, came before top - level representatives of the 20-nation alliance at a conference of the Inter-American Economic and Social Council opening today. U.S. Undersecretary of State W. Averell Harriman was expected to endorse the plan.

The idea behind the proposed change is to minimize the program's Yankee overtones in an effort to make it more palatable to the recipients. The alliance, developed under President Kennedy's administration, has met stiff resistance from the dominant conservative class in most countries because it cails for reforms that would curtail their privileges.

NEW SETUP

The technical experts recommended that the council establish a permanent agency called the Inter-American Committee for the Alliance for Progress. It would act as a clearing house for alliance projects.

The agency, with headquarters in Washington, would consist of seven members selected by the Inter-American Economic and Social Council.

Brazil was reported opposed to the proposed new setup.

Several nations suggested that Brazil — which has received more than $752 million in foreign aid but has little to show for it—is afraid the other Latin-American nations will be less sympathetic to her parennial plight than the foreign money sources she has cultivated.

Harriman came to Sao Paulo after conferences in Argentina on that nation's plan to annul oil contracts of U.S. and other foreign firms.

Authoritative sources in Buenos Aires said Harriman left without assurances that the contracts would not be canceled.

An American source there said: "We did not even find out in our talks with government officials exactly why Argentina objects to the contracts.

Following Air Balloon Proves A Bit Costly

OLATHE, Kan. (AP) —A hot-air balloon made a 45-minute flight over Johnson County Sunday and landed on Jack W. Meyers' sod farm.

Persons in about 10 cars followed the slow - moving balloon. They opened a gate and drove over Meyers' bluegrass sod to the landing site.

Meyers, irate at the damage to his sod, locked the gate and demanded $10 from each driver before he would let them out of the field. They paid.

Scotland Yard On Trail Of Blackmailers

LONDON (AP)—The mysterious death of a beautiful brunette has put Scotland Yard on the trail of a big blackmail ring preying on prominent Britons, police sources reported today.

The girl was known here as Julie Molley, 24, an Italian-born dentist's assistant who was a part-time model. Her body was found nine days ago sprawled over a four - poster bed in a rooming house just as guests were arriving for a party.

Near the body was an empty drug bottle. In her room detectives found two diaries giving the names of scores of men prominent in business and society.

10 WEEKS AGO

The sources said police seized more than 3,000 photographs showing Julie with men in compromising positions, and several hundred letters. Some of the letters were said to have been written by army offices, civil servants, physicians and show business people.

The informants said she already was under police scrutiny at the time of her death. Ten weeks ago a prominent London professional man with friends in high places complained he was being blackmailed by her.

Only now, said police sources, has the extent of the ring been uncovered.

They said the woman would place advertisements in two newspapers offering a certain brand of raincoat for sale. The advertisements looked innocent enough except to perverts who recognized the brand name as a code word.

The advertisements brought stacks of would-be buyers. Some were invited to meet Julie and were photographed with her.

Some did not get to meet her.

BULL FUNERAL

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Funeral services will be held today for James H. Bull, 73, retired president of Avondale Shipyards, Inc., near here. He died Saturday.

BULLETINS

Operation Begun

CLEVELAND (AP) — An operation which doctors say is necessary to save the life of 14-year-old Christine Simko, who is suffering from cancer of the hip, was started today at Metropolitan General Hospital.

Reds Kill Three

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Pro-Communist terrorists invaded a provincial hospital today, killed three persons in a blazing gun battle and took out a wounded captured Communist leader.

LONDON (AP)— Sir Alec Douglas-Home went through the formality of being elected leader of the Conservative party today as the prime minister prepared for the reopening Tuesday of Parliament.

Re-Hash Charge

BERLIN (UPI) — Radio Moscow has accused Western allied convoys of illegally trying to evade Soviet controls on the highway to Berlin. It warned that a German peace treaty which would "normalize" conditions in West Berlin could not be postponed indefinitely.

Rockefeller Is Unchanged On Right-To-Work

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, says he has not changed his position opposing a federal right-to-work law.

The New York governor wrote the National Right to Work Committee setting out his views in response to a letter from it. The committee made Rockefeller's letter public today.

Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, a potential opponent to Rockefeller for the GOP presidential nomination, has introduced a bill that would outlaw what he calls compulsory union membership except in states with laws permitting union shop contracts.

NOT CHANGED

Under such a union shop contract, an employe must join the union after he is hired.

Rockefeller's letter to Reed Larson, executive vice president of the committee, said: "A federal 'right-to-work' law would only serve to project more federal intervention into our labor and management problems thus whittling down and interfering with the rights of both labor and management to conduct responsible collective bargaining."

Rockefeller's letter was in reply to one by Larson commending Rockefeller for supporting "the right of states to outlaw compulsory unionism."

Rockefeller said, "I have not changed my position with respect to so-called 'right-to-work' laws. Apparently erroneous information has reached you."

TWIN CITY CHIT-CHAT

League Meeting

A general meeting of the League of Women Voters will be held here tonight with Dr. Waddie Moore of Northeast Louisiana State College, delivering an address.

According to Mrs. Elizabeth Manhein, president of the League, the public is invited to attend the meeting at the Rendezvous. The dinner meeting will begin at 7 p.m. and the talk will start at 7:30 p.m.

Dr. Moore's topic will be "Two-Party System."

Good Reason

Hunting season makes West Monroe businessman George Tyner recall the days when he was a boy in Mississippi, and went hunting with an Indian called old Ike. "White man doesn't have any sense," old Ike told Tyner. The Indian refused to explain why for a

Police Report $200,000 Gem Theft

NEW YORK (AP) — Three men posing as detectives forced their way into a Bronx apartment today and stole $30,000 worth of jewelry. It was the third large gem theft here in four days.

The robbers knocked two women to the floor after entering the apartment. Then they swept up the jewelry and fled.

The women were Rhoda Toronto of 111 Overbrook Rd., Birmingham, Ala., and her mother, Mrs. Jack Rubin, 63.

Rubin, head of a jewelry firm was taking a shower at the time of the robbery. He emerged just as the trio fled and hurled an empty bottle at them down the apartment steps.

A $200,000 gem theft from a real estate man and his wife was reported to police Sunday night.

Last Friday a group of gunmen, posing as police, stopped a jewelry messenger station wagon and stole an estimated $3 million worth of jewelry. About three-fourths of the loot later was found, however, in the abandoned station wagon.

Rubin, victim of the latest theft, is president of J. Howard, Inc.

Mrs. Toronto had been visiting her parents. Several pieces of jewelry, including an emerald-cut diamond ring worth more than $10,000, were taken from her bedroom.

Police said the three men pulled several rings off the fingers of the two women.

Clear, Cool, Dry Forecast

A cool, clear and dry week is in store for the Ark-La-Miss, according to the weather forecast.

The low pressure system that threatened to bring rain to this area over the weekend moved eastward along the Gulf Coast and only areas of light rains were recorded.

Fair

Clear nights have produced cool temperatures but minimums have remained well above the freezing mark.

High today will be 70 to 75 with an overnight low of 40 to 44. Northerly winds will be 10 to 18 m.p.h. High in Monroe Sunday was 75 and the overnight low was 50.

BEATEN MAN DIES

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Edward Long, 80, beaten by two Negroes during a robbery attempt on Oct. 8, died Sunday.

Long told police two Negroes beat him with a bottle, a pipe and their fists at his firm, Long's Plating and Polishing Works.

Police said one Negro, Lawrence Clovis, 37, was arrested and charged with attempted murder and robbery of Long on Oct. 9. A second Negro was still being sought.

IN GULF WATERS

'Copters Rescue Distress Victims

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Coast Guard helicopters scurried out over the Gulf of Mexico and connecting waters since before dawn today, rescuing at least four persons from vessels in distress. One chopper plucked three Alabama residents from the 70-foot fishing vessel Queen Bee aground and breaking up in Northwest Pass where the Mississippi River meets the gulf.

A spokesman identified the three as James L. Borsage, 28, Henry Borsage, 23, and Charlie Waters, all of (Rt. 2, Box 588) Theodore, Ala. He said the Queen Bee was owned by Joseph S. Allen, Galveston, Tex.

DRIFTING BARGE

The helicopter deposited the rescued and unhurt Alabamans in Venice, La., about 3 a.m., the spokesman said.

Small craft warnings have been flying along the entire Gulf Coast since Saturday. Winds at 55 knots and swells 12-15 feet were reported.

About an hour later, the helicopter and another one rushed to assist the 300-foot dredge Sherry, anchored about four miles northwest of Breton Island. The dredge, with about 30 persons aboard, reported it was taking on water and sinking.

One copter dropped a pump and picked up crewman John M. Smith, 44, Poydras, La., who had a broken arm. The other searched for a drifting derrick barge with nine of the Sherry's crewmen aboard.

The nine went aboard the barge, then tied to the dredge, to lighten the sinking Sherry turned it loose. The helicopter located the barge and directed a crewboat to it to retrieve the men.

Smith was taken to a New Orleans area hospital. The Sherry reported it was getting pumped out and needed no further assistance.

A helicopter was still searching for another crewboat, the Brenda L, which left Cocodrie, early today and was overdue returning.

Two Coast Guard cutters with craft in tow waited off Grand Isle, La., for high seas to subside to bring them into port. One tow was a 21-foot outboard and the other the motor vessel Belle of Portugal.

Lonely Resting Place For Britons

TERRELL, Tex. (AP) — A few people in this small Kaufman County town still remember the British boys who never got the chance to fight in World War II.

About 30 Terrell citizens gathered in the Oakland cemetery Sunday to honor 20 British Royal Air Force cadets killed while 1,470 RAF trainees learned to fly here in a 90-day wartime cram course.

Bertha and Virginia Brewer, two sisters who have helped perpetuate the annual services, said that in the 22 years since the first cadet went down, only two sets of parents and one cadet's sister have visited the cemetery.

"It's been alonely resting place for the boys," they said.

OVER BISHOP RESIGNATIONS

Catholics Split On New Issue

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Bishops at the Vatican Ecumenical Council argued anew today over reform of the Roman Curia and split largely on a new issue: whether aged bishops should be forced to resign their sees. Francis Cardinal Spellman of New York, alluding to a flareup that occurred in the council Friday when a German cardinal called for basic reform of the curia's Holy Office, told the 2,300 council fathers that they had no power to propose modifications or corrections in curia procedures.

"We can only make suggestions and recommendations," he was paraphrased as saying by council press spokesmen.

The curia is the Roman Catholic Church's administrative organ.

A number of prelates at the day's meeting in St. Peter's called for mandatory retirements after the age of 75 for the general well-being of individual dioceses and the Church as a whole. Other council fathers raised strong objections, claiming some bishops would have no means of support and no place to go.

The question of curia reform and the suggestion for bishop retirement provisions came as the prelates resumed debate, after a weekend recess, on a draft schema on "Bishops and Diocesan Government."

At one point in the debate, Carlo Cardinal Confaldnieri cautioned the council fathers to keep the dispute from getting too heated. He suggested the prelates use milder terms. The cardinal is a member of the curia.

Leftists Hurl Charges Of Gov't Neglect

600 Persons Killed In Mine, Train Disasters

TOKYO (AP) — Leftist cries of government neglect and the smell of funeral incense hung over Japan today as bereaved families arranged services for more than 600 persons killed in a coal mine explosion and triple train crash.

Socialist and Democratic Socialist politicians seized on the double disaster as a major campaign issue in national parliamentary elections only 10 days off.

The leftists held Premier Yayato Ikeda's conservative government responsible for the tragedies, charging the accident resulted from the government's "one-sided policy to protect monopolistic capitalist classes" at the expense of workers' lives.

The coal dust explosion in the mine at Omuta, on the southern island of Kyushu, killed 449 miners, injured about 450 and left 7 unaccounted for, the Mitsui Mining Co. said. Police said, however, they had counted 452 bodies.

SECOND CRASH

The train wreck six hours later and 600 miles to the north killed 162 persons, including William Scott, 28, of Colorado Springs, Colo., who was studying in Tokyo. At least 70 were injured.

Two persons were injured today in another train wreck. A slow-moving passenger train rammed another passenger train that had halted half a mile out of the Hiroshima station.

Although the pressure was on Ikeda, the president of Japan national Railways, Reisuke Ishida, said he was accepting full responsibility for Saturday's disaster and would resign.

The pileup near Tokyo was the second three-train crash in 18

Veterans Day Observance Led By President

WASHINGTON (AP) — Under a cloudless blue sky, President Kennedy placed a red, white and blue wreath at the Tomb of Unknowns today to honor the nation's war veterans living and dead.

Several thousand spectators crowded about the area at Arlington National Cemetary as the hatless President strode with Gen. David M. Shoup, the Marine commandant, to the Tomb.

While the crowd stood silent, the President, helped by an Army sergeant, placed the wreath in front of the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and between the Unknowns of World War II and Korea.

His somber gray-stripped suit contrasted with the bright red and white carnations and red white and blue ribbon.

Then, as a bugler played taps, the President stood at attention.

Arrayed behind the President were his military aides, veterans Administrator John Gleason and Luther Skaggs, head of the Medal of Honor Society.

Also present were Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, and representatives from all the services.

The ceremony was at 11 a.m. (EST), the hour the guns stopped firing along World War I's Western Front just 45 years ago.

Shoup, who won the Medal of Honor in World War II, was chosen to deliver the chief address.

STATE ROUNDUP

Accidents Claim Twelve Lives

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Accidents in Louisiana during the weekend took 12 lives, including five in traffic, five in a fire and two in an oil field rig collapse.

A two-car, head-on collision Saturday night near Pleasant Hill, in Sabine Parish, killed four persons. They were Willie Lovick Jr., of Marthaville, Bobby Palmer of Belmont, and E. W. Lonell and Eunice B. Mosley, both Pleasant Hill Negroes. Four others were seriously injured.

An oil rig toppled near Raceland during a windstorm Saturday, killing two men working on the rig. They were Jerry Breaux, 23, of Gray and Bobby Ellis, 31, of Houma.

Fire swept through a Negro home Friday night near Ruston, burning to death five children of Mr. and Mrs. Hosea Baldwin Sr. The children ranged in age from 3 to 10. Cause of the blaze was undetermined.

Clifton Lord, 23, Farmerville Negro, was killed by an apparent hit - run motorist Friday night near Farmerville.

Brennan's Buys Gulf Coast Spot

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — The Brennan family, owner of Brennan's French restaurant in New Orleans, announced today it has purchased Friendship House on the Mississippi gulf coast.

Jim Meyers, owner of the Mississippi city restaurant, and Owen Brennan Jr. and Dick Brennan, representing the New Orleans restaurateurs, said the Brennans will begin operating Friendship House Tuesday.

The property, located across U.S. 90 from the beachfront near Biloxi, includes tourist cottages and parking area.
